TO REST CASE MONDAY

John Turner, 20, Proves Star Witness for Prosecution in Sensational Hearing on Millionaire's Death.

BY TURNER JONES,
Constitution Staff Correspondent.

Macon, Ga., December 13.—(Special.)—The case which the state claims killed Frederick D. Shepard, her son, and administered in Mrs. Annie Cutts' kitchen the morning the millionaire peach grower left there, according to the astounding story told the court Saturday, the fifth day of the preliminary hearing on the Shepard case.

Before Mrs. F. Eugene Elmer, former wife of Shepard, Mrs. John Henry, her sister, Ernest Hopson, her son, and Mrs. Annie Cutts, the four defendants in the case, John Turner, a 20-year-old farm boy, declared that Mrs. Cutts had asked him if he would do the work for her. "She said that if I would, we'd all be happy," he testified.

It was believed tonight the defense probably will attempt to show Mrs. Cutts as irresponsible, from a physical or medical standpoint, and in this way invalidate testimony against her.

Solicitor General Garrett stated after the hearing today that the state probably will rest its case Monday, after introducing three or four more witnesses. The defense was greatly disappointed that the case was not rested this afternoon. These in close but official touch predicted that all of the defendants, with the possible exception of Mrs. Cutts, will be granted bail, and that a special sitting of the grand jury will be called at the conclusion of this hearing.

A significant piece of testimony given by T. F. Anderson, proprietor of a Perry hotel, who was called today, was that Mrs. Elmer (then Mrs. Hopson) received mail addressed to her as Mrs. Pauline Shepard.

PURSE-SNATCHER IS POOR PICKER

Chicago, December 15.—Out of thousands of shoppers thronging State street, Stanley Zepeck, a purse snatcher, chose Mrs. W. A. Middleton, aged 50, as a victim. He did not know she was a teacher of physical culture.

After demonstrating a few jiu jitsu tricks and regaining her purse, Mrs. Middleton surrendered him to police.

IN CITY SATURDAY

Mail Carrier Victims.

The epidemic of highway robberies prevalent in Atlanta during the past few days was augmented by seven daring holdups Saturday, in which shot guns, rifles and pistols played a conspicuous part.

The most sensational reported to the police was pulled off about 7:30 o'clock Saturday night, when three young white men with handkerchiefs tied over their faces in true western style, entered the cigar and soda store at 142 Angier avenue and at the point of pistols forced three people to hold their hands above their heads while the cash drawer and store were rifled and robbed.

More than $15 in money and several checks were taken. This is the second time this place was robbed within the period of one week.

The proprietor of this place, S. H. Cohen, and his wife and Mrs. O. J. Taylor, who lives with them at 280 Washington street, were in the store at the time the bandits entered. Mr. Cohen, who was at the front in front of the store, was the first covered with the robbers' guns. Mrs. Cohen was in the rear, and as she started toward the front she quickly sized up the situation, slipped her diamond rings from her fingers and beautiful pins from her waist and threw them underneath a table, thus saving them from the bandits' eyes.

Police Are Rushed.
Call Officers Grover C. Cain and J. W. McWilliams, who investigated the robbery, made a record run to the scene in the latter's high-powered car, which he has pressed into the police service voluntarily for the purpose of "covering territory."

A thorough search of the neighborhood and vicinity was made in an effort to locate the footprints without avail.

In all, seven hold-ups in which pistols or shotguns figured, were reported to the police by an early hour Sunday morning, all being staged under sensational circumstances.

Shortly after midnight S. V. Johnson, of 4 Ella street, reported to the police.

PROTECTIVE TARIFF TO HELP FARMERS READY FOR HOUSE

Cents a Pound on Long Staple Cotton Included in List.

Washington, December 15.—Framing of an emergency tariff designed to protect twenty farm products was completed today by the house ways and means committee. The measure probably will be presented to the house Monday with a request for action on it the following day.

The bill was designated as the "Fordney emergency tariff." As drawn, it would be effective for one year from date of passage.

The measure was agreed to after six hours' discussion by the full membership of the committee, which elected to honor its chairman by giving the bill his name. Mr. Fordney will prepare and introduce the formal draft. The committee broadened the original project of senate and house leaders in joint conference. The bill was said to have been planned as a comprehensive measure to shield agriculturists from further price declines.

Products and Rates.
Products to which tariff protection would apply and the rates agreed upon under the committee bill were as follows:

Wheat, 20 cents a bushel; wool in the grease, 15 cents a pound, skinned 20 cents a pound; mutton and lamb, 2 1/2 cents a pound; cattle, 30 per cent. ad valorem; wheat flour, 30 per cent. ad valorem; corn, 15 cents a bushel; sheep, $1 a head if under one year old and $2 a head if over one year; onions, 40 cents a bushel; peanuts, two cents a pound; rice, 2 cents a pound if cleaned and 1 1/2 cents a pound if uncleaned; potatoes, 25 cents a bushel; long staple cotton, 7 cents a pound, and cotton seed, coconut, peanut and soy bean oils, 20 cents a gallon.

The committee asked the treasury department to compile a schedule of rates on wool products, which would be equal to the rates applied to wool. This schedule is expected to be ready early Monday for introduction.

Hard Cider Legal If Made at Home, Is Palmer Opinion

Attorney General Construes Prohibition Enforcement Act as Excepting Cider Made in Home From Penalties.

Washington, December 15.—Use of cider in the home by its manufacturer, even after it has become intoxicating by fermentation, is lawful ad without out the bounds of the prohibition enforcement act according to an opinion submitted to the secretary of the treasury by Attorney General Palmer, made public today.

The opinion is in direct conflict with the regulations of the bureau of internal revenue which state that home made cider must be "non-intoxicating in fact," although not necessarily less than one-half of one per cent of alcohol.

Secretary Houston asked for an opinion as to whether the term "non-intoxicating, cider and fruit juices" means non-intoxicating in fact or containing less than one-half of one per cent of alcohol. The phrase occurs in section 29 of the prohibition act which permits the manufacture of non-intoxicating cider for use in the home without a permit.

Defines Opinion.
In answer, the attorney general held that the expression meant contained no more than one-half of one per cent of alcohol.

MEASURE TO REVIVE WAR FINANCE BODY PASSED BY HOUSE

Senate Resolution Adopted in Amended Form by Vote of 212 to 61 and Now Goes to Conference.

Washington, December 15.—The senate resolution to revive the war finance corporation as a measure of relief for farmers was adopted by the house today in amended form, by a vote of 212 to 61.

It now goes to conference for adjustment with the senate measure. The house struck out Section 2 of the senate resolutions stating the opinion of congress that federal reserve banks should allow liberal credits to farmers. The vote was 132 in favor to 20 against on the motion to strike out.

The final vote came after five hours of debate.

Called Class Legislation.
Chairman McFadden, of the banking committee, leading the opposition, characterized it as class legislation, which would lead to inflation, and charged that its proponents had deceived the house into believing it would help them.

"The farmers have been deceived," Mr. McFadden said. "They have been told this resolution will help them."

GAMBLERS CAUSED SUICIDE OF SON OF EX-GOVERNOR

Atlanta Wire-Tappers Fleeced Son of Former Louisiana Executive Out of $50,000, Solicitor General Hears.

DESPERATE YOUNG MAN TOOK LIFE IN MEMPHIS

Carolina Doctor, Swindled
Out of $10,000 in Million-Dollar Fraud,
Added to List of Syndicate Victims.

With the grand jury investigation of "wire-tapping, swindling and gambling" proceeding to its final stages, it became known Saturday that Solicitor John A. Boykin has information to the effect that the son of ex-governor Blanchard, of Louisiana, was fleeced out of $50,000 by the alleged "gang" which has been operating in Atlanta; that the crowd steered young Blanchard to Jacksonville, Fla., where the money was collected from him, and then dropped him, after which he went to Memphis, Tenn., and committed suicide.

Solicitor Boykin Saturday was making every effort to get the data on this information with a view of calling additional witnesses for jury examination.

In addition to this information, the solicitor's office has received complaint from a Dr. Edwards, whose home is in one of the Carolinas, who says that he was separated from $10,000 in the month of September, after a visit to Atlanta. Solicitor Boykin refused to divulge the initials and the address of the Dr. Edwards in question.

The arrest of R. W. Eubanks, chauffeur for one member of the alleged gambling syndicate, was a result of the investigation of the jury before that body reached the tower under $100,000 bond. The nature of the charge against him is not known.

"Exchanges" Located.
It has been definitely established that the men who have been "touched" for anywhere from $10 to $100,000 by the syndicate have been located at the four "exchanges" were located at 25 West Peachtree street, the Flatiron building, 45 Carnegie way, and the last on the second floor of a building at the corner of Peachtree and Auburn avenue. These four places have been identified by victims as the places where they lost their money.

According to a number of victims who have communicated with the solicitor, and who have related their experiences after the loss of the amount of money that they lost, it is the belief of the solicitor that men from every part of the country contributed to the treasury of the gambling gang and that over a million dollars was lost here by visitors.

The "exchanges" who have been located by the solicitor, that they were fleeced here are Wade Lamar and H. C. Holley, of Alken, S. C., who appeal to the solicitor and complaint that they had lost $11,000 in a wire-tapping scheme operated at the Westinghouse address, caused raids to be conducted by the solicitor on several alleged gambling places here, and resulted in the grand jury probe. Alben Powers, alleged gambler and member of the gang, was caught by Holley, Powers was tried recently and convicted of the gambling question has been extensive. After the probe was started, developments came to light and the jury has been in continuous session longer than any grand jury sitting in Fulton county in its history.

Lost $20,000.
J. A. Tutton, of Cherokee county, Alabama, told the solicitor that he lost $20,000 on a fake Studbaker stock, while N. L. Davis, of Lafayette, Ind., is said to have been fleeced out of $5,000 on a fake race horse bet. Many other victims have appeared before the solicitor and grand jury.

It was indicated Saturday that a large number of indictments will be returned this week by the grand jury before that body recesses for Christmas day. The jury will be in session the first three days of the week and will resume its investigation immediately after Christmas.

The deliberations of the jury on the gambling question have been extensive. After the probe was started, developments came to light and the jury has been in continuous session longer than any grand jury sitting in Fulton county in its history.

Buenos Aires, December 15.—Reports from Mendoza province late tonight estimated the dead in the earthquake at 150.

Buenos Aires, December 13.—Eight persons were killed and more than twenty injured by an earthquake which occurred at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the village of La Valle, province of Mendoza, according to dispatches received today, which report the village was virtually destroyed.

The earthquake was felt in several provinces, where considerable damage, which has not yet been estimated, was caused. La Valle apparently was the center of the disturbance. The houses of the village collapsed and a number of crevices were opened in the streets, through which hot water is gushing.

Telegraphic communications with some sections have been interrupted. Latest messages indicate that the provinces of Mendoza, San Juan, La Rioja, San Luis and Cordoba felt the shocks.

QUAKE IN ITALY
KILLS TWENTY-TWO.

Rome, December 15.—New earthquake shocks have completed the destruction of the Albanian village of Tepeleni, 32 miles southeast of Avlona, according to reports from Brindisi. Twenty-two persons are known to have lost their lives. Exact details of the situation have not been learned owing to the interruption of communications between Avlona and the stricken village. Serious earthquakes took place in the Tepeleni district early this month, an area of 40 square miles being shaken and many villages reduced to ruins.

Advices state that Commander Pagliaro, his two daughters, 17 sailors and two non-commissioned officers lost their lives on the island of Saseno, at the entrance of the Bay of Avlona, when the latest earthquake took place. The tremor was accompanied by a tidal wave, and landslides buried the house in which the commander lived. It is said the hospital on the island of Saseno has disappeared.

Dalton Farmers In Pistol Duel; Both Are Killed

Decide to Adjust Differences in Old-Time Way, and Shoot Each Other Dead at Secret Meeting.

Dalton, Ga., December 13.—(Special.)—As a culmination of bitter feeling resulting from criminal trials in this county and in Alabama, Jim Sloan and W. V. Bishop, prominent farmers residing near Tilton, nine miles south of here, adjusted their differences in an impromptu duel this afternoon which resulted in both being killed.

Bishop was one of the defendants in a recent habeas corpus proceeding instituted in Whitfield superior court.

Jim Sloan was not a party to the proceeding, but was an interested neighbor and the killing is supposed to have been the result of ill feeling aroused over the case.

Excitement Caused.
Considerable excitement has been created by the killings and further trouble is feared. The sheriff has been telegraphed for and will go to Tilton to investigate the situation. Pistols were the weapons selected by the combatants, to adjust their differences. It is stated that a brother of Sloan participated in the deadly affray, but details are meager, as there were no other eye-witnesses.

REFUSES REQUEST THAT MATTER BE SENT TO COURTS FOR ADJUDICATION

This Afternoon's Free Concert for Charity Called Off by Associated Charities When Formal Notice Is Issued by the Chief of Police.

VIOLATION OF RIGHTS AND CHRISTIAN SPIRIT, SAYS DR. ASHBY JONES;

Action Taken by Chief Beavers Upon Receipt of Letter From John A.
Manget and After Conference
With the City Attorney.

Officials of the Associated Charities called off the announced concert Sunday afternoon at the Howard theater for their usual Christmas "Opportunities," when informed Saturday afternoon that Chief Beavers had served formal notice that if the concert was held as advertised, he would consider it his duty to arrest whoever was in charge, and after the first arrest, which would lodge the question in court for adjudication, if the doors were not promptly closed, the police would forcibly close the building to the public if it took every member of the delinquent to carry out his orders.

When this notice was served, Chief Beavers was asked if it would not be satisfactory to make merely the arrest this afternoon so that the question might be passed upon by the courts.

"No," he replied. "That would be tampering with the question, for it would be absurd to make an arrest and then let the violation of the law go unintercepted on."

Shows at Auditorium.

On being asked why the auditorium could be used for an entertainment today, while it would be a violation of the law to hold a concert for charitable purposes at the Howard, Chief Beavers said the difference was that it was specifically provided in the city ordinance that motion picture houses or similar places of amusement customarily operated for profit could not be opened for public services on Sunday, while nothing is said about other public gathering places where motion pictures are not regularly displayed. This is the reason, he said, why the law does not refer to the auditorium.

The chief was then asked why he had allowed similar gatherings to be held in Atlanta recently and during the period since the law was passed, and he replied that these affairs had not been brought to his attention, or he would have taken the same action as in the Associated Charities case. The attention of Chief Beavers was called to the fact that many of these affairs have been extensively advertised and had gathered crowds of several thousand people, but he reiterated his statement that he had not known they were to be held.

He emphasized at this point the fact that he was a hearty supporter of the Associated Charities in its work, and that he was sorry today's entertainment came without the letter of the law, although he admitted he had not acquainted himself with the nature of the entertainment nor the fact that one of the most prominent ministers of the city was to make the principal address, before issuing his notification that the entertainment would not be permitted to be held.

Directors Cancel Concert.
After the directors of the Associated Charities met last night, they decided to cancel the concert.

The Safety Sign on glass-packed foods

When you buy foods in glass tumblers and jars, look for the above trade-mark on the Cap. It's your most dependable safety sign. It means that the packer has provided the most reliable seal possible to procure.

Glass, with this trade-marked Cap, is the best container. It leaves no opportunity for deterioration—all the original flavor and purity are retained.

When buying, be constantly on the lookout for this trade-mark. Accept no glass-packed foods without it.

Associated Charities had been informed of the announcement of Chief Beavers, following a consultation between him and the city attorney, officials of the association announced that, while they regretted the concert had been construed as being in violation of the letter of the law, they did not desire to do anything that might be in conflict with either the letter or spirit of any ordinance, and for this reason the entertainment was being canceled.

Forrest Adair, Sr., stated that he regretted that it had been seen fit to call the city's attention to the fact that the concert was possibly a technical violation of the law, and thereby prevent many people who are suffering from receiving aid.

"It is a pity," he said, "that the concert cannot be held when so many people would be benefited by the results. Even though the affair may be a technical violation of the ordinance, I think it is a shame that it became necessary to call it off when so many people are suffering, and so many could be aided by the money contributed by Atlantans."

Dr. Jones' Statement.
That the same observance of the Sabbath was threatened by the extreme attitude being taken by some, was the opinion expressed by Dr. M. Ashby Jones, pastor of the Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church, who was to have been the first speaker on the program, when he was notified of the necessity for calling off the entertainment.

"This action," declared Dr. Jones, "is a violation not only of the liberties of our people but a violation of the Christian spirit for which I stand. I fear that extreme attitude taken by some is hurting the general preservation of the Christian Sabbath by the taking of the Spirit of Christ out of the day. I would suggest to those who have been instrumental in making it necessary that this charity concert be called off, that they read in their Bibles the answer of Christ when He was asked whether it was lawful to heal on the Sabbath."

Mayor Key Saturday made the following statement:

"My attention has been called to the opening of the Howard theater tomorrow, Sunday, and also my attention has been called to the Sunday closing law of 1917, and it is my opinion that the opening of this theater, however laudable the purpose, is in violation of the ordinance."

Letter of Manget.
Mr. Manget's letter to the mayor and Chief Beavers follows:

"Dear Sirs:
"The Howard theater is advertised to be open Sunday afternoon for charity. No matter how good the cause to which they propose to donate the money raised, this is positively against the city ordinance, introduced by Councilman W. F. Buchanan, and passed by council in 1917.
"The passage of this ordinance was after a long hard fight had been made to close half a dozen theaters in this city that operated on Sunday, under the guise of charity. It developed that charity received a very small per cent of the receipts from most of these entertainments, and the good people of Atlanta through council, put a stop to Sunday shows.

"The proposition and argument for opening the Howard theater tomorrow is identical with the case of other theaters which were closed by the ordinance referred to.

"I call on you and urgently request that you forbid the opening of the Howard theater in violation of the city law."

Text of Ordinance.
The law which it is claimed by Mr. Manget and Chief Beavers prohibited the charity concert is as follows:

"Be it ordained by the mayor and general council of the city of Atlanta, as follows:
"Section 1. That from and after the passage of this ordinance it shall be unlawful for the owner or operator or manager or person in charge of any place of amusement which is customarily operated for profit, such as a theater, moving picture theaters, or similar places of amusement, to open their doors on Sundays for the purpose of allowing shows, concert, moving pictures, vaudeville or amusements of any kind therein either for a stated price or free, or where collections are taken at or within the doors, in the name of charity or any other purpose, or in any name whatever.

"Sec. 2. That any person violating the provisions of this ordinance shall, on conviction in the recorder's court, be punished by a fine not exceeding two hundred dollars or sentenced to work on the city streets for not exceeding thirty days, either or both penalties to be inflicted in the discretion of the recorder.

"Sec. 3. That all ordinances and parts of ordinances in conflict with this ordinance be and the same are hereby repealed.

"Adopted April 2, 1917.
"Approved April 4, 1917.
"ASA G. CANDLE, Mayor."

Howard's Generosity.
Through the courtesy and generosity of Troup Howard, of the Howard theater, it will be recalled the orchestra of the playhouse tendered its services for the benefit of the usual Christmas "opportunities" fund of the association. There were to be no motion pictures shown during the afternoon, according to the plans, or any other feature offered, the entertainment being confined strictly to a concert. No admission was to have been charged, but a voluntary offering for the Associated Charities fund was planned. Dr. M. Ashby Jones and Forrest Adair, Sr., were to have made the addresses of the occasion.

So great has been the rush at the large theater since it was opened last Monday only a small part of Atlantans have been able to enjoy the playing of the large orchestra, which is under the direction of Enrico Leide and is composed of leading musicians from all over the world. Thousands have been turned away each day, and it was suggested by friends of the Associated Charities that it would be an excellent idea to give the masses an opportunity of hearing the great orchestra in a free concert for the Christmas fund of the organization.

When the matter was brought to Mr. Howard's attention he promptly acquiesced to the use of the theater without charge, and all arrangements for the concert were accordingly completed. On Saturday morning, however, John A. Manget communicated with the chief of police, objecting to the concert. As above stated, the chief immediately took steps to prevent the concert, and the officials of the Associated Charities upon being notified of his action, immediately announced the cancellation of the concert.

to Centre last July, and of having mistreated her there.

Defiant Misconduct.
The defendant emphatically denied the accusation. "He admitted having made the trip from Calhoun to Centre in company with the young woman, but denied the alleged misconduct. Judge Savage decided that the evidence was not sufficient to hold him and he was discharged.

There are indictments pending against Bishop's two brothers, Farrell and Johnson, the three having been indicted by the federal grand jury here. The two brothers are still being sought by federal and state officers. It is alleged that one of the trio underwent a mock marriage ceremony to satisfy the girl, though he was at the time married.

The young woman, who was brought back to her home from Cisco, Texas, insisted that the accusation was true and there was direct conflict between her testimony and the statement of the defendant at the hearing yesterday.

them. No advance to farmers has been made by the corporation for more than a year, and could not be authorized under this measure. Instead, the corporation has made loans to such institutions as the International Harvester, the Bethlehem Steel and the Baldwin Locomotive works.

Representative Mann, republican, Illinois, supporting the bill, said he did not see how it would do harm, but he would do some good. Representative Mondell, Wyoming, majority leader, said the bottom had fallen out of business because private institutions had not been able to extend the required relief. Revival of the finance corporation would help the situation, and could not, under any circumstances, have a harmful effect, he said.

"Banks Gone Limit," Representative Stevenson, democrat, South Carolina, denied that the measure was class legislation.

"The banks have gone the limit," he said, "and they cannot extend credits further. We must do it by selling stock of the corporation to the investing public."

Representative McFadden said the project was "nothing else than putting the hand in the public treasury for the benefit of special interests."

"I don't believe honestly it is going to help the farmer in the way he expects," he said. "You will be called upon to revive the grain corporation and other government war agencies."

"Until the consuming public gets the full benefit of these declining prices, I think nothing should be done to interfere."

Another Burden on People.
Representative Madden, republican, Illinois, said the measure would add another billion dollars burden to the backs of the people.

"Already Europe owes us $13,000,000,000," he said. "This would add another billion to that debt. It, moreover, sustains high prices, and does not aid the working people whose wages are being reduced all over the country."

Other speakers supporting the resolution were Representatives Strong, republican, Kansas; Steagall, democrat, Arkansas; Tinch, republican, Kansas; Wingo, democrat, Arkansas.

STATE DIVISION OF FARMERS' UNION WILL MEET HERE

The Georgia division of the Farmers' union will hold its annual meeting in Atlanta Tuesday and Wednesday in the house of representatives at the state capitol.

Mr. Berens, president of the division, will preside and deliver the annual address, while speeches will be made by Commissioner of Agriculture J. J. Brown, Charles S. Barrett, president of the national organization, and L. M. Rhodes, commissioner of markets of Florida.

The convention will outline a program of educational and agricultural legislation to be introduced and sponsored at the next regular session of the legislature. Reports of a number of cooperative marketing enterprises in this state will be made.

NO RAIN FOR SUNDAY
Asserts Weather Forecaster, But He Sees Few Clouds.

Pair and a bit warmer is the descriptive language G. F. von Herms, local weather forecaster, uses in his terse prediction of what Atlanta may expect in a weather way for Sunday. He made the promise of the same sort of elemental behavior for Saturday and the result was coincident with his promise, so he is a bit more confident of the absolute truth of Sunday's promise.

He allows, however, for a few clouds which may hover intermittently over the city during Sunday, but he does not weaken his original statement against the probability of rain. No rain, he affirms.

clusion in the bill when introduced, Mr. Fordney announced.

Products Excluded.
Proposals to include sugar, hogs, frozen beef, vegetable seeds, barley, flax, butter and potato flour and potato starch in the list were voted down.

For the most part, according to members, the committee voting showed five opponents to the protectionist measure and never less than three. Representative Rainey, democrat, Illinois, was understood to have informed the committee that he would lead a floor fight against it.

Demands for inclusion of many manufactured products were made by several committee members, but leaders said these probably would vote for the bill on final passage.

AMERICAN SLAIN IN MEXICO STATE

Information Received by State Department From American Embassy at Mexico City.

Washington, December 18.—John Berens, an American mining man of San Francisco, was killed about November 29 in the state of Mexico, according to information received today by the state department from the American embassy at Mexico City.

The embassy said it had asked the Mexican foreign office to investigate and take such steps as were necessary to punish those responsible.

Mr. Berens was given a passport to Mexico on June 16, and went into the Temascaltepec district shortly after his arrival in southern Mexico. No details regarding the manner in which his death occurred was contained in the embassy's report.

AMERICAN SLAIN IN MEXICO STATE

Information Received by State Department From American Embassy at Mexico City.

Washington, December 18.—John Berens, an American mining man of San Francisco, was killed about November 29 in the state of Mexico, according to information received today by the state department from the American embassy at Mexico City.

The embassy said it had asked the Mexican foreign office to investigate and take such steps as were necessary to punish those responsible.

Mr. Berens was given a passport to Mexico on June 16, and went into the Temascaltepec district shortly after his arrival in southern Mexico. No details regarding the manner in which his death occurred was contained in the embassy's report.

San Francisco, December 18.—Organizations of mining men here have no record of John Berens, reported killed in the state of Mexico, Mex., and said to have been a former San Francisco resident.

The Colored Methodist conference, in session here today after Bishop R. S. Williams preaches the annual sermon in the West Mitchell church. Appointments will be read and pastors will begin leaving here after much hard work since Wednesday. Action taken Saturday included ordination of elders and deacons, and reports of committees on education, Sunday school, missions, superannuated preachers and Epworth league. The committee on education and that upon the superannuated preacher evoked much discussion and made some very strong recommendations, which means much in the training of the ministry and the better organization of Sunday schools.

Dr. J. H. Moore preached a soul-stirring sermon Saturday night. J. A. Martin, dean secretary of the Georgia association, gave an educational address before the memorial services of deceased members. The conference went on record as endorsing the work.

The following pastors will fill pulpits of the various colored churches Sunday: West Mitchell, C. M. E. church, J. H. Jones; Friendship Baptist, J. A. Martin; Big Bethel, J. H. Wiggins; Butler Street, J. H. Moore; Cosmopolitan Methodist, J. A. Walker; at night, H. L. Stallworth, Friendship Baptist; Big Bethel, C. W. Crawford; Butler Street, J. D. Hudson; West Mitchell, S. ## GEORGIA TO HAVE 13 CONGRESSMEN

Redistricting of State to Make Atlanta One District, According to Hol-lomon.

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMON.

Washington, December 18.—As already forecasted in The Constitution under the new congressional apportionment based on the 1920 census Georgia will get one extra congressman, making thirteen districts in the state. The redistribution will be done by the legislature of 1921-22 and probably become effective prior to the congressional elections in the September primary of 1922. In that event there will be no necessity for a congressman-at-large. In the failure of the legislature to redistrict, however, prior to that primary the thirteenth congressman must be from the state-at-large until the new district is legally defined. There is little doubt that in the redistricting one district will be prescribed to Fulton and DeKalb. By the reapportionment law, which has already been decided upon in republican caucus, Fulton alone would be eligible to a congressman, if it should be deemed advisable by the legislature. It is generally agreed, however, among Georgians, all of whom have a pride in Atlanta, that these two counties, which enter largely into Atlanta's city life, should be a unit in a congressional district.

To Draft Bill.
At the republican caucus it was decided that the drafting of the new bill shall be in the hands of the census committee, of which Representative Siegel is chairman, and who already has prepared and introduced a bill increasing membership from the present 13 to 14. This may be made the basis for legislation. It will make the population basis for a congressional district between 213,000 and 215,000 instead of approximately 211,000 as at present. No state would lose representation and 25 states would gain.

Representative Tinkham, of Massachusetts, who attempted to throttle a force bill in the south by cutting down representation to a basis of "voting population" on the claim that negroes were disfranchised, was vigorously opposed by members of his own party in caucus. Even Mann, of Illinois, spoke against it, and Madden voted against it.

To Push Measure.
Decision to push through a reapportionment bill at this session was due to the fact that a number of state legislatures will meet soon after January 1, while if the bill went over to the extra session it would be passed too late for many legislatures to act upon until their meeting two years hence. The state legislatures define the limits of the congressional districts, the power of congress being limited to determining the number of representatives a state shall have. The vote by which the caucus decided to take up reapportionment legislation at this session was 106 to 61.

SEVEN GO TO DEATH IN KANAWHA RIVER

Charleston, W. Va., December 18.—Seven men, employees of the United States naval ordnance plant at South Charleston, were drowned when a skiff in which they were crossing the Kanawha river, overturned near Springhill today. Eleven others, who were in the party, were rescued.

The skiff was used as a ferry between Dunbar and Springhill, towns on opposite sides of the river, about twelve miles from here, and was carrying the men to Dunbar, after they had completed their work at the ordnance plant for the day.

HARDING DISCUSSES CHOICE OF CABINET

President-Elect Also Gets Advice on the Plan for World Peace.
Marion, Ohio, December 18.—In another set of conferences today President-elect Harding heard advice on the two subjects which for the present bulk largest in his mind, the choice of a cabinet and the formulation of a plan for world peace.

On the proposal for an association of nations, which has taken more definite form as a result of his consultations, he again conferred with Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, a democrat, who has been a bitter opponent of many of President Wilson's policies, and who took a leading part in the fight of the senate irreconcilables against the Versailles league. Senator Reed came to Marion last night, at Mr. Harding's invitation, and the talk began then was continued today.

Dr. Butler Calls.
Another on the president-elect's list was Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, of New York, a student of international law and an advocate of ratification of the Versailles treaty with reservations. Dr. Butler's call also was arranged at Mr. Harding's request to discuss a peace plan. Harry M. Daugherty, pre-convention manager for Senator Harding, and since the Chicago convention, of his closest advisers, and Senator Harry S. New, of Indiana, in charge of the republican speakers' bureau during the campaign, were callers whose conferences were understood to concern cabinet appointments and other questions of policies as well as the peace plans. Both have been mentioned as possible cabinet members, but Mr. New's friends have indicated that he prefers to remain in the senate.

Reed Comments.
Senator Reed would not commit himself on the result of his conference other than that he told the president-elect that he considered the war referendum impractical, and that if the incoming executive should go into the present Versailles league of nations he would be breaking faith with the American people. Mr. Butler, who also conferred with Mr. Harding, issued a statement in which he also expressed opposition to the war referendum idea. He said he thought Germany's war indemnity should be definitely fixed and out of the way before any attempt is made to form an association of nations. He also asserted that any association of nations should be founded on judicial rather than political grounds.

Took Wife Three Years To Find That "Husband" Was a Married Woman

Sioux City, Iowa, December 18.—Sioux City police are attempting to get a correct understanding of what the following is all about: Mrs. Clifton D. Revere had her husband arrested here, charging that he is a woman masquerading as a member of the sterner sex. They have been "married" for three years. With the husband the police held O. D. Church, postoffice employee, who has lived with the Reveres as the husband's brother. Instead, the police aver, he is the husband of Mrs. Revere's "husband." The young wife first became suspicious of her husband's sex a few weeks ago, she told the police, and confided her belief to her brother. The arrests followed. "Revere" has been a real estate operator here for three years.

DR. PRETTYMAN NAMED FOR KNOXVILLE PULPIT

Knoxville, Tenn., December 18.—Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D., chaplain of the United States senate, is appointed pastor of the Church Street Methodist Episcopal church, south, in this city, effective in January. The appointment is made by Bishop Collins Denny, and Dr. Prettyman is transferred from the Baltimore conference to the Holston conference, Methodist Episcopal church, south. He succeeds Rev. J. Stewart French, D. D., recently appointed president of Emory and Henry, and Martha Washington colleges, in Virginia.

WILSON INSPECTS NEW RESIDENCE

Washington, December 18.—President Wilson visited today for the first time the home which he has purchased as his residence after his retirement from office on March 4. The visit was understood to have been for the purpose of considering alterations to the building. Two executives were accompanied to the building on S. street by Mrs. Wilson and her two brothers, John Randolph Bolling and W. R. Bolling. They remained at the house an hour examining it in detail and also viewing the attractive garden in the rear of the home.

BANKERS PERFECT NEW COMPANY PLANS

Informal Meetings to Finish
Details of New International Banking Company

New Orleans, December 18.—Bankers who last night formally perfected organization of the International Banking company, the corporation capitalized at $7,000,000 and designed to finance the south's foreign trade in staple products, today were planning to hold a number of informal meetings to discuss details and arrange for the stockholders' meeting here, January 7, next. Probability of increasing the capital stock to $10,000,000 also was discussed, and leaders in the movement were optimistic that by holding the books open that figure would be attained. The organization will begin operations directly following the stockholders' meeting, when selection of fifteen directors will be ratified and officers elected. Subscribing banks will then pay in 25 percent of their subscriptions. Syracuse university has booked fifteen lacrosse games, starting April 9, 1921.

It is reported that 10,000 Italians were blinded in the war, a larger number than in any other country. Many of these men have lost arms or feet as well, but they are eagerly learning new ways to make a living.

REPORT TO CLEAR HEADS OF POLICE

Members of Probe Committee Admit Continued Investigation of Howell and Lanford Charges Will Be Recommended.

In its report Monday to city council, made up from evidence submitted during a six-day probe of the police and detective departments, the special committee which conducted the investigation will render a verdict completely exonerating Police Chief James L. Bevens and Detective Chief A. Lamar Poole of all criticism directed at the performance of their official duties, and will report that testimony against other members of the department is insufficient to warrant the recommendation that anyone be removed.

The probe will recommend, however, that the board of police commissioners investigate further the charges made at the hearing by Fred Battle, of 32 English avenue, that Detective O. M. Howell attempted to "plant" liquor in his car, and also the charges by C. W. Lightfoot, another witness, that Newport A. Lanford, former chief of detectives and a pensioner of the department, paid him a bribe of $1,500 to cease whisky raiding trips to Columbus.

Other charges against Detective Howell that he confiscated whisky without turning it in at the police station, and similar charges against Detectives Lon J. Terry and M. A. Hornsby were not supported with sufficient evidence, in the opinion of the committee, to establish the guilt of the officers.

Shaw Exonerated. Detective Lieutenant T. D. Shaw, charged by officials of the South-eastern fair with receiving "hush" money from concessionaires operating games of chance on the Midway at Lakewood, is given a clean bill. Friction between the detective and the fair officials is deplored, and it will be suggested that next year officers whose relations are harmonious with the officials be detailed at the fairgrounds.

The report was finished by the committee late Saturday afternoon. That body had spent a day in considering the mass of evidence introduced at the hearing. It will be typewritten at the direction of Chairman Harvey Hatcher, and announcement was given out that the text of the paper will not be completed before Monday.

Though details will not be known before then, the salient features enumerated above were admitted Saturday at the close of the final executive session. It was also asserted that the committee was unanimous in its report.

The majority of the committee, it is said, favored the recommendation that the courts be urged to impose chain-gang sentences on bootleggers whenever they are convicted, without the alternative of a fine. It was agreed, however, that no clause would be inserted on which the committee was not a unit. It was intimated that this may be offered as an amendment when the report is read in council.

Abolish Fee System. Recommendation to the state legislature that the fee system be abolished and all county officers in Fulton be placed on salaries, expected by many to become a part of the committee's report, was not adopted. It was the opinion, expressed by Chief Poole and others who testified at the investigation, that the fee system is pernicious, and the police are hampered by it in their efforts to rid the city of vice.

The report will contain absolute denial that there is any general "raft, dishonesty or crookedness of any kind in the police and detective departments."

Members of the investigating committee are Chairman Harvey Hatcher, Councilman D. R. Wilder, Councilman J. R. Nutting, Councilman J. M. Murphy and Councilman Alvin Richards. Council will be asked among the most important evidence which the committee considered in making its report was the following:

Charges Investigated. Charges against city detectives, principally Officers O. M. Howell and Lon J. Terry, that they confiscated whisky without turning it in at the police station, and the defense of these officers in which they sought to show the charges were inspired by revenge on the part of bootleggers.

Charges that games of chance at the Southeastern fair were protected by officers, and counter charges.

Charges by the police that crime flourishes in Atlanta because of the fee system and the practice of the courts in fining bootleggers, gamblers and other criminals instead of sentencing them to the chain-gang, including the statement of Detective Chief Lamar Poole that "not a single white bootlegger has ever served a jail sentence" and, "if every bootlegger the police caught was put on the chain-gang, in six months not a drop of whisky could be bought in Atlanta."

More New Wanted. Charges that the board of police commissioners has lowered the morale of the force because it has ignored its own rules in many instances, reinstating discharged officers before the time limit has elapsed and violating its rules in other ways.

The question of whether there is friction between the police department and the office of the solicitor general, Chief Poole stating that he always has co-operated with Solicitor Boykin and will continue to co-operate with him, whatever the attitude of the solicitor may be.

REV. ELIJAH H. OLIVER TO BE BURIED MONDAY

The Rev. Elijah H. Oliver, who, for fourteen years was pastor of Warren Memorial Methodist Episcopal church, and who built the present building, will be buried Monday morning at 10 o'clock from the church on Green street. The body will lie in state at the church Sunday from 2 p. m. until the next morning.

"BETTY LOU" COLLEGE CANDIES MAKE A HIT

New Product for Atlanta Makes Bid for Favor With Colleges and Clubs.

A new Atlanta product made its debut last week in this city, making a large list of friends in the short time it has been placed on the market, and bidding fair to make many more in the future.

"Betty Lou College Candies" is the creation of Mrs. Louise Pope, of 1168 Peachtree street, and while she expects to cater largely to the desires of colleges and clubs, she has equipped a candy plant of sufficient size to take care of much of the candy needs of the public.

For the present Mrs. Pope is manufacturing her delicious line of candy at her home, under the supervision of a candy maker of many years' experience, with trained candy dippers, and every piece of it is made and shaped by hand. A little later Mrs. Pope expects to install a modern candy plant in the city, and will arrange for her own retail store to supply some of the demand she has been largely encouraged to believe will exist. For the present a number of the leading drug stores and other high class shops will distribute her product. Mrs. Pope expects to devote much of her efforts to serving the students of colleges and various clubs throughout the south. In catering to this particular class of patrons, the originator of this new line of sweets will make up boxes in any size and quantity bearing the pennant or the insignia of the college or club in gold on the boxes, making most attractive and desirable souvenirs or favors for any occasion. In doing this any color scheme can be beautifully carried out.

The first appearance of "Betty Lou" candies was made on last Monday night, when beautiful half-pound boxes, labeled "Golden Tornado Special," with the Tech pennant in gold and Tech colors, were placed at each plate at the big banquet tendered the football team by the "T" club. The beauty of the packages and the deliciousness of their contents made a big hit with the banqueters.

On Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Pope's candies were the feature at a silver tea given to the Agnes Scott students by the Atlanta club of the college, at the boarding department of the North Avenue school, on Ponce de Leon avenue. The college pennant and other insignia were tastefully done in colors on the packages, and the public is cordially invited to attend. Rev. Graham is a member of the board of trustees of the mother church, Boston.

No admission will be charged, and it has been announced that special cars will be waiting at Peachtree and Fourteenth streets after the address.

Betty Lou candies are declared to be just as delicious as it is possible to make them. They include all manner of candied fruits and bonbons, glace nuts, assorted creams and chocolates. Making a specialty of catering to large dinner affairs and other social functions, as well as featuring the emblems and insignia and pennants of colleges on her packages, and producing an unusually high grade of candies, Mrs. Pope and many of her friends who have watched her work for the first week in the candy trade, predict a splendid demand in the future for "Betty Lou College Candies."

"BETTY LOU" COLLEGE CANDIES MAKE A HIT

New Product for Atlanta Makes Bid for Favor With Colleges and Clubs.

A new Atlanta product made its debut last week in this city, making a large list of friends in the short time it has been placed on the market, and bidding fair to make many more in the future.

"Betty Lou College Candies" is the creation of Mrs. Louise Pope, of 1168 Peachtree street, and while she expects to cater largely to the desires of colleges and clubs, she has equipped a candy plant of sufficient size to take care of much of the candy needs of the public.

For the present Mrs. Pope is manufacturing her delicious line of candy at her home, under the supervision of a candy maker of many years' experience, with trained candy dippers, and every piece of it is made and shaped by hand. A little later Mrs. Pope expects to install a modern candy plant in the city, and will arrange for her own retail store to supply some of the demand she has been largely encouraged to believe will exist. For the present a number of the leading drug stores and other high class shops will distribute her product. Mrs. Pope expects to devote much of her efforts to serving the students of colleges and various clubs throughout the south. ## WOULD BAR ALIEN VOTES IN UNIONS Congressman Upshaw Introduces Bill to Prohibit Aliens From Voice in Management of Labor Unions.

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMAN.

Washington, D. C., December 13.—(Special.)—One of the most drastic measures ever introduced in congress as yet—one that meets with the general sentiment of the strictest public—is that by Congressman W. D. Upshaw, of Atlanta, introduced today which reads as follows:

To protect American citizens by preventing aliens from voting in the management of labor unions, industrial organizations and for other purposes.

Be enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America, in congress assembled:

Section 1.—That from and after the passage of this act it shall be unlawful for any alien residing in the United States to vote or in any other way to participate in the management of labor unions, industrial organizations or other organizations of which he is a member, or which are employed in, or have power to interfere with interstate or foreign commerce, or that are employed upon the public works of the United States.

Section 2.—That from and after the passage of this act, any alien who shall be found to have voted or to have participated in the management of labor unions, industrial organizations or other organizations of which he is a member, or which are employed in, or have power to interfere with interstate or foreign commerce, or that are employed upon the public works of the United States, shall be subject to a fine of not more than $500 or imprisonment for not more than two years.

Congressman Upshaw made the following statement on this bill:

"I have introduced this bill for four reasons: First, because I am the friend of the American workingman; second, because I am the friend of organized labor; third, because I am the friend of the well-meaning foreigner; and fourth, because I am the friend of the American people. If there is any truth in reports given to the public, most of the out-laws strikes and other extreme measures that have done so much to hurt the cause of labor in the eyes of the American people, have been caused by the dominating vote of aliens in labor organizations. These aliens came to this country expecting to be governed by American laws. They certainly have no right then to complain if they are denied the privilege of controlling American institutions and American business."

"Labor unions must be deforeignized and Americanized before they can mean what they ought to mean to our civil and commercial life. A man who flees the ills of other lands and seeks refuge in this country, and fills his pockets beneath the protection of the American flag, but who does not care enough for our flag to swear everlasting allegiance to it, certainly has no right to cast any vote anywhere that will affect the freedom and the happiness of the American people."

The Upshaw bill has the endorsement of a large following in congress, irrespective of party, and is the real sentiment of the present session whether it passes or not, and it is very probable of passage.

It shows the feeling of congressmen to be unafraid and courageous and made of that metal that means much in the nation's life of America. The bill is a good one, and will have the support of the southern members generally who have witnessed the baneful influences of alien voting in local labor unions.

County Convict List Is Swelled By 'Hard Times'

Record Number of "Boarders" for Six Years Now Enjoying Fulton's Hospitality, Warden's Report Shows.

"Hard times" has increased the number of "boarders" of Fulton county to such an extent that the county commission will probably erect an additional convict camp to accommodate the growing crowd. There are more convicts in Fulton county at the present time than in six years, according to a statement by Deputy Warden Collier. During the war when labor and material were highest the convict camps were empty, or practically so, and the county was compelled to give out its work by contract. The largest number of convicts in camps in Fulton county at any one time during the past six years prior to Saturday was 375, while Saturday there were 450 convicts.

Plans to use these convicts in finishing roads built by the county will be made at a special called meeting of the public works committee of the commission Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The plans will include laying gutters on the sides of concrete roads which the county has built. It was stated by members of the committee that gutters had never been put in on account of lack of men and material, and therefore, the roads have had the appearance of being only half finished. Citizens who were present took part in the discussion, and stated that guttering was needed badly on the East Point road, the Camp Gordon road and other corners of the county. The meeting of the public works committee Saturday was the last regular meeting of that body this year. Next year the commission will have new committees. It is not known who will head the committee as yet. Captain George M. Hope will take office the first of January to succeed W. M. Poole, retiring member of the board. Otherwise the personnel of the commission will remain unchanged.

EMORY TO HOLD FALL EXERCISES NEXT WEDNESDAY

Regular convocation exercises for students of Emory university will be held at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning in the university chapel. Diplomas will be awarded graduates of the schools of theology and liberal arts. The public is invited to attend. Convocation address will be made by Bishop W. F. McMurtry, of Louisville, Ky. Bishop McMurtry is said to have attained much prominence as a speaker of the southern Methodist church.

DORSEY PROCLAIMS "INDUSTRIAL WEEK"

Urges Citizens to Co-operate in the State Tour.

Announcement of Industrial Georgia week, January 10 to 15, in which all Georgians are urged to turn their attention to the great industrial possibilities of the state, is contained in a proclamation issued Saturday by Governor Hugh M. Dorsey.

The proclamation calls attention to the state industrial tour to be held during that week under the auspices of the Georgia School of Technology and gives the plan its particular approval, calling upon all citizens of the state to support the plan and help to make the tour a complete success. The governor especially urges that "during the week civic organizations set up programs calculated to inform the mind and awaken the conscience of our people along these lines."

INCREASE IN GAS RATE TO BE FOUGHT BY SOUTH SIDE

To oppose the latest application of the Georgia Railway and Power company for an increase in gas rates, a meeting of south side residents will be held at the Georgia Avenue school at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday night.

The objection to such increase is, it is said, especially strong because of the alleged poor quality of the gas which the company has furnished the people. Mayor Key will speak at the meeting, according to an announcement Saturday. Committees will

World War Hero, Famous Aviator Dies a Suicid

Lieutenant Pat O'Brien
Former Officer in Royal Flying Corps, Kills Self in Los Angeles Hotel.

Los Angeles, Cal., December 18.—A report setting forth that Lieutenant Pat O'Brien, officer of the Royal Flying Corps in the world war, found dead last night in a downtown hotel, had committed suicide was filed today by police detectives who investigated the case.

Lieutenant O'Brien was found with a bullet wound in his forehead and an army pistol at his side. Police said he had tried and failed to effect a reconciliation with his wife, a motion picture actress.

O'Brien, the detectives said, came here from Oakland yesterday and went to the hotel where his wife had a room. He took another room and telephoned to her, according to the report. Mrs. O'Brien, it was declared, replied she was too ill to see him. A few minutes later, attendants heard a shot fired. O'Brien was found dead.

Note to Wife.
A note in O'Brien's handwriting, found in the room, addressed to his wife, follows:

"Only a coward would do what I am doing, but I guess I am one. With all my war record, I am just like the rest of the people in the world, a little bit of clay. And to you, my sweet little wife, I go thinking of you. And my dear, sweet mother, my sisters and brothers.

"And may the just God that answered my prayers in those days that I spent in making my escape from Germany, once more answer them.

"And bring trouble, sickness, disgrace and more bad luck than anyone else in this world has ever had, and curse forever that awful woman that has broken up my home and taken you from me: the woman that stood in my home and gave (several words blurred) she caused this life of mine, that just a few moments ago was happy, to go on that sweet adventure of death.

Goodbye to Armies.
"Please send what you find back to my dear mother in Mombasa, Ill. To the five armies I have been in, the birds, the animals I love so well, to my friends, to all the world of adventure—I say goodbye."

Lieutenant O'Brien was a native of Richmond, Cal., where he was born 33 years ago. Prior to the war he was a fireman on the Santa Fe railroad. He enlisted in the Royal Flying Corps in Canada early in the war. He was captured by the Germans but made a daring escape.

Mombasa, Ill., December 18.—Mrs. Maggie O'Brien, mother of Lieutenant Pat O'Brien, the aviator, who was found dead in a Los Angeles hotel last night, said today that she had received a message from her daughter, Mrs. Clara Clagg, who went to Los Angeles two weeks ago to spend the winter with her brother, stating he had committed suicide.

Lieutenant O'Brien enlisted in the Royal Flying Corps in Canada early in the war and soon gained fame for daring exploits. Once he fell several thousand feet after a battle with a German flier, and landed behind the enemy lines. He was put in a German hospital. Later, while bound for a German prison camp he jumped from the speeding train, and for 72 days wandered through Germany and Luxembourg, finally arriving in Holland, whence he made his way into Belgium. Two years ago Lieutenant O'Brien fell 2,000 feet at Kelley field, San Antonio, Texas, and escaped with a broken nose.

TURMAN EMPLOYEES ENJOY ROUND ROBIN

The entire office and sales forces of S. B. Turman & Co. met Friday night at a downtown cafe for a "get-together" and good fellowship meeting.

The gathering was presided over by S. B. Turman. Others present included Fred P. Jeter, B. C. Broyles, E. L. Turman, Morgan T. Wynne, H. M. Crowder, Winston Whitely, Roy W. Weaver, G. R. Arnold, W. C. Robinson, W. A. Dodge, Jr., Miss Katie W. Clatter, Miss Cubie Arnold and L. W. Little.

A round table discussion of the real estate situation was held. B. Broyles presented Mr. Turman with two goblets as a token of the esteem in which he is held by all associated with him. Mr. Turman responded.

WILL HOLD FUNERAL FOR MRS. HIRSCH TODAY

Funeral services of Mrs. Morris Hirsch, who died at her home at 40 West Eleventh street, Friday morning, will be conducted from the home at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon by Rabbi David Marx. Interment will follow in Oakland cemetery.

Mrs. Hirsch was the widow of the late Morris Hirsch, and was well known in Atlanta. She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. M. L. Bickart, of Stanton, Conn.; Mrs. Hugo Stitz, of Atlanta; and Mrs. J. F. Nelson, of California, and one son, Jake Hirsch, of Atlanta.

SOON TO ORGANIZE LOCAL LIONS CLUB

To organize a local Lions club, an organization for civic betterment, twenty Atlanta business men met at luncheon in the Ansley hotel Friday afternoon. A committee was elected to report Tuesday at another meeting, at which officers will be elected.

The meeting was addressed by Thomas Margher, of Chicago, national secretary, who explained "Lionism." He stated there are now 250 such clubs in the United States. Clubs will, it is stated, be organized in Greenville, Jacksonville and Miami.

SHOW BIBLE SCENES AT SALVATION HALL

BILLIE B. BUSH.

attorney of Tucson, Ariz., has returned to Georgia and has established offices at 426-8 Grant building, Atlanta, where he will practice law. Mr. Bush, after graduating from Emory college, entered the practice of law in Miller county and became county attorney of that county. He is the son of Hon. C. C. Bush, many times a member of the legislature from that county, prominent banker and recently elected ordinary of Miller county.

"I have returned to Georgia," said Mr. Bush yesterday, "because I had stayed away just as long as I could. I had a splendid practice in Arizona but I could not resist the home call and as I was coming back I concluded it was best for me to resume the practice of law in Atlanta."

Mr. Bush and his family are now

WOMAN HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT ASKS $40,000

Suit for $40,000 damages for personal injuries was filed Saturday in superior court by Miss Lillian Thomas against Patrick Lyons, Atlanta business man, as the result of an automobile accident the night of December 4, on South Pryor street, between Crumley and Glenn streets, in which she was permanently disabled, she claims.

Miss Thomas set out in the suit, which was filed by Attorneys Lawton Nalley and H. W. McLarty, that Lyons backed his car across the street to turn in the middle of the block, and that this caused her brother's car, in which she was riding, to run into the former's car. She stated that Lyons did not give any signal to indicate that he was going to back.

She further set out that her brother's auto was going at a rate not exceeding ten miles an hour, but that the sudden backing of the Lyons car made the accident unavoidable.

She contended that she is permanently injured.

SOCIALISTS TO ARGUE RAILROADS OWNERSHIP

Should the government take over and own and operate the coal mines of the United States is a question that will be debated Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in W. O. W. hall, Mitchell and Broad streets, under auspices of the Atlanta branch of the socialist party.

The affirmative will be upheld by Rev. H. L. Flanagan and Joe Rhoden, secretary-organizer of the socialist party for the southern states, while the negative will be defended by W. S. Weir, of the Typographical union, and Attorney V. M. Harwell. The public is invited.

TECH GRADUATE OF '92 DIES IN CHESTER, PA.

School Children Will Stage Xmas Programs at Auditorium

Children's Day Program Be Held Sunday Afternoon and Other Celebrations Be Held December
25 and 26.

Interesting and extensive programs have been arranged for community Christmas celebrations to be given at the Auditorium by children and grownups on Sunday, December 19, another on Christmas day and a third on December 26. On Sunday, to be known as "children's day," an elaborate program has been prepared for the school children.

Pupils of the first, second and third grades of all city schools will assemble at the Auditorium at 2 o'clock. The children will act under the leadership of a committee, members of which are Mrs. W. E. Davis,

Miss Mamie L. Pitts, Miss Fanny
Spahn, Miss Jo Herman and Carroll Summers.

On Christmas day a play enacted through pantomime and music will celebrate the spirit of Christmas.

In this play the "emerald queen of Christmas" will come to the celebrations with her court and gifts will be brought to her by the brave the humble, the rich, the poor and the joyous.

On December 26 the entire program will be repeated for the benefit of children from orphanages, soldiers from the Old Soldiers' home and inmates of the Home for Old Women.

Miss Townsend Director.

Miss Grace L. Townsend will direct singing of the high school glee clubs. Boy Scouts will decorate the tree and act as ushers. Parents will be seated in the gallery, which will be open to the public.

Promptly at 7:30 o'clock an organ overture, the opening number on the program, will be given, after which Christmas carols will be sung by the children. Children of the first, second and third grades will assemble

JEWISH ALLIANCE TO PRESENT SNAPPY SONG AND DANCE REVUE

A minstrel revue, promising much in the way of snappy song and dance, will be the Sunday offering of the Jewish alliance at their clubrooms, 39 Capitol avenue, this afternoon.

Two performances will be given—the matinee at 3:30 o'clock, and an evening performance at 8:30.
Several Atlanta favorites are numbered among those who will appear in the interesting arrangement of numbers, and the afternoon performance will be devoted mainly to children. A two-hour fun-fest is promised for those who attend. Dave Frank and Jimmie McGowan, well known for their singing in Atlanta, being two of the stars of the cast.

The minstrel will open with the regulation semi-circle of jokesters, who will be quizzed in regular interlocutor fashion by A. B. Reisman.

Misses Esther Bogstein, Celia Tavlor, Frances Cuba, Evelyn Gershon, Frances Helman and Hannah Michael.

The performance will be further enlivened by a crew of original and eccentric dance steps by Leon Sug-erman. Jack Sellers and Mrs. Jack Saul will render several interesting solo dances. The music for the Sunday entertainment will be furnished by the Dixie Six jazz band from Emory university.

Itton and Mrs. Fontaine, Athens;
Mrs. S. Guyton McLendon, Atlanta;
Mrs. James S. Davant, Memphis;
Penn. brothers, Guy C. Hamilton.

Dalton; James S. Hamilton, Atlanta; cousin, Alphon P. Dearing, Athens. The funeral and burial will be Monday morning in Athens.

stitution takes pleasure in waiting upon you, and assist you otherwise in any financial matters.

Central Bank & Trust Corp.
ATLANTA

promptly at 2 o'clock in Taft Hall to form for the procession to the arena for presenting their gifts. The arena will, it is stated, be reserved for children of these grades. Parents of these children may sit with them in the arena.

On December 25 more than 600 of Atlanta's little children for whom Christmas might otherwise fail to be a day to be remembered, will be given presents from Santa Claus by the Elks at the Auditorium.

Santa Claus will be on hand and will see that all children are given bags containing candy and toys. The Elks' band of thirty-six pieces will be present and will render appropriate selections. Between selections by the band and singing by the Elks quartet, Charles Sheldon, city organist, a member of the gift-giving five organ recitals, and everything possible will be done to make the occasion an enjoyable one for the children.

Through various channels, the Elks have received the names of many children who will be beneficiaries of their Christmas bounty.
Although the order has received the names of great numbers of children it invites any citizen who knows of children who would otherwise have no Christmas to submit their names.
Children will be admitted by cards which they will receive in due time and by which they will be told that they are invited to come to the entertainment and receive their gifts.
Names of children who should be remembered under the gift-giving plan of the Elks should be given, with their addresses, to Sam C. Little, care Elks home, 40 East Hill street. Special effort will be made to see that they are not forgotten.

MAN SHOT IN WHISKY RAID CANNOT RECOVER

Anniston, Ala., December 18.— (Special.)—In an effort to save the life of George Poore, who was shot during a whisky raid near Oxford Thursday, an operation was performed at a local hospital. The operation revealed the bullet in the spinal canal, and the surgeons decided it would mean death to attempt to remove it. Poore's condition today was reported critical.

AGED ATHENS WOMAN SUCCUMBS SUDDENLY

Athens, Ga., December 18.—(Special.)—Mrs. Sarah Hamilton Williams, aged 71, died suddenly at her home here at 8:30 o'clock this afternoon. She was a daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. James S. Hamilton of this city, and a graduate of

ELECTRIC LINES NOT UNDER BOARD

U. S. Railroad Labor Board Hands Down Important Decision Affecting All Interurban and Electric Lines.

Chicago, December 18.—The United States railroad labor board has handed down a decision today interpreting the Esch-Cummins transportation act to mean that the board does not have jurisdiction over any interurban or electric lines.

Appeals from employees of various electric lines asking the board to hear their grievances were denied.

The decision affects every electric interurban line in the country and many city transportation systems owned by interurban companies.

Arguments in the case were heard several months ago. Members of the board stated at the time their belief that, regardless of which side won, the matter would be referred to the United States supreme court for interpretation of the transportation act.

The board held that the meaning of congress in the transportation act was to exempt all electric lines

"not operating as a part of a general steam railroad system of transportation." The fact that some electric lines haul freight, exchange cars with steam lines, operate in interstate traffic, or use in part the tracks of a steam line, does not bring those lines within the provisions of the law, the decision says.

The board also points out that the interstate commerce commission has granted the interurban a freight rate increase, but has decided it has no jurisdiction over the passenger business. "It is obvious as a practical matter," the board says, "that the granting by the labor board of a wage increase, without corresponding authority to the interstate commerce commission to raise rates, would result in complications."
The railroad labor board and the interstate commerce commission were clearly intended to be inter-dependent in this matter. Such intention would be nullified if the labor board assumed jurisdiction where the interstate commerce commission was without it."

Hundred Little Orphans Went Without Supper

To Help Three Million Other Little Boys Who Are Greatly in Need of Food.

One hundred little boys and girls at the Decatur Orphans' Home, near Atlanta, went to bed supperless last night—because they were ill, not because they had been bad, but because in a far away country, 3,000,000 other little boys and girls are hungry.

It was a very simple thing they did at the Decatur Orphans' Home, but it was the only way they knew to help, and it showed as nothing else could how terribly real is the tragedy of childhood being enacted today in central Europe.

Some of the children at the Orphans' Home read in the newspapers the appeal of Herbert Hoover and the organizations allied with him for $23,000,000 to buy food for the children of Poland, Serbia and other stricken nations until the next harvest is gathered.

They read the brief statement that these children will die unless America helps, and they saw pictures of them—little faces lined with suffering, hollow cheeks, big eyes and wistful like a sick dog's.

They know what hunger is, do some of the children at the home. Before the home took them, they knew what it was to look like those pictures—and to feel that way. So perhaps it was not surprising what they told the superintendent.

They wanted to go without supper. The meal they did not eat they wanted to send to Mr. Hoover and by him to Europe. It wouldn't be much—apple sauce, biscuits, milk, meat, if it was "meat night."

But, such as it was, they knew it would help, for many times it had helped them. It might save one of those little boys and girls with the eyes of sick dogs from dying.

The superintendent didn't know what to do at first. He didn't have ship apple sauce to Poland, and so he swallowed a lump in his throat, and did the next best thing—he let them make their sacrifice and today there goes to Franklin K. Lane,

WIDOW STRUGGLES TO PROTECT LOVED ONES

resistance compared to the good woman's life which is concerned in Opportunity No. 3.

The struggle of a widow to keep clothed and fed three many boys, whose ages are respectively 8, 10 and 12, is hard enough. But when there is added to this burden the responsibility of caring for an invalid father and an aged grandmother, the story is sadder still.

Yet this is the case, and there are few words of complaint. From dawn until late in the night, this mother works at her sewing, her washing, or cooking, at every care, large and small, that arises in caring for her helpless family. Her strength is falling, and it seems a pity that tragedy should be allowed to proceed to its end. It has when $6 dollars more each week for a year will insure comfort for the lady, comfort for the dear old folks and an easier and happier life for the good woman herself.

Other worthy cases in Atlanta's sadder side of life follow:

Opportunity No. 1.

Four little children, all under 9, and an invalid sister require all of this mother's time. The father died of tuberculosis two years ago, leaving a few dollars and a small house. The mother is a widow, and has no income, and were it not for the help of a friend whom the Associated Charities has found for her she would have no shelter. She is struggling along trying to keep the two oldest children in school.

Fifteen dollars a week during the coming year will relieve her mind from financial strain and enable her to care for her sister and little children. Total needed, $750.

Opportunity No. 2.

It's not such a bad world, thinks freckle-faced Jimmie, aged 12. A very godfather will surely help him out, for he wants to go to school. As things are now there are mother and baby sister who need so many things and he feels he must work to help pay the necessities. A pension of $2 a week will help give Jim the education he wants. Needed, $144.

Opportunity No. 3.

A dear old lady and her aged brother live in a tumble-down house which is home to them. The sister, who is 75 years old, sews quilts, which find a ready sale, but with all her sewing she cannot earn enough to make her feeble brother comfortable.

A gift of $5 a week will give them the food and many little things they need and will relieve the sister from financial anxiety. Total, $240.

Opportunity No. 4.

It isn't easy to come home after a day in the factory, go to her mother's for the five children, cook the children's supper, wash their clothing for school next day, besides working to make the small home immaculate and clean. Mrs. M. has been doing this without complaint, for she is ambitious for her youngsters, but the strain is telling on her. Recently friends of the Associated Charities have agreed to supplement her meager wage with $2.25 a week.

Another $5 a week will help feed and clothe the five little ones. Total, $240.

Opportunity No. 5.

"Six months before she can work again," says the doctor who is treating her.

Six months is a long time when a woman is dependent on her own earnings. All of her teeth aches, swollen ankles and almost stone deaf—but she is cheerful and is responding to medical treatment. To speed her recovery a diet of milk and eggs will be necessary and the visits of the renting agent must be met.

Four dollars and seventy-five cents a week will make her comfortable and enable her to regain her lost strength. Total, $230.

Opportunity No. 6.

A mother who is mentally unbalanced—unreasonable and overbearing—is for this reason unable to make a home for her 12-year-old kiddie. On the other hand, the kiddie is bright and wants a chance to go to school.

Three dollars and seventy-five cents a week will enable Associated Charities to place her in a good school where she can start her education while the mother is receiving medical treatment. Needed, $180.

Opportunity No. 7.

Thirteen-year-old Jessie's father works his hardest every day. But a wife who has had pellagra for two years, and four little girls, all of them under-nourished, need more than his maximum earnings.

Jessie comes home from school and cleans the house. She was doing all the family washing in addition until our visitor found some one to do it for her. The doctors now advise a nourishing diet for mother and all four children in order to prevent tuberculosis.

Three dollars and seventy-five cents a week extra will make this possible. Total for the year, $180.

Opportunity No. 8.

Three husky boys, 12-10-8, an invalid father and aged grandmother keep this mother's fingers working busily every day. If only she can keep things going a few years, she says, her boys will have their education and that's the brightest hope in her life.

In the meantime the little mother's brave struggle is too much for her strength. The house rent falls due so regularly and food and clothing are almost beyond her reach.

Six dollars more each week will give the boys good food, will buy a few comforts for the old people and will relieve the mother's mind from strain. Needed, $228.

Opportunity No. 9.

To be hopelessly ill in the hospital and unable to care for his family of seven, seems hard to a man who has always made a splendid work record. He cannot even see the little crippled girl who has just learned to walk.

The oldest boy, not yet 15, has gone to work and continues his studies at night, but his wages, together with the help of relatives, who are in straitened circumstances themselves, is insufficient. An additional $7 weekly will be needed to take care of the family. Total, $356.

Opportunity No. 10.

Being the oldest of five has advantages and disadvantages. Upon John, 19, and Lucy, 16, falls the entire support of the family. The frail mother remains at home getting the younger children off to school and always has the simple supper ready for John and Lucy when they get home from work.

Even with the combined wages of these two, however, there is not enough to cover all the expenses, and these two young people are getting discouraged.

Five dollars a week as a Christmas present will supplement their earnings and make them very happy. Who'll help? Total for the year, $260.

Total required for all opportunities, $2,300.

Contributors will please make all gifts direct to the Associated Charities.

In Wichita, Kas. It has been decided to use the churches as polling places in the future, owing to protest from the women against being obliged to vote in lively saloons, barber shops, undertaker parlors and similar places.

WAYS ARE CONSIDERED TO REOPEN JESUP BANK

Depositors Arrange to Receive Time Certificates for 6 Per Cent Interest.

Jesup, Ga., December 18.—(Special.)—An enthusiastic meeting of the depositors of the Jesup Banking company, recently placed in the hands of the state banking department, was held at the courthouse in Jesup Saturday, when a large number of the depositors were present. Addresses were made by a number of prominent citizens of the county and by the visitors who are interested in keeping the bank out of liquidation.

Colonel Leon A. Wilson, of Waycross, and Judge Max Isaac, of Brunswick, who recently filed a petition to keep the company out of liquidation and on whose application Judge Beverly D. Evans appointed a receiver to hold the assets till the affairs of the bank could be adjusted, spoke, urging the people of the county to stand by their bank interests and thus avoid serious business and financial losses in the county.

R. L. Bennett, Rev. J. H. Bush and Colonel W. B. Gibbs also spoke in favor of the plan of reorganization, and reopening the bank at once. A plan was submitted to the depositors which, if adopted, will result in the reorganization of the bank immediately and avoid further trouble. If the bank is reopened it is to give every depositor time certificates bearing 6 per cent payable in equal installments of six, twelve, eighteen and twenty-four months.

All present agreed to enter into such agreement and a committee composed of Dr. J. T. Colvin, A. J. Nicholls, I. S. Bennett, A. E. Knight and H. L. Heritage, all prominent citizens of the county, were appointed to carry out the plans. Nearly 100 signatures already have been secured to the terms of the arrangement, and it is hoped to get all of the depositors signed up in the course of the next three or four days.

SAVANNAH TO INDICT ST. LOUIS FUGITIVE

Savannah, Ga., December 18.—(Special.)—It is stated here, following the publication of a dispatch from St. Louis, that Aaron Raush, president of the Mercantile Bank of Savannah, had personally identified the man arrested in St. Louis as "John B. Titt," who it is alleged worked local banks to the amount of nearly $20,000, that "Titt" will most likely be indicted by the court here in connection with his alleged fraudulent transactions.

MERCER HEAD NAMED SYSTEM CHANCELLOR

Macon, Ga., December 18.—(Special.)—It is Chancellor Ruger Weaver now and instead of being merely president of Mercer university, he is the head of fourteen Baptist educational institutions in Georgia, which have been united under the name of the Mercer system.

The action making Dr. Weaver chancellor of the system, was taken at the recent meeting of the Georgia Baptist convention in Atlanta. Dr. Weaver is now in Washington fighting the effort of George Washington university to come back under Baptist control, after separation for about fifteen years. Dr. Weaver's fight is in the interest of Mercer and Macon, as he is endeavoring to have the Baptist Theological seminary located here and make Mercer the site of the great Southern Baptist university.

HEISMAN WINS OUT AT PENN

Memphis, Tenn., December 18.—Proposals to raise the salary limit in inauguration of a movement to secure the enactment of stringent laws against betting on baseball games and feasibility of a post-season series with the winners of the Texas league pennant are among matters expected to be discussed at the annual meeting of the Southern Association of Baseball clubs here next Monday.

Tentative plans for a new agreement between the major and minor league representatives in New York also will be submitted to the meeting and the attitude of the association toward the proposed agreement determined. The action taken at the meeting here will govern the stand to be taken by representatives of the organization at the meeting of the national association of minor league clubs in Chicago January 10.

John D. Martin, president of the Southern association, attended the New York conference as the representative of class A leagues, and will submit the plan tentatively agreed upon at that meeting.

According to advices received here an effort probably will be made to raise the salary limit to

The advisability of increasing the waiver price, now fixed at $300, also is expected to be taken up.

Doak Roberts, president of the Texas league, and Paul LaGrave, of the Fort Worth club, will attend the meeting, it was stated, to urge ap-approval of a post-season series between the Southern and Texas league champions. An unofficial series was played last season between the Little Rock and Fort Worth clubs, pennant winners in the two leagues.

The meeting probably will be in session two days.

One innovation that will be laid before the delegates is the draft of a tournament circular to be issued to the association for its members' information, outlining the material that should be included in the announcement of sanctioned tournament. The executive committee, in studying this problem, concluded it was better to have a tournament of four bona fide entries than one of twice* that number in which half the competitors default. Accordingly, it will recommend in its proposed circular that tournament committees consider only those entries which are submitted in writing, accompanied by entry fees.

OUT AT GUN CLUB SHOOT

just how these two players are profitable for the Pitt team of 1921. The fact that the Pitt team has terminated the one-year residence rule in 1921, it would allow a player to play for the Pitt team in college football, which is the same as Pitt's not allowing a college with- out a year's residence in the first year. I look forward with interest to seeing this letter in your paper.

The Explanation. The explanation, "The Sun's" editor replied, "is that the impression is that the Pitt team has terminated this section that Pitt has a rule restricting students to three years in college. This is a grossly mistaken one. Pitt never had a three-year rule, and such a rule is not being adopted. The rule adopted recently and will go into effect next fall. What Pitt did do was to have a three-year residence rule. This merely prohibited freshmen or those coming to college from other colleges from participating in varsity athletics during their first year. It placed no restriction on the number of years a student could play in college more than three years. In fact, Pitt will make the great majority of other colleges look like the 'white niggers' of college football, four years of athletics. A student is in college that long after the three-year rule has been permitted to play. As to 1918, football was conducted that year under the S. A. T. C. and the Panther Athletic management had nothing to do with it. The three-year rule was then, but it did count that year as one of the permissible four against the three-year rule. However, a three-year rule was not established by Pitt, and it is into effect in the fall 1921. It is deemed unfair to apply it to the year already elapsed in college. The fall year a student can play in college football or any other sport more than three years, no matter how long he has been in college, and we were not obliged or required to change the rule. Graduate manager Davis stated that the rule was his own policy, and it makes our college look like the 'white niggers' of the country. Only three or four of the big eastern universities have a marked the work of last season. The champions of other years are remembered for the things they did for their honors, and the writer believes more than one of the 'great ones' of the nation will be remembered will rankle for some time to come. Atlanta is particularly blessed for the basketball line. The first five cities within the city which will provide ample entertainment for the thousands of fans who are demanding an endeavor. In addition, the S. A. T. C. tournament is slated for early February, will bring a large number of fans to the city in the south. This tournament which will be held along the lines of the basketball tournament, will be of the elimination variety, and no squabble is likely to ensue over the championship.

McDonald Not Certain About Next Boat Bill.

John F. McDonald, local fighter promoter and the inventor of the ages, stated last night that he was not certain about the date of the next boat bill. He said that he had intimated that the night of the 23d would see Bill Bailey, of the White Sox, and the Memphis heavyweight, White, the Memphis heavyweight, concerning whom several columnists had written that he would be shoved forth to separate Jack Dempsey from the champion, which the agenting failed to "take," and that "Tah Mauer" is still good as a prizefighter.

Mr. McDonald stated last night that he was interested mostly just to see the fight, and he was not slated to thrill the world shortly, and he appeared confident of the result. He said that he was unquestionably looks good. An associate of Mr. McDonald's is in Atlanta for the purpose of giving the invention of "foot-out" one of the giant engines of the Pennsylvania railway system, and Mr. McDonald said he had been assured by the railroad officials that should the "economizer" prove successful, he and his co-workers will score in the half of the contest. Mercer university's Orange and blue football outfit showed a complete reversal of form and succeeded in finally vanquishing the fast Columbia Y. M. C. A. aggregation in the new city auditorium here tonight by the score of 32 to 10.

One of the best line-ups which has been seen in Macon this season and was attended by a seemingly very large crowd, was the game which was kept on its toes throughout by the fast and scrappy work of the opposing teams. The game was evenly matched in the first half of the battle, but which soon became Mercer's. The game was staged by "Big Eddie" Whitehead and "Smoko" Harper starred for Mercer. The game was a straffer were best for the victors.

DICK RUDOLPH SLATED TO LEAVE THE BRAVES

Boston, December 18.—Dick Rudolph, the little masher who was one of the trio that pitched the Braves out of the ruck to a league and National League club, is probably will leave the team. He has been given authority by President Charles E. Felt to prepare for his transfer. It is understood that he seeks to join the Detroit Tigers. Rudolph has just received on the spring training trip that the Braves and Tigers made a deal for him. Rudolph desires to take a fling at American league baseball. It is understood that the National league clubs will be necessary before he can negotiate with Detroit directly.

Need Communion. His conversation with the writer last night, Mr. McDonald brought out the necessity of putting Georgia boxing under the jurisdiction of a fight commission, stating that the game would never be placed on a satisfactory plane unless such steps were taken by the lawmakers of the state.

"I have attempted to give Atlanta fans the sort of boxing any commission would approve of," Mr. McDonald said, "but it's an awful task to satisfy every fan, and I realize that in some quarters my efforts have been criticized. A boxing commission in my belief, would assert a powerful influence on the promoters, the fighters and the public. The result would bring the three parties closer together, and great exhibitions would be the rule and not the exception."

Football Schedules Strong With But Few Exceptions.

With only scattered exceptions, the football schedules of southern colleges for next year, are very hard, and gridiron followers will be treated to brilliant exhibitions. Alabama and Vanderbilt have both failed to add hard games to their Vandy's case no effort is being made to conceal the fact that the Commodore's expected a world's best team next fall and will be content to emerge with only one or two defeats.

The University of Georgia has added Harvard and Vanderbilt, in addition to her dates with Virginia, Auburn and Alabama, which should give the Bulldogs a pretty busy season. Georgia Tech with Notre Dame, Penn State, Auburn, Georgetown and others, having the hardest schedule of any southern college, and if she comes through unscathed, it's hard to sum the titular claims she could put forward.

Ty Cobb Is Ideal Leader for Tigers.

The Associated Press dispatches, which flashed the tidings concerning Ty Cobb and his new managerial burdens, were pleasing to thousands of friends of the "Georgia Peach," who had been led to believe that this deserved tribute would not be paid Ty Cobb. Cobb is ideally suited for the place, and under his direction the Tigers should emerge from the lowly position they maintained during the past season.

Cobb has been in baseball for many years; he possesses intelligence well above that of the average baseball player, and during his long experience, he has certainly made many observations, that will prove of value in the battle he will wage to carry the Detroit machine back to its rightful place among the leaders of the American league. Ty hasn't begun to slip, despite the fact that he failed to lead the pack last year, and he will prove of value in ways other than that of pilot. This Speaker disapproved the theory that a player-manager was out of the running in the big leagues, and we cannot believe that Ty Cobb will fail.

Red Crescents In Scrappy Practice For Basket Squad

The manager of the Red Crescents sent out word Friday afternoon for all case recruits to be present at the Adair Park court at 3 o'clock Saturday, but when he arrived at the park at 1:30 what could he see but a bunch of youngsters that would outnumber an army already on the court showing each other what they had in the line of basketball.

The coach first picked out two teams and started them in a hard scrimmage which lasted for about an hour. Most of the men showed up well, but some would keep on with football tactics until Coach Peek put several of them out of the game, after which practice went on nicely.

The Red Crescents are planning to have two teams, a regular and a scrub. The most likely candidates for positions are: Wall and Haney at center, Peek, Lott, T. Knight and Pharr at guard, Lester and B. Lott at forward and several other promising players whose names were not learned.

In the scrimmage that was held yesterday afternoon the team composed of Peek, Pharr, Haney and Lester defeated a team composed of Lott, B. Lott, Wall and T. Knight by the score of 16 to 2. Practice will be held for the remainder of the year and games with several of the strongest high school teams in the state will commence on January 1. Anyone wishing a game will communicate with Coach Peek at Main 1259-W.

G. M. C. Celebrates Season of Victory A Splendid Feast

Milledgeville, Ga., December 18.—(Special).—The annual banquet of the G. M. C. football team and their friends was held Wednesday evening at the Blue Bird tea-house. Covers were laid for forty-five. The menu was a regular turkey dinner served by beautiful young ladies of the city, in old-fashion southern style.

Colonel Kyle T. Alfriend, president of the college, served as toastmaster in a most delightful and pleasing manner. Toasts were given by Judge John T. Allen, Mayor Miller S. Bell, Captain R. G. Cousley, Coach Bonner and Assistant Coach Edwards, Captain Warren and Captain-elect Slack, Alternate Captain Reid and many other players.

The interesting event of the evening was the presentation by Colonel Alfriend of the sweater to the seventeen varsity men. They are Black, Hines, Stiles, Warren, Reid, Howard, Thomas, Wilkins, Balesden, Butts, Slack, Bass, B. Dunn, Fred Dunn, Evenderidge, Fowler and Banks.

Presents were also given to Coach Bonner and Assistant Coach Edwards for their faithful and excellent services. G. M. C. believes that no school has a better coach than Bonner of Auburn.

Nearly all the team will return next year, and the college looks forward with the greatest pleasure to the season of 1921. With nearly all the varsity back and a strong second team to pick from, Bonner will lead a winner to victory.

CAIRO QUINTET AGAIN BEATS CAMILLA TEAM

Cairo, Ga., December 18.—(Special).—The Cairo basketball team went to Camilla last night, and again gave the Camilla Ramblers a beating by the score of 25 to 19. Cairo won the game throughout, and beaten here by the score of 45 to 26, the Ramblers came back last night and played a good game. The Cairo team is open for games with any good Y. M. C. A. teams and any worthy of a game with any team.

ONE DATE IS MISSING ON MERCER SCHEDULE

Macon, December 18.—Coach Josh Cody, of Mercer university, tonight announced the Mercer 1921 football schedule, consisting of eight games with one open date to be filled. The schedule, September 24, open; October 1, Georgia in Athens; October 8, Vanderbilt in Nashville; October 15, Florida in Macon; October 22, Birmingham Southern in Macon; October 29, Camp Benning in Macon; November 5, Furman, place undetermined; November 12, Oglethorpe in Macon; November 19, Chattanooga in Macon.

HIGHWAY REPORTS

The weather bureau prepared Saturday the following report on the condition of highways:

1. Atlanta-Rome or Dalton-Chattanooga. The route is now generally fair to very good, though still rough in some places. The Austell-Rockhart route to Rome is still rough, and the Bankhead Highway about one mile east of Mableton is bad, automobiles should detour.

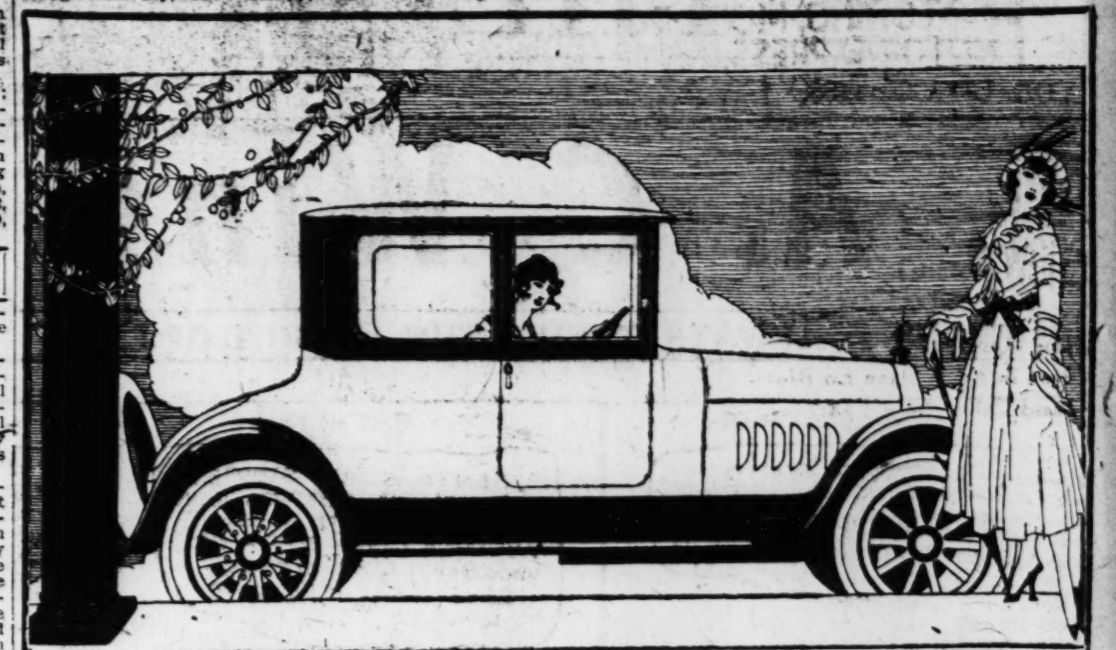

2. Atlanta-Athens or Madison-Augusta. Most roads are somewhat rough and bumpy and need scraping. Through Greensboro getting in good shape, having been recently dragged. The Tallulah Falls route is improving slowly and is passable for light cars. Roads out of Gainesville drying out fast, but have some bad holes. To Buford and Dahlonega bad, with cuts, but can be traveled. Fair to Commerce and Jefferson.

3. Atlanta-Macon-Southern. All roads are dry and passable, but a bit rough. Detour between Barnesville and Milner on account of road work. 4. Atlanta-Newnan-Columbus. Rough and dry, but passable. may be considered now generally fair. Forecast for the period December 20 to December 25, 1920: Washington, December 18.—Generally fair and cool weather is indicated for the week, but with probability of rain Tuesday or Wednesday.—Bowe.

THE DUESENBERG EIGHT SHOWN AT N. Y. SALON

New Car Has Eight Cylinders in Row, Case En Block and Other New Features.

Some of the most interesting engineering features developed in racing cars are incorporated in a new American-built automobile which was recently displayed at the New York salon.

This car, the Duesenberg Straight Eight, has a single-block vertical eight-cylinder engine and hydraulically operated four-wheel brakes. The principles it embodies were worked out during the war by the well-known racing car designer, Duesenberg Brothers, of Elizabeth, N. J., and have been demonstrated in a practical way by the Duesenberg racing cars. Including the holder of the world's speed record for a land vehicle.

As the eight-cylinder engine has a bore of 2-7/8 and a stroke of 5 inches, it is as compact as most sizes, the overall length of the cylinder block being only 30 inches. An overhead camshaft actuates the valves, which are inclined in the cylinder head. Aluminum is used whenever practical to reduce weight. The four-wheel braking system is particularly interesting, as it is the first example of a construction of this kind on a stock American car. When the pedal is applied all is forced from a master cylinder, on the central cross member of the frame, through distributing lines to an actuating piston and cylinder unit on the expanding sectors of each individual brake. The oil lead to each front wheel brake is machined in the axle forging and taken through the steering pivot. This eliminates all connections and joints.

When the pedal is released the return springs withdraw the sectors from the brake drums. In the event of a highly improbable leakage or breakage in any one of the oil lines leading to the individual brakes, a floating piston valve instantly closes the opening to that line, thus preventing loss of oil and rendering the other brakes in operation.

The car has a wheelbase of 134 inches; long, low and sporty in appearance. The Duesenberg Automobile and Motors company, Inc., promises start quantity production of these cars at its Indianapolis plant early in March or April.

Florida Crowded With Tourists From Every Point of Compass; Roads Possibly Best in South

The motors and highways department of The Constitution today presents on this page an up-to-the-minute map of Florida highways, and a few by-ways—which, when taken in connection with last Sunday's map, will give complete and accurate routings and road information from Atlanta to almost any point in Florida.

branches or by The Constitution, given by any of the Goodrich Jacksonville-Miami.

The East Coast route from Jacksonville to Miami and intermediate points is possibly in better condition than any other similar stretch of road in the southeast. Jacksonville to Daytona, 114 miles, is all fair, with some excellent brick and shell surfaces. Though in places some of the ebble are loose, they do not seriously interfere with travel at a fairly good speed.

About six miles of sand will be encountered between Burnell and Daytona, but not sufficiently heavy to make travel difficult. Daytona to Palm Beach, 164 miles, ranges from excellent to fair, and from Palm Beach to Miami, 68.3 miles, is fine. The total 378.7 miles from Jacksonville to Miami is, as a whole, in fine condition, and is possibly favored with more tourists than any other stretch of road in Florida.

Daytona to Tampa. Dayton to Tampa is not shown in full on the accompanying map, but is good to fair, except about ten miles of sand in the vicinity of Orange City. The best route is via DeLand, Orange City, Sanford, Orlando, Kissimmee, Haines City, Lakeland, Plant City, Orlando to Tampa. It is indicated in today's map. LAKE CITY TO TAMPA—S.

There are two routes being used from Lake City to Tampa. Both being the same from Orlando. The route via High Springs, Gainesville, Ocala, Lake Weir, Eustis, Apopka to Orlando has the advantage of being much the shorter of the two, but the disadvantage of road conditions. On this route between Lake City and Gainesville will be found about forty miles of poor roads, mostly sand, with about fifteen miles of fair road of gravel or crushed rock, and from Gainesville to Orlando a variety of surfaces; sand, sand, clay, asphalt and brick, all in fair to good condition. The route via Jacksonville and Daytona is good to excellent, except the stretch from Lake City to Jacksonville, which is sand and under repair. This route has the advantage of shortening in Jacksonville, St. Augustine and Daytona, along the east coast. Both routes from Orlando are the same as the Daytona to Tampa route given above, and the Jacksonville route is the same as the Jacksonville-Miami route to Daytona.

Fort Pierce to Tampa. Fort Pierce to Tampa indicated on the map, is over fair woods territory and for the most part unimproved, but is passable. From Fort Pierce to Okeechobee will be found 8 miles of asphalt and 28 miles of sand clay. Okeechobee to Seabring unimproved, but not difficult. From Seabring to Lakeland will be found a variety of surfaces all ranging from fair to good. Lakeland to Tampa, which are given above.

Lower Roads Shown.

West Palm Beach to Ocala is bad, and is not recommended for a "joy ride." Miami to the west coast is difficult. In fact, is under construction and almost impassable. Fort Myers to Tampa via Arcadia and Lakeland is fair and passable.

Atlanta to Jacksonville.

The route to Jacksonville from Atlanta remains about the same as stated and mapped last Sunday. Of the three possible routes, via Waycross, is still decidedly the favorite not only because it is much the shortest, but because it is in better condition.

It is still impossible to go via Savannah and Brunswick, owing to poor roads, but chiefly to the fact that there is no possible method of crossing the Altamaha river at Darien.

Effect of Rainfall.

Rainfall has only a slight effect upon Florida roads, as the Florida sand has an insatiable appetite for water, and drinks it up almost as fast as it falls. Where the road surface is of sand, a rainfall has a decided beneficial effect, and serves to pack the sand and give a temporary hard surface.

Many Tourists. Many of them report the greatest number of tourists in Florida this season in history. The number of tourists using automobiles or bicycles and camping outfits is remarkable, but the hotels are coming in for the full share of patronage. Many of them opening much earlier than in former seasons are already filled to capacity.

Almost every road and every little hamlet in Florida is dotted by camps of "motor tourists" from every walk of life and from every state in the union, including a certain state from the Pacific coast that is conceded to manufacture and distribute more concentrated hot air regarding their climate and roads than any other state in the union.

Ten-Mile Creek. Ten-Mile creek between Fort Pierce and Okeechobee is said to be the most delightful fishing place in Florida. "Red" Parrish says you can scoop 'em out with your hands, but that it is not recommended as a place for hook and line, as one soon tires of taking 'em off the hook. This is the only fish story he brought back from a thorough investigation of all Florida roads.

Roger Bresnahan, owner of the Toledo team, in the American association, has started a hunt for players to give Toledo a winner. Roger wants to give the city a pennant winner, then sell his holdings and get out of baseball. His club is said to have made nearly $50,000 clear last season.

STORE-DOOR DELIVERY TO GET FINAL TEST

Federal Highway Council Thoroughly Test Motor Terminal Possibilities.

Super-costly freight terminals, delayed tonnage and losses which fol-lowed in the wake of freight congestion, are economic evils which are to be "scrapped" under plans now being worked out by the transportation committee of the federal highway council.

At a meeting of this committee in New York under the chairmanship of W. J. L. Banham, general traffic manager of the Otis Elevator company, traffic managers from all important centers of industry were in attendance. It was decided after due deliberation to "draw" one or more cities in the United States and put what is known as store-door delivery to a final test. Such form of delivery, it was explained, was the use of the motor truck and highway in conveying freight direct to the door of the consignee, instead of allowing tonnage to accumulate in warehouses, thus adding to congestion and financial loss which ultimately come out of the consumer's pocket.

Definite action was taken by the adoption of a resolution, presented by J. C. Lincoln, manager of the Automobile Manufacturers Association, outlining the store-door delivery system as tested in that city. The motor truck in terminal work was presented by B. F. Fitch, president of the Motor Terminal company, of Cleveland, Ohio, which company has successfully established at Cincinnati a system of auxiliary transportation that promises practical relief to other cities. Other phases of highway transportation were covered by S. M. Williams, chairman of the federal highway council; David Beecroft, of the Class Journal company, of New York; J. H. Collins, manager of the research department, Chilton company, Philadelphia.

Prior to the adoption of the resolution A. E. Beck, general traffic manager of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association at Baltimore, outlined the store-door delivery system as tested in that city.

Mr. Beecroft's committee, in addition to furthering the making of adequate transportation surveys and establishing proper control of highway traffic, took up the subject of snow removal as an essential item in highway maintenance with the result that definite recommendations were made to the American Association of State Highway Officials, in annual meeting in Washington.

Rural Express Report. The committee of which Mr. Collins is chairman, reported on its study of the rural motor express. Better farm transportation is the essential aim of this committee and to attain its purpose a study is being made covering franchisees, insurance, uniform receipts and bill of lading, marketing and return loads. Progress toward a standardization of this form of farm transportation was reported.

The transportation committees of the federal highway council includes representatives of the railroads—steam and electric—express companies, waterways, highways, leading traffic men and highway officials.

This alphabetical list of local automotive sales and service agencies will hereafter be a regular feature of The Constitution, and is used because of its acknowledged value to the motorist and the automobile trade.

By referring to this page which will in the future be used every Sunday, the out-of-town car owner, the tourist, the out-of-town garage owner or dealer can find with the least possible effort, the place that can give him authorized service on the various automotive products. The firms represented here will take an interest in giving the right kind of service at the right time, and are in position to care for out-of-town orders for parts, as well as supply their respective products.

Lottridge Heads Atlanta Auto Dealers' Association

The annual banquet and business session of the Atlanta Automobile Association, held at the Capital City club Saturday evening, was attended by approximately 150 members and guests, and was one of the best officers to serve for the coming year, though there was plenty of amusement.

Officers For 1921.

The officers elected to serve this body during 1921 are: President, John Lottridge, of the John Lottridge Motor Sales company; Vice president, D. C. Black, of Black & Maffett; second vice president, "Jimmie" Fraser, of the Walraven company; secretary, Al Belle Isle, Ford dealer; treasurer, W. J. Kallis, of the Southern Nash Motor company, who, with J. H. Taylor, of the Taylor Motor company, and F. H. Hill, Jr., of the Hill-Holden company, will form the board of directors for the coming year.

John Lottridge in his speech of acceptance pleaded for the support of every member of the association and pledged himself to give his best efforts toward the interests of the association. Those who know his record for performance as a member of the board of directors during the past several years feel highly pleased that he has been chosen to pilot this association known for its accomplishments, during the coming year.

JOHN LOTTRIDGE.

The election of every officer and director was unanimous on the first ballot, and it is highly improbable that a better body of men could have been chosen to handle the destinies of the association.

Returning President John E. Smith, in his report to the association, recounted the accomplishments of the association for the past year and outlined unfinished work to be taken over by the incoming officers. He expressed a wish that the association would during the coming year take a more active part in civic movements, and push to a successful conclusion many matters that have been started in the past.

He praised the board of directors and executive secretary who served with him, and the chairman of the various committees appointed by him for their devotion to their tasks, and congratulated them upon the high degree of success that has awarded their efforts.

Presented With Token.
The association presented Mr. Smith with a beautiful silver pitcher as a token of their appreciation of his faithful service during the year and the untiring effort which he has put forth to further the interests of the association and its members during his term of office, and with this most beautiful of tokens, he was given a rising vote of appreciation and three rousing cheers.

The Entertainments.
"Jack" Lewis and "Law" Hicks are acknowledged connoisseurs of all things epicurean and otherwise required to make a success of a banquet and entertainment, but they exceeded their past performances in the entertainment provided for the association Saturday evening.

The opening number of the program was a one-act "drama" written by local talent—the suspicion is laid upon Messrs. Hicks and Lewis—entitled, "The Resurrection of Mr. Opp." This master of masterpieces reproduced elsewhere on this page for the benefit of those who care to learn more about the adventures of the said Mr. Opp—timism, who has been dead for months but is mysteriously resurrected by the say party.

The second number on the program was a classical Spanish dance by Helen McDonald, who appeared in Atlanta as the leader of the Metropolitan opera ballet at the Auditorium three years ago.

This number was given unusual applause, not only because of the merit of the act, but because of the fact that Mrs. McDonald and her husband are now residents of Atlanta.

Misses Annie Mae Coleman and Ethel Kelley, possibly won the greatest applause of the evening in their "ballet de GMC" and other numbers. This number also was provided by local talent and was conceded to be one of the best numbers of the program. A solo by a professional and several numbers by the Georgia Tech four were by no means a small part of the program, but it was left to the association's own Wylie West as Alex-

EIGHT GAMES SLATED FOR TRINITY ELEVEN

Durham, N. C., December 15.—

Eight games will be played by Trinity college's football team next season, the schedule for which has just been announced. The most interesting game will probably be that on Thanksgiving-day with Wofford college with which team Trinity played a tie last month. The schedule follows:

October 1, open; October 8, Guilford College at Durham; October 15, Randolph-Macon College at Durham; October 22, Emory and Henry College at Emory, Va.; October 29, Elon College at Durham; November 5, William and Mary College (pending) at Durham; November 11, Wake Forest College at Raleigh; November 24, Wofford College at Spartanburg, S. C.

The board of review of the National Trotting association will meet in New York city December 7 to decide the many questions brought up for consideration.

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL CAR IN AMERICA

POWER is an essential attribute of the really satisfactory motor car. It makes driving a joyous, care free recreation instead of a stern duty.

Power is also a factor of safety. It responds promptly to the Traffic Officer's whistle while the "sluggish" car lingers in the jam behind.

You need power—make no mistake about that. And you will find it in abundance with the new five passenger "Glenbrook" model.

From five to twenty-five miles per hour in nine seconds flat—that is standard performance of this keen spirited car. Have a ride—just one—and you will know the rest of the story.

Why Leland Standards of Precision mean longer life in the

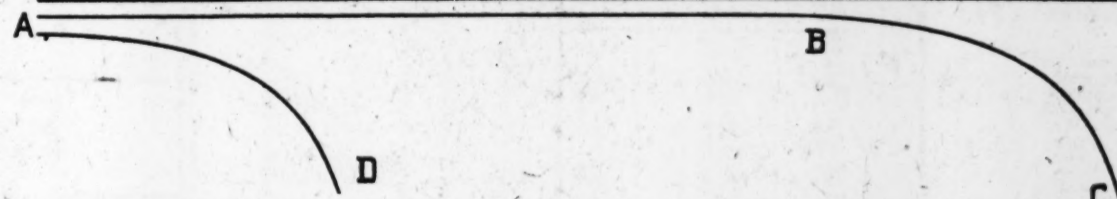

To produce a motor car whose parts are made with greater precision than ever before, is a purpose inspired not only by the satisfaction to be derived from a work well done, but also by the determination to build the finest car of which human skill is capable; because that means a car of longer life and of lower maintenance; it means a car that is smoother and more delightful in its ways of going; and, too, because it is nothing more nor less than sound commercial policy.

Precision, for mere precision's sake alone, however, is of little value; but precision for the sake of what precision means and does, is of value almost incalculable.

Precision, in a sense, is purely relative. A limit of tolerance which in one piece of mechanism would be amply precise, might be grossly ill-fitting in another.

A thousandth of an inch is approximately one-third the thickness of a hair from your head, and ordinarily is regarded as a fine and close degree of accuracy; but a limit so liberal as a thousandth of an inch in an operation which warrants a limit of only a quarter of a thousandth, might prove disastrous.

In the diagram, let the first straight line represent unlimited miles of travel, and let the second straight line represent limitless qualities of car endurance. This would be an ideal condition. It would mean a motor car in whose parts there would be no wear; hence if wear were the only factor with which to contend, the car would endure forever.

In an internal combustion engine, the parts subjected to impact, or hammer-like blows, must endure the most rigorous punishment—parts such as wrist-pins, connecting-rod bearings and crankshaft bearings. The more nearly these are made to approach the consistency of a solid piece, and with a film of oil between have no more than just sufficient freedom to permit their turning, the greater will be their wear resistance.

As a specific example, we will cite a wrist-pin and its bearing in the upper end of the connecting-rod, where it attaches to the piston. In the Leland-built Lincoln car, these are made with an extreme tolerance of three ten-thousandths of an inch (about one-tenth the thickness of a hair from your head).

Fitting so perfectly, they should withstand millions upon millions of explosion impacts before there is perceptible effect, or before the space between the wrist-pin and its bearing becomes enlarged even a thousandth of an inch.

On the other hand, if parts were made so loosely as to have even a thousandth of an inch too much freedom at the outset, then they would immediately have entered the period of serious wear and early destruction.

These conditions are illustrated in the diagram. When parts are made to the correct degree of accuracy in the beginning, their usefulness extends over the long period shown from A to B, before they even enter the period of serious wear as shown by the line from B to C. But if those parts are not made sufficiently accurate, they commence to deteriorate immediately and decline rapidly as shown by the sharp decline in the curve from A to D.

In the Leland-built Lincoln car, there are many thousands of fine and close mechanical operations. This does not imply so many thousands of parts, because oftentimes there are many operations upon a single part, the degree of precision in these various operations depending upon conditions and upon the function involved.

With what is recognized as one of the world's finer work-shops, having an equipment whose equal we have never known, and with an organization trained in Leland standards, it is scarcely a subject for conjecture that the makers of the Lincoln car will accomplish their purpose.

And that purpose, as we have said, is to build a finer, a smoother, a more enduring, a more dependable, a more comfortable riding car—regardless of road conditions—than has ever been made before.

Rail Stocks Reviewed; Gossip of Wall Street

BY R. L. BARNUM.

New York, December 18.—Railroad stocks advanced from 10 to 300 per cent or more between 1st and 10th of August, when it was learned that the record-breaking increases in freight and passenger rates were to be granted, and the first week of November. Even after the industrial shares began their sensational decline on November 3, the day following the election, some railway stocks continued to advance to new high records for the year.

But last week the rails joined the industrial in the downward price swing. At this week's low prices, railroad shares began their sensational advance, and the high levels reached in November, from 10 to 25 points or more.

Here, for example, is the low level for 1920 for a half-dozen low and high-priced rails which was established early in the year, with the advances made to the high for November and then the decline up to the opening of this week:

	Low for 1920	High for 1920	Low for 1920	High for 1920
Atchafalpa & West	1/2	2 1/2	11	24 1/2
Atchafalpa	1/2	2 1/2	11	24 1/2
Atchafalpa	1/2	2 1/2	11	24 1/2
Atchafalpa	1/2	2 1/2	11	24 1/2
Atchafalpa	1/2	2 1/2	11	24 1/2
Atchafalpa	1/2	2 1/2	11	24 1/2

Rate Increase. When the rate increases were issued last summer even railroad officials confessed agreeable surprise at the liberality shown by the interstate commerce commission. On all sides it was declared that Congress through the new transportation act had issued a mandate to the commission to establish freight and passenger rates at a level that would bring in 6 per cent on the property account of individual railroads; that the rates just named by the commission would bring in the desired results; that the troubles of the railroads were over.

That is why the shares of the railroads advanced violently between the late summer and the middle of November. But around the period last named the earnings statements of the individual companies began to show a first month after the government guarantee, began to come in, these statements were a great disappointment. Some companies did not earn even their operating expenses.

This poor showing was attributed to the fact that a great deal of freight was handled during the month that had been started in August, before the higher rates became effective; to the charging off of back wages increases; to the action of some state commissions in refusing to grant the higher rates on intrastate business; to higher maintenance allowances on a return to private management. Undoubtedly all of these temporary factors were at work. But the returns for October, which have been coming to hand for the past fortnight, do not show the promised improvement.

And what is worse, railroad officials report that the advance private statements for November, because of a sharp shrinkage in merchandise traffic, show a decided falling off in gross; that operating expenses are not declining with gross; that the falling off in gross will be more marked when the seasonal rush of grain, cotton, etc., is over.

Net Income. What will then happen to railway net income? The answer is found in the experience of the past. On November 10, 1916, James J. Hill in pleading for more freight cars, said that the railroads for the year of half the consequence of this one.

June 30, 1916, the gross earnings of the railroads increased $249,000,000 compared with 1915 to a new high record of $2,108,000,000—the increase was so much money being offered that the country was experiencing the worst congestion of traffic in its history. For 1917 there was another increase in gross earnings of $196,000,000.

But then something unexpected happened. Business suddenly began to fade away. For 1918 there was a shrinkage in gross earnings of no less than $301,000,000. What was far worse operating expenses did not decline with gross. For 1919 with the increase of $209 in gross the increase in net was only $12; for 1920 while gross increased $194, net actually was smaller by $4,500,000; for 1918 the loss in net mounted up to $53,000,000.

Unexpected Happenings. Then again something unexpected happened. For 1919 gross was up to a new high record of $3,533,000,000, an increase of 12 per cent, while net showed a gain of $146,000,000, or nearly 20 per cent. Faced with a condition that demanded development of operating efficiency, railway officials and employees took off their coats and went to work.

Co-operative Markets For Farm Produce Urged at Conference

St. Louis, December 18.—Plans for carrying on the various co-operative agencies through which it is proposed to produce of the nation were under consideration here today at the final session of the conference of agricultural representatives, called by the national board of farm organizations.

Delegates viewed the action taken by the conference yesterday in endorsing the plan of co-operative organizations to handle grain and live stock as important steps in aiding the farming industry.

Preventing entire crops from being put on the market at one time was asserted as one of the main reasons for the conference.

SYRIAN PRINCESS TO SING IN ROBES OF PAST CENTURY

Rahme Halder, a Syrian princess, who was born in Basbek, a little town at the foot of Mount Lebanon, fifty miles south of Damascus, will sing at the Baptist Tabernacle next Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock, and will sing the songs of her native land.

She will wear robes of Royal Damascus blue satin, hand-made by the girls of Damascus after an ancient style. Some of the robes have been in her family for over 100 years. All are embroidered in gold designs that have poetic significance. A large medallion on the front panel of the robes is the monogram of the Sultan Abdul Hamid. In the border of the gown is woven the story of vanquished kings of ancient history, reaching back to the time of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. On the sleeves, copied after the style of the Ishmaelite robes, are embroidered many maxims.

In her girlhood Rahme Halder went to a Presbyterian school at Sidon, near Tyre. She decided to come to the United States to continue her education, and entered Denison university at Granville, Ohio, where she remained two years. Afterward she graduated from the Baptist Theological seminary at Chicago.

BUSSEY HAS FAIR CHANCE FOR LIFE, DOCTORS REPORT

F. S. Bussey, 22, taxi driver who was shot twice in the abdomen by G. G. Miller, motorman for the Georgia Railway and Power company, Friday night at the corner of Houston and Courtland streets, has a fairly good chance for recovery, according to physicians at the Grady hospital Saturday night, who reported that the wounded man was resting comfortably and seems to have stood an operation very nicely.

BRUISED BY TRUCK, HIS MOTHER ASKS RELEASE OF NEGRO

John McQuire, aged 18, of 805 1/2 Marietta street, sustained bruises and scratches about the head and body late Saturday afternoon when he was struck at Marietta street and Sellwood avenue by a truck after he had alighted from a Marietta street car. The mother of the young man requested that no case be made against the negro driver, as she was convinced, she said, that the accident was unavoidable. McQuire was taken to his home for medical treatment.

GAINES RESIGNS AS LIBRARY HEAD FOR NEW OFFICE

W. W. Gaines, president of the Carnegie library board from the third ward, has submitted his resignation to Mayor Key, who will transmit it to city council Monday afternoon. Mr. Gaines resigned from the board to assume the position of commissioner on the board of education, having been elected from the second school district. His resignation is effective January 1, when he takes up his duties as a member of the board of education.

AUTOS ARE DAMAGED IN SMASH SATURDAY

A collision Saturday afternoon at Ponce de Leon avenue and North Jackson street between the automobile of Dr. J. G. Gaines, Jr., of the Junior street, and that of T. G. Gaines, of 4 Ripley drive, resulted in the destruction of the latter vehicle and Mr. Parker being arrested on charges of being drunk and recklessly driving an automobile.

IMPORTANT MATTERS NOW FACING COUNCIL

Free Sunday Movies, Ormewood Annexation and Traffic Laws Feature.

A resolution to permit free Sunday movies in the auditorium, proposed changes in the traffic law to permit parking downtown, and a favorable report by the street committee on annexation of Ormewood park into the corporate limits of Atlanta, are three important matters on city council's crowded calendar for Monday afternoon.

Free Sunday movies is favored by the auditorium committee of council, which will introduce the resolution. If council adopts it, the free entertainment program will be given four Sundays following January 1, and will include moving pictures, an organ recital, vocal music and community singing, and will be given under the following conditions:

The entire program to be inspected and approved by a committee of five or more citizens to be appointed by the mayor, such approval to be made by written report at least one week before the entertainment.

All entertainments to comply with existing ordinances and no charge to be made nor any contribution nor collection to be taken or provided for.

Nothing to be sold on the premises at or during the entertainment. At the expiration of the four entertainments, the question of continuing them will be determined by the auditorium committee.

The plan for Sunday movies is sponsored by John A. Manget, Julian Bohm and Victor H. Krieshaber and is favored by Mayor Key. At a public hearing before the auditorium committee Friday morning, the proposal met strenuous opposition from representatives of the clergy.

The question of traffic changes will be brought up in the form of an adverse report from the ordinance committee on an amendment sponsored by the Atlanta Woman's club, the Atlanta Retail Merchants association and the Atlanta Auto-

GAS SITUATION TO BE DISCUSSED IN SECOND WARD

Citizens of the second ward, it was announced Saturday, will hold a meeting to protest against the poor quality of gas being furnished in that section, and the application of the Atlanta Gas Light company for an increase in rates at 7:30 o'clock next Thursday night at the Georgia Avenue school.

Mayor Key, it was stated, has accepted an invitation to speak at the meeting. Preliminary plans for the meeting were arranged Friday night at a meeting of the Second ward improvement club.

A following committee was named to participate: J. O. Wood, J. F. Scott, H. T. Robinson, T. Nolan, Fred C. Manoe, Gus Grant, J. M. Kaywood and S. F. Alken. Mrs. Fred C. Manoe was selected chairman of the woman's committee, and is to invite a number of women to assist her in the program for the meeting.

POSTAL THIEVES ELUDE OFFICERS; NO CLUES FOUND

No clue as to the identity of the thieves who Friday night looted the railway mail station, postoffice and dormitory of Emory university, had been found by the postoffice inspectors and county authorities at a late hour Saturday night.

The loss is estimated to range from $100 to $300 in money, stamps and other valuables, which will include the amount taken from the Marshall and Pendergast pharmacy, located next door to the postoffice.

OFFICERS ELECTED FOR KIBLA TEMPLE

Election of officers for 1921 was an important action taken at a recent meeting of Kibla Temple of Khorassan, during which the last ceremonial of the year was held. A number of candidates were initiated and plans were discussed for the

U. S. Marines Cleared Of Serious Charges By Court of Inquiry

No Basis, Says Report, for Charge of Indiscriminate Killing of Haitians.
Court Gives Clean Bill of Health.

Washington, December 18.—(By the Associated Press.)—The naval court of inquiry which investigated the conduct of marines in Haiti reported to Secretary Daniels today that there "had been no proper grounds" for the statement by Brigadier General George Barnett, former commandant of the marine corps, that the American occupation forces had been guilty of "practically indiscriminate killing" of Haitians.

After careful survey of conditions the court, presided over by Rear Admiral Henry T. Mayo, found that General Barnett's charges were "ill-considered, regrettable and thoroughly unwarranted reflections" on the work of the marine corps in Haiti, adding that the corps had performed difficult, dangerous and delicate duty worthy of the highest commendation.

Evidence Insufficient.

The marines virtually were given a clean bill by the court, which declined to recommend trial by court-martial of Freeman Lang, of Los Angeles, and Dorcas Williams, of Birmingham, Ala., charged by native witnesses at the Port au Prince hearing with the murder of Haitians. Indeed, the Lang and Williams cases were not mentioned, and naval officials explained that this meant that evidence against them was not deemed sufficient to demand criminal prosecution.

In all "isolated" cases of unjustifiable conduct by marines the court found that disciplinary action already had been taken.

The findings, as made public, were approved by Secretary Daniels and Major General John A. Lejeune, commandant of the marine corps.

Court's Findings.

The court finds that two unjustifiable homicides have been committed, one each by two of the personnel of the United States naval service which has served in Haiti since the 25th of July, 1915, and that sixteen other serious acts of violence have been perpetrated against citizens of Haiti during the same period by individuals of such personnel.

The court finds further that these offenses were all isolated acts of individuals and that in every case the responsible party was duly brought to trial before a general court-martial, convicted and sentenced.

The court has found no evidence of the commission of any other unjustifiable homicides or other serious unjustifiable acts of oppression or of violence against any of the citizens of Haiti or unjustifiable damage or destruction of their property caused by any of the personnel in question.

In view of the fact that the only unjustifiable acts found by the court be have been committed are those wherein disciplinary action has already been taken and where no further proceedings could be had in the matter, the court has not deemed it necessary to report further upon the question of responsibility.

Conclusions.

Referring to paragraph 2 of the report, it is the conclusion of the court that there have been no proper grounds for the statement that "practically indiscriminate killing of natives has been going on for some time," as alleged in the letter from Brigadier General George Barnett, United States marine corps, to Colonel John H. Russell, United States marine corps.

Referring to the amendment to the precept, calling for the conclusions of the court as to the general conduct of the personnel of the naval service in Haiti since July 25, 1915, the court does not consider that the small number of isolated crimes, or offenses that have been committed by a few individuals of the service during the period in question are entitled to any considerable weight in forming a conclusion as to the general conduct of such personnel. It was inevitable that some offenses would be committed. However, considering the conditions of service in Haiti, it is remarkable that the offenses were so few in number and that they all may be chargeable to the defects of human character, such defects as result in the commission of similar offenses in the United States and elsewhere in the best regulated communities.

Results Cited.

The general conduct of our troops of occupation can be fairly judged by the results of that occupation. Now for the first time in more than a hundred years tranquility and security of life and property may be said to prevail in Haiti.

The Haitian people themselves welcomed the coming of our men, and are unwilling to have them depart.

The establishment and maintenance of tranquil conditions and the security of life and property all over the republic of Haiti has been an arduous and dangerous and thankless task. That task our marines have performed with fidelity and great gallantry.

The court cannot refrain from recording its opinion of much, and that the most serious part, of the reflections which have been made upon the officers who have served in Haiti.

The outstanding characteristic of those officers, from the brigade commander down, has been their sympathetic attitude toward every step that would lead to a betterment of the country and to improvement in the physical, mental and moral conditions of the population.

With slender resources and inadequate administrative authority, they have accomplished much, where anything more than suppression of organized insurrection seemed impossible.

The above remarks apply with particular force to those officers and enlisted men of the marine corps who have been serving as officers of the gendarmerie of Haiti.

After a careful study of the matters in issue, based not only on the evidence in the record, but, also, upon other original and reliable sources of information, and the court's own observations while in Haiti, the court regards the charges which have been published as ill-considered, regrettable and thoroughly unwarranted reflections on a portion of the United States marine corps which has performed difficult, dangerous and delicate duty in Haiti in a manner which, instead of calling for adverse criticism, is entitled to the highest commendation.

The record of the proceedings of this twenty-first day of the inquiry was read and approved, and the court having finished the inquiry, then, at 11 o'clock a. m., adjourned to await the action of the convening authority.

H. T. MAYO,
Rear Admiral, U. S. Navy, President.

JESSE F. DYER,
Major, U. S. Marine Corps, Judge Advocate.

Hardwick to Surrender Client to Authorities

Georgia Senator Plans to Turn Ludwig Martens
Over to Immigration Authorities, After Deportation Order.

Washington, December 18.—Ludwig C. A. K. Martens, soviet "ambassador" to the United States whose deportation has been ordered by Secretary Wilson may be surrendered to the immigration authorities next week by his counsel, former Senator Hardwick, of Georgia, in whose custody Martens has been since the institution of the deportation proceedings last March.

Senator Hardwick was said today to have signified his intention to the department of labor to confer with immigration officials next Monday or Tuesday for the purpose of concluding the formality of surrendering his client. Court action to stay the deportation order is regarded, however, as likely to postpone further the expulsion of the bolshevik agent.

NEW YORK POLICE MOVE AGAINST CRIME

While Special Efforts to Stop Gangsters Are Made,
New Holdups Occur.

New York, December 18.—While the police department was announcing adoption of two reorganization steps to block New York's crime wave, bandits held up two jewelers' messengers in Brooklyn today, stealing $10,000 worth of gems and a $2,000 payroll.

A flying squadron of fifty experienced detectives was sent out by Police Commissioner Richard E. Enright to aid in combating the crime of wave which has called for expressions of alarm from judges, city officials and numerous civic organizations.

To Tour City.

The detectives, equipped with high speed automobiles, were ordered to tour the city, in day and night relays, on the lookout for gangsters. They also were instructed to aid in tracing the slender clues in the department's possession in efforts to solve recent mysterious crimes.

Mr. Enright expressed confidence in the police department's ability to cope with the situation and said "there is no crime condition that warrants the organization of private citizens. The police are absolutely in control of the situation." However, numerous organizations today were discussing emergency measures to secure adequate protection. Hundreds of stores displayed

PLAN FOR PEACE FOR ERIN FAILS

Lloyd-George Declares
Attitude of Sinn Fein Representative "Closes
Door to Councils of Good Will."

London, December 18.—The correspondence which has been going on between Prime Minister Lloyd-George and Father Michael O'Flanagan, "vice president of the Irish republic," in an effort to bring about a truce between England and the Sinn Fein organization, apparently has been brought to an end. Father O'Flanagan in his latest message to the premier declared the only way to reconciliation was by "direct negotiations" with the official head of the Irish nation—President de Valera.

In his reply sent today, the premier said:

"This attitude closes the door to those councils of good will which you invoked by beginning this correspondence."

Firearms within easy reach of salesmen and in plain view of customers. The Merchants' association and the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce called special meetings to consider the situation.

The Jewelers' Security league announced it had offered a $25,000 reward for the capture and conviction of the murderer or murderers of Edwin W. Andrews, fifth avenue jeweler, on Thursday afternoon.

Added to the growing list of crimes the police were confronted with the solution of two more holdups committed last night. Carl Tiedemann, a veteran of the world war, was reported in a dying condition in a hospital from a wound received when he resisted robbers who held him up near a subway station.

Two men stopped a taxicab in Central park, in which Mrs. Thomas W. Edgar, wife of a physician, was riding. removed her gloves, searched her stockings, took from her fingers two diamond rings, ordered her out of the cab and directed the driver to take them away.

"You Frighten Me,"

Writes A Housewife

One of the letters received by the Georgia Railway and Power Company on the subject of the threatened gas shortage is a mighty message from a woman. Her letter reveals unusual vision. She has read our advertisements with a gaze that has penetrated their type and that has seen far into the future. The statements we have made by means of cold figures showing how this company is losing 18 cents on every dollar of revenue, and how it is nearing collapse under the present rates have painted for this woman a view of peril.

Shut-Down, Darkness, Jobless Men, Cold Meals, Chaos Rise Before Her

We had not mentioned these things in plain terms. They were too distressing to admit as possibilities; and, in fact, the company is working confidently on sheer nerve to remove the peril. We have improved the gas service, and are keeping our head up in spite of crushing difficulty. But this woman has been able to see, as we see, that sheer nerve alone cannot transmute rain from clouds and energy from coal into gas. She writes of a fear that restaurants and hotels and other divisions of business may be suspended by the occurrence of gas failure. The good woman recognizes that the figures of cost and revenue must be corrected to save Atlanta from wide hardship. She expresses her faith in the fairness of this proposition, and offers her aid to help matters. The suggestion this woman makes—

Will Guarantee Uninterrupted Good Gas Service

Concluding her letter, the housewife says: "Money is scarce with me, but I could spare any rate within reason to keep the gas flowing strongly, just as I have to spare the prices asked for hats and shoes."

"I Think You're Right,"

Says This Grocer

Another tremendous message to us is a letter from a grocer in an important district. Of all persons the groceryman is the one who knows his neighborhood. He knows not only its news but the chief thoughts of its people. It is to the corner grocer that folks bring their complaints, their opinions and the subjects of their satisfaction. Who can speak with greater understanding than such an oracle of facts?

The grocer who writes us has surveyed the whole gas problem through the minds of his customers, and his conclusions are straight as a die.

But read the letter in full. It is too good to merely place on file.

The Georgia Railway & Power Co., Electric & Gas Building,
Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sirs:

I have read your advertisements on the gas situation. The facts you set forth seem important to me.

I run a grocery store in a neighborhood that has had some interesting experience with the gas service. The service a few weeks back was in bad shape. The gas gave out every once in a while just at meal times. My customers are all fine people, moderately well off, used to having conveniences and willing to pay the price. They buy good food and cook good meals.

Well, when the gas gave out those times I speak about, it had bad effects generally. Naturally it made everybody out of sorts. They complained, and cancelled big orders for meat and vegetables; and they were so cross all together, it looked as if they thought I was somehow to blame. You can understand just about how such things go. When things run wrong, people have somebody to growl at.

Naturally this gas proposition means a lot to me. If we don't have gas, my customers will go down town and eat restaurant food. That cuts me out of business.

Here a few weeks back when conditions had got to their worst, your company jumped in and laid new mains. You did some pretty fast work, and in a few days the service was just fine again. You would be surprised at the difference it made. People all over the neighborhood were just delighted. They got into a good humor overnight. It has been going on this way for three weeks. People come into the store and tell me how glad they are over the service, and they talk about it over the phone, giving orders.

Well, that makes me feel pretty good towards you. I believe it is my duty to give you credit. You have just about saved my store.

Now, about the gas rates. Your advertisements explain that you are losing a whole lot of money—18 cents on every dollar you take in, on account of the high cost of coal, oil, labor, etc. The ads also show that you have got to borrow thousands of dollars to make improvements in order to keep up the service. Just on the face of all conditions, and considering how important the gas service is, I would be in favor of giving you better rates.

Most of the people in this neighborhood think the same way. They're sensible. They listen to reason.

The cost of everything else has gone up, why shouldn't gas go up? I know mighty well that I had to raise my prices at times to keep up with the costs, and make a decent profit. I'd raise the price of bananas quick enough if the commission house raised it on me.

Everybody else is doing the same thing. Why, I paid $15.75 a ton for coal a while ago, and the coal was so poor that I could hardly burn it. But I had to have the coal, and I had to pay the price. It is only fair that you people should have the same chance as the coal dealers.

I think the trouble with you folks is that you're such a big company you didn't notice the effects of the jumps in the costs of everything you need as quickly as other people in smaller business. It took sometime for all your accounts to get sized up on your balance sheets. Then I guess they hit you like a ton of brick. Now you have to get action quick or go under.

The point of all this is that I believe you are in the right, and if my words will help you, I'm glad to give them. You did me a good turn, and I'd like to show you I am fair enough to pay it back.

It is worthwhile to say a lot of other people in this neighborhood feel the same way. From what I can learn they are all willing to give you a fair chance, and to pay a little bit more for your service. Right now, anyhow, they are tickled with the service. They would do anything in reason to keep it up to the notch.

I hope you can get the better rates you are after.

Highland Cash Grocery
399 Highland Avenue

Yours very truly,

A. S. MURRAH.

The foregoing extracts and complete letter represent just two of the communications we have received from the public. Our correspondents exhibit a general feeling around this city that the Georgia Railway & Power Company is entitled to rate relief. What do you think? We appreciate the responses we have received, and we want more responses. We should welcome a letter giving your views on this matter, and would especially value any suggestion that means co-operation with us.

Moreland Avenue Parent-Teachers.

Important resolutions were passed at the meeting of the Moreland Avenue Parent-Teacher association on Friday afternoon, when Mrs. Novatus L. Barker, president, presided. The first one asked the mayor and general council to finance a book on Atlanta which the seventh grades in all of the city schools are preparing for the convention of the Georgia Educational association, which will meet in this city in March. It is planned to make this book a very complete story of Atlanta, and it will boost Atlanta from every viewpoint—its industries, schools, churches, streets, distinguished men and women, etc.

A resolution which is being sponsored by Mrs. John Spalding, president of the Council of Parent-Teacher associations, was adopted asking council for a larger appropriation for 1921 for the maintenance of Carnegie library. Accompanied by Mrs. B. J. Horn-don, the seventh grades rendered several choruses in a finished manner which showed that they had had excellent training. Junius Waters played the violin obligato. George T. O'bear III, gave Philip Nolan's speech from "A Man Without a Country."

The principal speaker was Mrs. Andrew J. Hansell, who impressed upon the women their responsibility in registering and using their influence for the betterment especially of educational facilities.

Miss Jessie Lowe's class won the prize for having the largest attendance of mothers.

Benefit Bridge.

The Altar society of the Sacred Heart church will give a card party Tuesday, December 28, at 3 o'clock at the Imperial hotel.

Cake Sale.

The ladies of the Hebrew Orphan's Aid will hold their annual sale of delicious lemonade cakes on Friday, December 24, at C. & C. Rosenbaum's store, No. 28 Whitehall street. Large and small cakes of every description will be offered for sale.

Argentine Club.

The Argentine club will give their regular semi-monthly dance at Segado's Thursday evening, December 23.

A special dance will be given Christmas night at Segado's from 9 to 12. Special arrangements have been made to make this occasion a very enjoyable one.

Maffett-Brogdon.

The marriage of Miss Bernice Myrtle Maffett to William Lester Brogdon took place at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. David Sud-darth, on Alaska avenue at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening, and while the event was a quiet one, witnessed only by the immediate families, it held interest for many friends.

Rev. E. R. Edmonson, of Buford, officiated.

The home was decorated effectively in chrysanthemums, palms and ferns and the colors, pink and white, were used throughout the decorations.

An altar of palms and ferns was arranged in the living room, before which the bridal party stood.

The bride, entering with her brother, Mr. Carl Maffett, who gave her in marriage, was preceded by the ringbearer, little Fayoline Maffett, niece of the bride.

Miss Gladys Swords was maid of honor, and Mr. David Sud-darth was best man.

The bride was very pretty in her traveling suit of dark blue duvetyne with hat to match. Her corsage bouquet was bride's roses and swansons.

The maid of honor wore a gown of violet charmeuse, and carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums. A beautiful reception followed the ceremony.

Miss Nola Swords and Miss Margaret Lee served the punch.

Mr. and Mrs. Brogdon will make their home with the bride's mother, Mrs. C. F. Maffett, in Buford, Ga.

Mr. and Mrs. Griffin went to Signal Mountain for their honeymoon, and they will make their home at Sugar Valley in Gordon county, where Mr. Griffin is well known and has responsible connection with the Southern railway.

Mrs. Carrie Knoff announces the marriage of her daughter, Theresa, to Mr. Frank C. Leyh, which was solemnized at the residence of his sister, Mrs. W. Alonso Hollingsworth, 32 Garfield place, Tuesday, December 7, at 6:45 p. m.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. E. S. Kellam in the presence of the immediate families of the bride and groom. Mr. and Mrs. Leyh are at home to their friends at 255 Ormond street.

Keith-Griffin.

Mrs. F. M. Keith announces the marriage of her daughter, Annie L., to Mr. M. J. Griffin, of Gordon county, which took place at the home of Mrs. Keith on Arizona avenue on December 15.

Rev. M. L. Keith, of the First Baptist church of Tuskegee, Ala., officiated in the presence of the family party and a few friends.

The bride wore her traveling costume, a becoming dark blue suit with black velvet hat.

Mr. and Mrs. Griffin went to Signal Mountain for their honeymoon, and they will make their home at Sugar Valley in Gordon county, where Mr. Griffin is well known and has responsible connection with the Southern railway.

The Happiness of Music

The Greatest Gift of All

FROM TIME IMMEMORIAL, music has been the great giver of Happiness.

Nations have been born in the glory of music. Dreams of monarchs have been shattered and empires uprooted, yet music has sprung from the ruins and flourished with renewed vigor with the first note of peace.

Such is the spirit of music which has come to us through the ages with its magic power. It is a force that inspires, recreates and soothes; that awakens a new interest in the home and surrounds it with a fascinating, joyful atmosphere. Music, the supreme gift, has ever been associated with Christmas. Why not bring music to your home this Christmas; and all music you love; music that will stay through the years to gladden the hearts of your family and give entertainment to your friends?

Tisinger—Holmes.

The marriage of Miss Carolyn Evans Holmes and Mr. Thomas F. Tisinger was quietly solemnized Wednesday, December 8, at high noon, in Tampa, Fla., at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Holmes, 418 Cedar avenue, in the presence of only the immediate family. Rev. L. M. Broyles, pastor of the Hyde Park Methodist church, officiating.

The lower floor of the house was prettily decorated with poinsettias and palms. At the foot of the improved altar, were pillows of white satin upon which the bride and groom knelt to receive the benediction. These pillows having been used by five brides in the Holmes family. The bride was lovely in a handsome coat suit of brown duvetyne, with accessories to match, and her flowers were a corsage bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Tisinger left for an extended wedding trip, their destination being unknown.

The bride is an attractive and accomplished young woman. She has resided in Tampa all of her life, and is a graduate of the Hillsborough High school, and later attended the Florida State College for Women. For the past two years she has been a member of the choir of the Hyde Park Methodist church, and possesses a contralto voice of unusual sweetness. She will be greatly missed by her large number of Tampa friends, who regret that her marriage takes her elsewhere to reside.

Mr. Tisinger is a prominent young business man of Atlanta, Ga. During the war he was a captain in the coast artillery, and was stationed at Fort Dade. He is a graduate of the Georgia School of Technology. Mr. and Mrs. Tisinger will make their future home in Atlanta.

Tolbert—Meisch.

Mr. W. H. Tolbert announces the marriage of his daughter, Leslie, to Lieutenant William Meisch, U. S. A., now stationed at Camp Gordon. The wedding took place Sunday, December 12, at the residence of the uncle of the bride, Dr. R. E. La Tolbert, in West End Park.

The attendants were Miss Ann Tolbert, maid of honor; Dr. Tolbert, best man, and little Miss Martha Tolbert, flower girl. Dr. W. W. Mamminger, of All Saints church, performed the ceremony. The wedding music was played by Mrs. C. M. Hobson.

An informal dinner was given by Dr. and Mrs. Tolbert following the ceremony. Covers were laid for twelve.

Lieutenant and Mrs. Meisch will make their home in Atlanta for the present. The groom is formerly from St. Louis and has a splendid war record.

Freeman—Lester.

Mr. and Mrs. William Archibald Freeman have issued cards announcing the marriage of their daughter, Olga Fay, to Mr. Edward Dominick Lester on Monday, November 29. Mrs. Lester is a beautiful and popular member of the younger social set. She is a musician of great ability, having a charming soprano voice. For the past two years she has been studying under the celebrated Mattioli in Cincinnati. Mr. Lester has a reputation for his association with the J. B. McCreary company, and is a popular member of the Athletic club.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester are touring Florida on their wedding trip, and after December 21 will be at home to their friends with the bride's parents on Juniper street.

Pringle—Boylston.

The marriage of Miss Florence Pringle, of Thomasville, and Mr. George W. Boylston, Jr., of Blackville, S. C., took place at high noon on Saturday, December 18, at the home of the bride's father, Mr. W. A. Pringle.

Owing to recent bereavement in the family of the bride, the marriage was a very quiet event, only the immediate relatives being present for the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. John E. Seale, of the Methodist church. The bride wore for the ceremony a handsome suit of blue velvet trimmed with gray squirrel, with hat to match of velvet and fur. Her corsage was orchids.

Shortly after the ceremony the couple left for a trip east, and upon their return will make their home temporarily in Thomasville.

Rickman—Owens.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Rickman, of Rabun Gap, Ga., announce the marriage of their youngest daughter, Carrie Joe, to Harry Joe, of Conyers, Ga. Mr. Owens is the second son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Owens, of Conyers, which occurred on Sunday evening at 5:30 o'clock, November 21, 1920, at Conyers, Ga. Rev. J. F. Stevens, officiating.

The bride is one of the beautiful and accomplished young teachers, who has spent four years in teaching in different counties of the state, and at the time of her marriage was teaching in Rockdale county.

Mr. Owens is of a prominent family and one of the most progressive and industrious young men of that county. They will reside in Conyers.

Bond—Hendrix.

Mr. and Mrs. George R. Bond have issued cards announcing the marriage of their daughter, Edith, to Mr. Fitzhugh Lee Hendrix, of Clearwater, Fla. The wedding which was a very quiet affair took place at 6 o'clock Tuesday evening, December 14, at their home on Highland avenue and was witnessed only by the members of the immediate family.

Rev. Wallace Rogers, of the Druid Hills Methodist church, performed the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Hendrix left immediately for their home in Clearwater, Fla.

Ellard—Looper.

Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Ellard, of Norcross, announce the marriage of their daughter, Inez, to Mr. Harry Stewart Looper, of Dalton, Ga., on December 15, in the pastor's study of the Tabernacle Baptist church, Atlanta, Rev. W. W. Ham officiating.

WISDOM—MANGHAM

Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Baxter, of Grantville, Ga., announce the marriage of their sister, Lucile Wisdom, to Mr. J. D. Mangham, of Atlanta, on December 6, 1920.

Carlyle—Mathewson.

The announcement today of the engagement and approaching marriage of Miss Carmen Lee Carlyle, of Columbus, Ohio, to Mr. Stanley B. Mathewson, of Atlanta, carries conspicuous interest to a large number of Atlanta friends.

Mr. Mathewson is also announced in the papers in Columbus, Ohio, today by the parents of the charming bride-elect, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Garnette, of Roanoke, Va.

Miss Carlyle has always made her home in Columbus and has been with her guardian, Mr. E. H. McCloud, at whose home the marriage will be solemnized on Saturday, January 1. She attended an Episcopal school in Columbus, before entering the University of Ohio, from which college she graduated.

Besides being an unusually pretty and attractive young woman, she is very athletic and fond of all kinds of outdoor sports. She is very cultured and brilliant, and has been admired socially since leaving school. Miss Carlyle arrives in Atlanta on Friday to visit Mrs. Mathewson for the holiday season, at her home on Peachtree street, and it will be the happy opportunity of many Atlanta friends of meeting her informally. Mr. Mathewson will also spend the holidays here with Mrs. Mathewson.

Mr. Mathewson has been residing in Columbus since leaving the service in which he served as major in the personnel department of the United States army during the war. Before that time he was manager of the Atlanta division of the Southern Bell Telephone company, and at present he is the manager for the Ohio division of the Scott company, of Philadelphia, an organization doing efficiency work. He is a graduate of the Georgia School of Technology, and has a wide circle of close friends in this city. He is the brother of Mr. J. Horton Mathewson, and is a representative of distinguished southern ancestry.

Mrs. Nichols Hostess.

The Margaret A. Wilson chapter, Children of the Confederacy, held a meeting Thursday afternoon, December 8, at the home of Mrs. J. S. Nichols on Lee street in West End. The Atlanta chapter, U. D. C., invited this chapter to assist them in their annual Christmas entertainment for the Confederate veterans at the Soldiers' Home the afternoon of Christmas eve. The invitation was accepted with enthusiasm. All members desiring to go met at the home of Mrs. Nichols at 2 o'clock. An interesting program has been arranged, consisting of violin and piano solos, songs and recitations. Other charitable work was planned. The Sunday following Christmas the members are going to the Old Ladies' Home to sing songs and take gifts to the old ladies.

"The Store of Dependability"

FOR CHRISTMAS

All Davis & Freeman patrons know that no sale made here is ever satisfactory to the store unless it is entirely satisfactory to the customer. For that reason we dislike to sell goods that are hurriedly selected. We would very much prefer to spend any amount of time in showing goods than to have made a larger sale that later proves an unsatisfactory purchase.

There is but little time left in which to make Christmas purchases, even though you come in tomorrow. But there is time enough to allow you to use your best judgment, providing you do not delay further.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday mornings will probably be the times when our store is least crowded.

For Mrs. G. N. Minor.

Mrs. E. R. Kirk, regent of the Atlanta chapter, D. A. R., has extended for the chapter an invitation to Mrs. George Noyard Minor, president, of the National Society D. A. R., and Mrs. Max Land, state regent of Georgia D. A. R., to be the guests of the Atlanta chapter in January. Mrs. Minor will be en route to Florida and the Atlanta Daughters wish to pay signal tribute to her during her stay.

The Atlanta chapter has asked the Joseph Habersham chapter, Mrs. George Pratt, regent, and the Piedmont Continental, Mrs. Horace Clark, regent, to unite with them in giving an entertainment at Craigie House for these distinguished guests.

The scholarship program at Craigie House on the December 15 was a happy suggestion of the regent, Mrs. Kirk, and was carried out in the most charming way through the leadership of Mrs. C. Dean, chairman of scholarships. There was an interesting exhibition of the talent developed through the scholarships of the Atlanta chapter has been privileged to give. In addition to the regular program which has already been published Miss Blanche Loveridge, of Ellaboth, Mother college, gave a most interesting talk on educational topics.

Piano Recital.

On Wednesday night at Cable hall the Atlanta Conservatory presented a young pianist in the person of Laurence Everhart, whose performance showed unusual talent and splendid training. He has a nice touch, tone and an amply technique and he interpreted with authority and ease. His performance reflected much credit on his teacher, Mr. Earl Chester Smith. Mr. Aldrich's pupil, Mrs. Nathan Moore, assisted. She made a very pleasing appearance and both the young artists were recalled many times by an enthusiastic audience.

For Miss M'Collum.

Mrs. W. C. Dameron entertained at 8 o'clock dinner Friday evening at her home in Hapeville, honoring Miss Ruth M'Collum, of Atlanta. Covers were placed for Miss Ruth M'Collum, Miss Hall, Miss Green, Miss Odie Dollar, Mrs. N. V. Darley, Mrs. Asbury Wilson and Miss B. C. Budduth, Ben Montgomery, Hoyt Montgomery and Cleve Dameron.

Atlantans Making Plans For Symphony Orchestra

BY LOUISE DOOLY.
Atlanta people, when they hear the Howard theater orchestra may be listening to an embryo symphony orchestra to be built on the same mold as those of Cincinnati, Detroit, Minneapolis, St. Louis, which have made the more richly supported and longer established orchestras in Boston, New York and Philadelphia perk up and take notice.

Already with the Howard orchestra only a week old, Enrico Leide and his men have drawn to themselves the substantial kind of attention significant in a tentative movement on the part of Atlanta business men to be organized for the establishment of a guarantee fund, as the first step in the inauguration in Atlanta of a permanent symphony orchestra. The thirty-five musicians in the Howard orchestra, who have been drawn from some of the most celebrated symphony and opera orchestras of this country and Europe, are of symphony orchestra quality, as is their leader, Enrico Leide. It is already known that as many more of the same caliber can be secured at a moment's notice. From authoritative sources the information comes that with the necessary guarantee secured, a finger can be held now on thirty men who are equipped to complement the Howard orchestra to symphony strength, and are ready to answer even a telegraphic summons.

Great Value to City.
The value to a city of a symphony orchestra all its own is a fact now so well established that emphasis of it seems unnecessary. It was the orchestras of the German cities which had large part for so many years in creating that atmosphere which made Germany the world wide mecca of musical students. The movement in America for local symphony orchestras is comparatively new, but it is a possibility for any cities but the great musical centers. But the spread of the idea has been marvellously rapid, and yet not so marvellous, when there is considered the keen vision of the American mind.

For a long time this vision was closed in all but purely practical ends—ends that meant big business. Now it has broadened to handle in a practical way the things of art and to see in such organized handling the practical good there is to the many.

Witness Atlanta's own Music Festival association, made up not of musicians, but business men. Yet they bring to Atlanta once a year a week of grand opera by the greatest opera company in the world.

All Winter Season.
Why not a similar organization?

Tree Parties.
A Christmas contribution to their social service work, all the girls of the Y. W. C. A. will unite in giving a Christmas tree and party to forty little children and their mothers on Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, at association headquarters, Peachtree Arcade. The families have been supplied for the festive by the Associated Charities. Automobiles will convey the children to the Y. W. C. A. and send them home. Marion Young, as a Christmas fairy, will dance for the children. The Y. W. C. A. club of Douglass college will give each child present a toy; the "Y" club of the McClure Ten-Cent company will give each child a story book; and the "Y" Blue Ribbon club will give the children candy. The Jubilee Era club will supply popcorn, balls and games. The S. I. S. P. club will give the mothers and children a hot supper, and all will unite in entertaining the guests of the evening.

Individual "Y" clubs will have parties at the association during the week. The Girl Reserves of the graded schools, Girls' High school and Fulton High school will have a series of parties at the "Y" during the week. They will have Christmas trees and make their contributions as reserves to poor and needy children.

for the promotion of a symphony orchestra? The value of this is conceded to be infinitely more educational, more constructive. It would not make people love opera less, but more.

The orchestra would be with us, not just for one week in the year, but all winter, and many cities support their orchestras right through the summer in popular concerts better suited to hot weather, and even give them in summer time out of doors—an ideal prospect for a southern city.

And so when we go to the concert at the Howard this afternoon, let us listen with these things in mind.

The charity to which the orchestra is giving itself this afternoon is to provide for the ten neediest families in Atlanta a Christmas for all the year.

Atlanta, if it will get behind the movement for a permanent symphony orchestra, will likewise be preparing for an all-the-year-round season of musical festivity that will be a credit as well as a joy.

There's always room for the ## Christmas Pageantry At Y. W. C. A. Vespers.

Following the time-honored custom, the Young Women's Christian association will give a Christmas vesper service Sunday afternoon at association headquarters, fourth floor, Peachtree Arcade, beginning promptly at 4 o'clock.

The large clubroom, with its anterooms, lends itself to the manager service. Entering the darkened scene will be a choir of girls singing the processional hymn, "O Come All Ye Faithful," followed by "Hallelujah" and other Christmas hymns. Scripture verse reading by Miss Sarah Eastlack will tell the story of the manger, as it is being portrayed by those taking part.

The peasant children will be a group of high school girls, who are members of the Y. W. C. A. Girl Reserves. The leading part will be taken by the following girls: Miss Dorothy Fischer, the character of Mary; Joseph, by Miss Mary Phelps; Angels, Miss Louisa Nixon and Miss Frankie Anderson. The five shepherds will be girls of the "Y's" Blue Ribbon club.

The three Wise Men will be Miss Reba Brown, Miss Mary Jones and Miss Irene Scott. The choir will be composed of a group of Y. W. C. A. girls. Miss Frances Black is chairman of the vesper music; Miss Gertrude Kelley is chairman of costumes, and Miss Ruby McKinley of the stage setting.

Christmas Party At Formwalt School.

There will be a Christmas entertainment given by Formwalt school on Monday night, December 20, at 7:30 o'clock at Georgia Avenue auditorium. The auditorium has been artistically decorated, booths built for the occasion. Each grade has its own program that will furnish much pleasure and enjoyment.

One of the attractive features will be the Tom Thumb wedding given by the second grade pupils. There will be an intermission of fifteen minutes, during which time a doll will be raffled, an auctioneer, grab bag and many other amusements. Refreshments will also be served. Admission 25c and 15c. The public is cordially invited.

The Value of Expert Opinion

Such world-renowned artists as Liszt, Wagner, Rubinstein, Gounod, Paderewski, Hofmann, Powell, Leginska, Scott, Cortot, McCormack, Galli-Curci, Heifetz, Kreisler and three score more of almost equal fame use and endorse the Steinway. The expert opinion of such artists should govern you in the selection of the piano for your home.

The Steinway Piano has no equal for endurance; it will outlast any other Piano. And, what is more, its price is but little higher than the price of other good pianos.

McCollum Club.

On Tuesday evening Professor Osborne Williams will address the McCollum Club of Applied Psychology, his subject being "The Practical Application of Psychology in the Training of Young People." As Professor Williams is head of the department of psychology in the city high schools, he will be able to speak with authority and insight on this subject.

In addition to this interesting lecture Mrs. Nathan T. Moore will deliver several delightful songs. It is also intended to send a special message to Mrs. Harriet McCollum, the teacher of psychology after whom the club was named, and every member is urged to be present and assist in this. The meeting will be held at the usual hour at Congregational church and all friends of the club will be welcome.

Brenau Studios Reception.

The Brenau studios entertained about one hundred of its friends and patrons on last Friday evening with a delightful musicale and reception at Edison hall, where the studios are located. The program, rendered by members of the faculty, was given in the hall of the building, after which the reception was held in the studios upstairs, where refreshments were served. Professor Otto Pfefferkorn opened the musical program with a most artistic interpretation of Beethoven's "Moonlight" sonata, followed by Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" and Chopin's "Scherzo in B Flat Minor." He was enthusiastically recalled, and added a composition of his own as encore.

Mrs. Mary Ella Perry read Irving Cobb's "Speaking of Operations" with a verve that brought out all of its humor, which kept her audience in a continuous ripple of mirth, and as an encore she gave Service's "Young Feller, My Lad," in a way that brought her hearers to the verge of tears.

Mr. Wilford Watters brought the program to a close by a fine rendition of his group of songs, which consisted of "Non Plus Ultra," Mozart; "Allerseelen," R. Strauss; "Valse Exquise," R. Hahn; "Deep River," H. Burleigh; "Tommy Lad," Macretson. An encore he added Sydney Homer's "Mando Song."

An opportunity was afforded the guests at the reception that followed, meeting Mr. and Mrs. Pearce, president of Brenau college and his wife, who were in Atlanta for the occasion, and Dr. Pearce was congratulated by many for his progressive spirit in establishing in this city a branch of Brenau college conservatory, whose reputation is second to none in the country for its superior musical faculty.

Allah Wes Tee Club.

The Allah Wes Tee club will entertain its members and friends at an informal dance on Thursday evening, December 23, at their club rooms, the Virginia hall, corner Gordon and Lee streets. Dancing from 8:45 to 11:45 o'clock.

Vaughn-Carter.

The many friends of Miss Vera Vaughn and Mr. Vorel V. Carter will be interested to hear of their marriage at a recent date at the home of Rev. J. L. Jackson in South Kirkwood.

Mrs. Starr Hostess.

Mrs. H. B. Starr entertained on Monday afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock at her home in East Point in honor of her small son and daughter, H. B. Jr. and Frances. The decorations and favors carried out the Christmas idea and games were played, prizes being given to the winners. Thirty-four children were present and Mrs. Starr was assisted by Mrs. M. B. Nash, Mrs. J. A. Stowers and Mrs. W. R. McKibben. Santa Claus was also among those present.

D. G. S. Club Dance.

The D. G. S. club entertained its members and friends at an unusually interesting dance in its club rooms, Peachtree and Third streets, on Friday evening, December 17, from 9 until 2 o'clock.

The dance opened the Christmas holiday season gaily and special features, including a specially arranged program of dance music, were offered.

Home for The Holidays

Dances and Teas Galore Keep Fair Vacationists On the Go Every Minute

The holiday season marks the return of the Atlanta girls who have been studying at various schools throughout the south and east.

The social festivities announced for this week in the plans of the college set will begin Monday afternoon with a tea to be given by Mrs. Drury Powers at her home on Peachtree circle for her daughters, Misses Mamie and Maud Powers, Miss Goldwyn Denny, of Rome, the guest of Miss Lucy Candler, and Miss Lucile DeRake, of Baltimore, the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Frank Burr.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry DeGivie will give a dancing party at home on Monday evening for their daughter, Miss Pauline DeGivie, who returned yesterday from Aiken, S. C.

Tuesday.

Mr. William Healey will give a supper-dance on Tuesday evening, when his guests will be a bright gathering of the college set at his home on Andrews drive.

The members of the Alpha Epsilon fraternity will give a dance at the East Lake Country club.

Mr. and Mrs. D. L. McIntyre will entertain at a dance at the Capital City Country club Monday, December 20, in honor of their daughter, Miss Margaret McIntyre, and also Miss Vincennes Allen, roommates at Hollins college, in Hollins, Va., who will be home for the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Nelson will entertain at a dancing party Tuesday evening, December 21, at the Capital City Country club, in complement to their daughters, Misses Margaret and Louise Nelson.

Dancing will commence at 9 o'clock and continue until 1 o'clock, the guests to include the members of the college set.

Miss Kathleen Stewart's tea on Tuesday afternoon, December 21, will be given at her home on Ponce de Leon avenue, and will be among the gaieties of the holiday season.

Wednesday.

One of the most delightful affairs of the Christmas holidays will be the tea which Miss Frances Poole will give Wednesday, December 22, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Poole, on Cascade road. The guest list will include 150 members of the young society set.

Miss Lula Groves Campbell will entertain at a tea at her home on Fairview road, Druid Hills, in honor of Miss Helen Foster, of San Francisco, Cal., the guest of Miss Mildred Dobbs; Miss Lucy Candler, who will be at home for the holidays from National Park seminary, where she is attending school, and Miss Virginia Walker, one of the debutantes of this winter. Receiving with Miss Campbell will be her mother, Mrs. J. T. Campbell, Mrs. J. M. Cooper, Mrs. S. C. Dobbs, Mrs. C. I. Walker, Jr., and Mrs. Asa Candler, Jr. Punch will be served by Misses Ethel Miami, Margaret Pratt, Ernest Campbell and Mary Smathers. Tea will be poured by Mrs. Paul F. Voss, Mrs. Ben R. Lacy, Jr., Mrs. Howard Mildred Dobbs and Mrs. Frank Burr will assist in entertaining. Misses Margaret Jones and Louisa Candler will take the cards at the door.

Thursday.

The Omicron Delta Delta fraternity of the Technological High school will entertain at an informal dance at the Druid Hills golf club on Thursday evening, December 23. Garber-Davis orchestra will furnish the music.

The Sigma Phi Mu fraternity of the Georgia School of Technology will give a dance at the East Lake Country club.

Mr. John M. Cooper will give a buffet supper for Miss Louise Cooper and her guest, Miss Valeria Arrington, of Norfolk, Va.

Friday.

Christmas eve will feature a number of informal teas, luncheons and dances, featuring this particular set.

Saturday.

Christmas day and Christmas evening will be observed by family dinner parties, and there will be dances at the Atlanta Athletic club and the Piedmont Driving club. Parties at the Capital City Country club at Brookhaven and at the East Lake Country club will be given for the members of the college set.

been attending school at National Cathedral school.
Miss Claire Louise Scott returns from school this week to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Scott, on West Peachtree street. She has been attending school at the University of Minnesota.

Miss Holditch To Entertain.

Miss Dorothy Holditch will give a dance during the holidays.

Woodberry Hall.

An Armenian Christmas tree celebration was held at Woodberry hall on Friday. The program was made up of Christmas carols, the Christmas carols, and Dickens' Birds Christmas Carol, read by Miss Richard Sessions, of New Orleans. Tiny stockings were filled with coins and bills for the Armenian orphans, and all the students gave each other holiday gifts for their memoir books.

The boarding students all have left for their homes for the Christmas vacation. Miss Fannie Lou Hawkins, of Sanderville, will have a house party of her roommates and other boarding school friends.

Among them are Misses Hazel Peters, of Savannah, Ga., of Statesboro; Clara Belle Durden, of Graymont.

Miss Esther Cherry will present a series of plays at Woodberry hall after Christmas evening in honor of the faculty and resident pupils of the Washington seminary.

Among the popular posters, replaced on the walls of Woodberry, are the 100 per cent Red Cross card, the Armenian orphan friends, the Class A high school card from Professor Stewart, U. of Ga., and the Christmas carols.

Washington Seminary Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Scott and Miss Emma Scott entertained at dinner on Thursday evening in honor of the faculty and resident pupils of the Washington seminary.

Their beautiful home, where gracious hospitality is the rule, was even more attractive than usual with its Yuletide decorations. The rich, deep red of the dining room walls, the long table lighted with candles of the same bright color, the gaily decorated little Christmas tree gracing the center of the table, made a most harmonious setting for the girls, who entered carrying lighted tapers of red and red wreaths. Down the broad stairway and through the stately hall they had come singing Christmas carols.

A unique and most enjoyable feature was the singing of carols between the courses. Later in the evening Mrs. Merrill Hutchinson gave a most sympathetic rendition of Van Dyke's "The Other Wise Man." Mrs. John Hurt sang two Christmas songs in her most finished manner.

On Friday at 1 o'clock the children from the kindergarten of the Exposition Cotton mills were given their annual Christmas tree. Dolls for the girls, tops for the boys, stockings for each child, are all things to make tiny tots happy, but it takes the united blowing of horns to make perfect content.

At 2 o'clock the "busy seventh" took a most generous supply of substantial groceries, Christmas "goodies" and Christmas stockings to a family whom they hoped to share their happiness with.

The freshmen expect to supply some needed sweaters and blankets to the little ones at the Convalescent home. The college preparatory club will furnish these same children with their Christmas dinner.

The sophomores have subscribed for two magazines to go as monthly visitors to the Y. W. C. annex. Just now, also, they have commenced the furnishing of a small sitting room, hall and guest chamber in the annex.

The juniors dressed twenty-eight dolls, fitted up fifteen work baskets and gave some money for the children at the Home of the Friendless. The seniors will give a Victoria hoping it will prove a recreation and rest to the residents of the Buford home.

Certainly to the first and second grades and their parents their play given the last day of school was the crowning event. Dressed in costumes appropriate to the Christmas time they danced around their little tree and recited their verses without a hitch.

On Wednesday half of the domestic science class entertained twelve of the faculty at a 2 o'clock luncheon. The color scheme emphasized the fact of the near approach of the glad Christmas time. Pointsettias and ferns made an effective centerpiece. The same holiday red was brought out in the salad and ices.

It was the consensus of opinion that never had four courses of any meal been better prepared or more attractively served.

The waitresses were Kate Schofield and Beatrice North. Those cooking and also serving as assistant waitresses were Cecelia Wright, Olive Marion, Eloise Lewis, Helen Miles, Beatrice North, Muriel Perkins, Kate Schofield, Antoinette Smith, Elizabeth Robertson, Athleen Dickey, Ethel Dean and Eleanor Briggs.

Society Much Accomplished by Women In Work for Cleaner City

Utopian Christmas Dances.

On Christmas morning the Utopian club will hold open house to their members and friends in their club rooms, Peachtree and Third, with dancing from 10 to 12 o'clock. The entertainment committee announces the New Year dance to be held New Year's eve, dancing to begin at 10 o'clock.

Hospital Committee Of Woman's Club.

All members of the hospital committee of the Atlanta Woman's Club are urged to be present at the clubhouse Wednesday morning, December 22, at 10 o'clock, to help fill the socks, arrange the decorations and take the socks and decorations to the hospitals.

On Thursday morning at 9 o'clock they will go to the United States public health services hospital (old King sanitarium, near Oglethorpe university, on Peachtree street) to help decorate the tree and wards. They are invited to stay for the program and tree, which is Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, December 23. Reservations must be made for lunch at the club on Wednesday.

At a called meeting Friday morning of the officers of the City Federation of Women's Clubs, and chairmen of the eleven ward committees who were named to clean Atlanta and thus make her a healthier city, reports proved that a great deal of valuable work had been done in many directions.

Vacant lots have been cleaned and put in more presentable condition; many alleys have been cleaned, their owners recognizing the obligation, and certain centers in the city and central localities pointed out for lack of order and cleanliness, have been looked after and parks and playgrounds cleaned.

Chairmen of the various wards reported a general co-operation on the part of all people approached, and several chairmen reported that their wards were entirely cleaned, both as to schoolhouses, residences, corner streets and places of neighborhood assembly.

The Film Play. Mrs. Thornton, president of the federation, reported that the famous film, "Sildedown," will be shown first to the members of the City Federation of Women's Clubs at a private showing in the auditorium of the chamber of commerce at their January meeting, and subsequently at the club on Wednesday.

quantly to the school children of Atlanta and to the general public, these showings to precede the annual spring cleaning which will be taken up by the same committees interested in the present successful clean-up movement.

Mrs. Thornton called the attention of the special meeting to the present status of the Carnegie library school of Atlanta, which is one of the best-known institutions in the south, but lacking in sufficient funds to keep it up to the standard and to extend it for the patronage it might have. Mrs. Thornton explained that when Atlanta secured the Carnegie school, every city in the south desired the school and appealed for it. Atlanta was successful, but she is failing in the right facilities and in the extension in many ways which is necessary to meet the demands of the school and to keep it permanently in Atlanta. The subject will be brought before the January meeting of the federation and in the meantime, the status of the school and its needs are being brought to the attention of the head of every woman's organization in Atlanta.

Honoring Miss Dennis. Miss Elizabeth Dennis, an admired member of the college set, was honor guest at the dancing party given Friday evening by her aunt, Mrs. W. L. Champion, at her home on Ponce de Leon avenue.

The decorations were in holly, mistletoe and palms. An orchestra furnished the music for dancing. Miss Dennis was crowned in yellow satin. Mrs. Champion wore a gown of black lace, veiling black satin.

Assisting in receiving were Mrs. John L. Dennis, Mrs. Lee Ashcraft and Miss Hattie Harwell.

Dinner-Dance Friday Evening.

The Atlanta Plant Assembly, No.

23. Association of Western Union Employees—entertained its members and their friends at a delightful dinner-dance Friday evening at Peachtree cafe.

Dancing was enjoyed during the dinner and afterwards. One of the features of the evening was the singing of the two late song successes, "Japanese Sandman" and "Avalon," by Mr. Bradley, recently of Boston. This, Mr. Bradley's initial appearance in Atlanta, added considerably to the enjoyment of all present and, together with the music furnished by Kneisel's orchestra, gave to the whole affair the care-free atmosphere of the cabaret. There were about one hundred and twenty-five members and guests present.

Pupils' Recital.

Mrs. Laura Foote's music pupils will give an afternoon recital on December 22 at her home, 84 Cherokee avenue. Each selection is rendered some incident in the life of the composer will be read. All of the selections are the works of American artists. An attractive solo will be rendered by little Miss Juliette Edwards, accompanied by little Miss Mattie Wolford. Several other recitations will be rendered during the afternoon.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

VOL. LIII, No. 188.

ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 19, 1920

Woman's Club to Operate Woman's Exchange Department

Of vast material benefit to women throughout the state, especially to the residents of small towns and rural districts, will be the Woman's Exchange branch, which the Atlanta Woman's club, which the president, Mrs. Irving Thomas, announces is now open to club members and to the general public.

Mrs. Thomas has received numerous letters from women, both in and out of Atlanta asking her to allow them in the display and sale of their handwork. Many of these letters state that it is absolutely necessary for the writer to earn money, but that the opportunities for doing so are very limited in the sections in which they live.

The Atlanta Woman's club, ever ready to render service to women, and anxious to promote any cause that will advance woman's activities and interests, will conduct a systematically organized Woman's Exchange branch at the club house, 946 Peachtree street.

In this department women may register who wish to take orders for or display samples of all kinds of needle work, embroidery, lace work, crochet, hand-made lingerie and infants' clothes, plain sewing, china painting, water colors, party favors and scores, basket weaving, hand-made lamp shades, boudoir decorations, etc.

A department will also be conducted for the sale of home-made cakes, cookies, jams, jellies, preserves and pickles.

Orders will also be taken for home-made country sausage and other farm products, for the benefit of the woman who lives in the country.

The exchange will undoubtedly be of great benefit to hundreds of women of small incomes, who, through this channel, may materially increase their financial circumstances and at the same time remain in the home.

Already in the display rooms of the exchange department are samples of beautiful crochet and hand-made bedspreads, dainty hand-painted candles and candlesticks, exquisite hand-made handkerchiefs and other articles suitable for Christmas gifts.

All of these may be had at most reasonable prices. Orders may now be placed of pecan nuts, from south Georgia, holly and mistletoe Christmas decorations.

The Exchange branch will fill a long felt need and be a means of encouragement and aid to women who must work at home.

Mrs. L. McKinney is chairman of the Exchange branch. Any one wishing information concerning this department may communicate with Mrs. McKinney either by phone or letter. Phone Ivy 6112.

Letter, 226 Ponce de Leon avenue, Atlanta, Ga.

Ormeewood Park. Misses Evelyn and Irene Douer are spending the holidays at Lyster, the guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Douer.

Mrs. M. K. Williams left the past week to visit friends in St. Louis. The Ormeewood Park Parent-Teacher association held its regular monthly meeting at the school house Friday, December 10. After the business session the association was addressed by Mrs. A. O. Granger.

The Ormeewood circle of the Junior Missionary society of Santa Brown Memorial church held a mite box, opening Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. B. Owens. Mrs. Owens has accepted the chairmanship of this circle and has planned a splendid program for the coming year.

An enthusiastic meeting of the Ormeewood Improvement club was held Thursday evening at the school house with J. B. Owens, the newly-elected president, presiding. The question of being incorporated in the city of Atlanta was discussed and much interest is being manifested.

CHRISTMAS SHOPPERS

YOU may save much time and worry by coming to us for your Victor Records. It would be folly for us to tell you, we have a complete stock of Records—under present conditions—that is impossible—but we will tell you honestly that ours is the most complete stock in the city. Many people have expressed much surprise to find at our store, these records which they thought could not be had anywhere.

SOCIAL ITEMS

Miss Allison Blodgett will arrive Wednesday, December 22, from Randolph Macon Woman's college.

to spend the Christmas holidays with her parents. Mr. and Mrs. John F. Blodgett.

Mr. Ernest G. Weems, of Pine Bluff, Ark., has arrived to join Mrs. Weems, who is visiting her parents.

Christmas Slippers For the Whole Family

Our collection of men's, women's and children's house slippers is noteworthy for its size—and for the high quality of its offering.

There are Daniel Greene Comfy's for Mother, Daniel Greenes for Father, and plain or animal trimmed felts for the kiddies.

Also women's Kid Boudoir Slippers in all colors, and Kid Slippers for men in the most popular styles.

Slippers make a most welcome gift, and surely no one need be without a pair this Christmas when there's such a range of pretty styles to select from.

And, prices, considering quality, are most attractive.

Carlton's

Carlton Shoe and Clothing Company.

Ira Street School Parent-Teachers.

The monthly meeting of the Parent-Teacher association of Ira Street was held on Tuesday, December 14. An interesting program was prepared by the mothers of the third grade, after which refreshments were served.

Miss Kate Harrison gave an illustrated talk on musical appreciation. A demonstration of the work, given to some third grade children, was especially enjoyed.

The association is doing exceptionally well. An interesting program was prepared by the mothers of the third grade, after which refreshments were served.

The second grade mothers had charge of the October meeting, and they afterwards gave a candy-pulling to realize funds to pay their share of the scales which will be put in the school in January.

The third grade mothers showed a motion picture at the school on Friday, December 10. It was greatly enjoyed by both children and grown-ups.

Much interest is being shown in the carolers for Christmas night. Messdames Gill, Browder, Blackstone, Polson and others will take charge of separate bands.

helped serve refreshments. After the games Miss Mary Edith Little-John recited "The Night Before Christmas." President Lovelidge read the first story which he ever had printed, and, lastly, Miss Marie van Gelder, voice teacher, sang a beautiful "Alleluiah." The great house overflowed with girls, but there were no guests, as the school is now too large to admit outsiders.

Miss Jessie McPhail Whitworth, leader of domestic science and art, displayed the work done by her department in cooking and sewing. All were surprised at the number and quality of the articles shown. It was by far the best exhibit ever given at Elizabeth Mather.

Thursday morning at 10 a. m. the kindergarten had their tree and gave their yearly entertainment, under the direction of Miss Margaret Erwin. A large audience besides the girls enjoyed the songs, plays, hand work and recitations. At the close, gifts were given each from the Christmas tree, but each child first presented a book of his work made by himself to his mother.

To Bridge Club.

Mrs. Henry Haines Green was hostess to her bridge club and a few friends Wednesday afternoon at her apartment in the Boulevard Court. The prizes were won by Mrs. Charles A. Mays, Mrs. W. P. Green and Mrs. Robert Shope.

The club members present were Mrs. J. R. Childs, Mrs. Robert Shope, Mrs. M. O. Nix, Mrs. John B. Goodwyn, Jr., Mrs. W. D. Thurmond, Mrs. T. T. Sue, Mrs. Charles A. ### Congress of Mothers.

A very interesting contest going on at present in the Parent-Teacher association throughout the state is the "Standard of Excellence and Membership Drive." To attain a standard of excellence an association must comply with the following:

1. Membership of not less than 75 per cent of the parents which children attend school; all to be members of the state and national congress.

2. Ten departments of work, including publicity and citizenship.

3. Five subscriptions each to Child Welfare and School and Home magazines.

4. Observation of child welfare day, following program prescribed by congress president.

5. Regular meeting each month.

6. Insurance in school of modern health crusade.

7. Representation at county, district or state conventions.

8. Co-operation with the county council. Each association complying with said terms, is entitled to compete for the prizes offered in each district by the state association. This prize is $50, and is given to the first local organization attaining the standard of excellence and returning blanks to state treasurer.

Every public school in the state is eligible to enter this contest, provided where there is no parent-teacher association one is formed. News comes in daily of the various towns that have entered this contest.

contest. A wide-awake association is located at Toccoa, Ga. Mrs. Charles F. Osburn, state president, recently returned from a trip and she speaks in glowing terms of the splendid work being done by the P. L. A.

Paramount Club.

The Paramount club held its regular dance Wednesday evening, December 15, at the Virginia club rooms, West End.

The club room was cozy and inviting with its shaded lights and Christmas festoons, and the very atmosphere was filled with the Christmas spirit. This dance may well be remembered as a "gala occasion" by all who attended.

The chaperones of the evening were Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Causey, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Boiling, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Kidwell, Mr. and Mrs. Raswell P. Poole, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. C. T. McGuire, Mr. and Mrs. Grady Walker and Mrs. S. C. Camp.

The Paramount club will hold its next dance Christmas night, December 25, at the Utopian club rooms, corner Third and Peachtree streets. All members of other clubs and their friends are cordially invited to attend. Dancing, 8 to 12.

Christmas

A Sparkling Gem Will Bring a Sparkle to Her Eyes--

AS SHE opens her gift on Christmas morn note that look of pleasure deepen as she lifts from its bed of snowy cotton a dainty bit of jewelry. She appreciates the possibilities in that glistening bit—a brooch, or a Cluster, Dinner, or Solitaire Ring, in Diamonds and Platinum, perhaps, to "just set off" her new gown, or a string of pearls to accentuate the graceful curves of a pretty throat. For just that unique or individual something in the jewelry line we invite an inspection of our Holiday assortment.

Christmas Letter From Regent

At this holy season, when we reverently dwell upon the remembrance of the birth of our Lord, my thoughts are of you, of our society, of the power for good that it has become, and a message of love and an earnest hope for your happiness are in my heart.

From this sacred Christmas time may we each gain a strength that will enable us to throw open the windows of our lives and look away from ourselves and behold the need of the world.

May we gather from the beauty of this season a tenderness of spirit that will enable us to see only the good in each other. May we unite in the things that are high and great and good and, with the blessed inspiration of the remembrance of the birth of Christ, may we consecrate ourselves anew to our faith, our country, our society and to service for others.

GERTRUDE TAYLOR LAND,
State Regent.

D. A. R. Scholarship Girl

This year the state D. A. R. has a scholarship girl at the University of Georgia, Miss Ruth Moore, of Decatur. Since the admission to post-graduate study at the university many people have recalled the early efforts made to have university privileges extended to the women of the state.

A yellowed copy of a petition sent in over twenty years ago by Mrs. S. B. C. Morgan, of Savannah, the state regent, is still preserved. This petition was signed by officers and members of the D. A. R. and Colonial Dames and was as follows:

"To the Honorable the Trustees of the University of Georgia: The Daughters of the American Revolution in Georgia and the Colonial Dames in the state respectfully petition that your honorable body open the doors of the university to white women."

"Other institutions of learning of high distinction and under state control have demonstrated the feasibility of affording to women the same advantages as are given the men."

"The opportunity afforded has been eagerly seized and as the demand of the age and the necessities of the sex constantly impose new burdens it is but fair that the state, which owes a common duty, should afford an equal opportunity."

"The only argument ever advanced against such a request is based on the idea that co-education is undesirable, but that argument has already been answered by the law of the state which enacts women shall be admitted to all of the branch colleges. (See act of 1889, page 125, proceeding of legislature.) If co-education in a branch college has the sanction of the general assembly, there can be no logical objection to co-education in the university."

"If the young men who graduate from the branch colleges are entitled to the advantages of the university so are the young women who graduate in the same classes."

The petition was signed by Mrs. Sarah Berrien Casey Morgan, state regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution, mover of the resolution to memorialize the trustees and chairman of the committee which speaks in behalf of the twelve chapters in Georgia; Mrs. W. W. Gordon, president Georgia Society Colonial Dames; and Mrs. S. B. C. Morgan, first vice president Georgia Society of Colonial Dames; Mrs. J. J. Wilder, Mrs. Annie Johnston Waring, Mrs. John Nisbet, Mrs. Joseph R. Lamar, Mrs. William Garrard and Mrs. Louis G. Young.

This petition will be read with interest by many of the new members of the D. A. R. The organization has grown from twelve chapters in those days to over 3,100 members and eighty chapters.

While deeply interested in historical research, still the chapters in Georgia have accomplished much that is practical, especially in patriotic education and the many scholarships and prizes given every year.

For many years the D. A. R. worked faithfully to bring about compulsory education in Georgia.

GIFTS FOR THE FORT

D. A. R. chapters are reminded that with the approaching festival of Christmas we have with us at Lawson hospital, Fort McPherson, many boys who will miss Christmas at home.

Contributions of candy, cake, fruit, nuts and flowers, may be sent to your chairman for distribution.

MRS. E. H. BARNES,

State Chairman of Distribution, Fort McPherson Red Cross House.

D. A. R. Memorial Scholarship Fund

There is no memorial more fitting to the memory of the boys of Georgia, who gave their lives in the world war, than a living testimonial of our devotion and gratitude to those who so willingly paid the supreme sacrifice. Realizing that a perpetual scholarship at the University of Georgia would be an ever living monument to those boys who are gone, and an everlasting aid to those who come after, the Elijah Clarke chapter, D. A. R., located as it is in Athens, and being so many worthy and earnest boys unable to finish their education because of lack of funds, undertook to raise the $5,000 which was necessary to place this perpetual scholarship fund at the state university.

Realizing that this would appeal to the many members of the D. A. R. all over the state, the Elijah Clarke chapter decided to bring this resolution before the last conference and give to them the opportunity of sharing in this wonderful work. It was unanimously accepted by the conference.

For two years a boy at the University of Georgia has had the money forwarded to him by the Elijah Clarke chapter, and has thus been enabled to finish his education—the sum given each year being the interest on the $5,000, which is credited on the total amount.

over to the University of Georgia the full amount of $5,000. And it will be with the knowledge of work well done, if it be accomplished by April. And it will be, for every D. A. R. realizes what this means to the Georgia boys—and what it will mean to the years to come. For this fund will be there always—a living testimonial of our loyalty to those boys, in whose memory it is given.

MRS. JULIUS TALMADGE,
State Recording Secretary, D. A. R.

Thrift Messenger
in the Movies

That statistics, when well exploited, can become dramatically interesting, was proven when Orrin Lester, a messenger from the Thrift and Savings Department of the U. S. Treasury, appeared as a speaker on an evening program during the recent moving picture exhibition at the auditorium, Atlanta, Georgia.

When Mr. Lester appeared in evening costume, and was introduced by the master of ceremonies and began to speak, about three thousand people crowded about the stage, wondering probably which "movie star" Mr. Lester would exploit, especially when he began to tell his audience that the government was asking the nation to become a thrifty one and to avoid a revelry in non-essentials.

When Mr. Lester asserted in dramatic way that last year $750,000,000 was consumed in perfume and cosmetics, the ladies of his audience were timid momentarily in the use of their vanity boxes, and the men looked guilty when he said $800,000,000 had been used in the purchase of cigarettes.

And as he showed how we could contribute toward a national prosperity, if we would call a halt on our expenditures of last year, he needed "no star" to hold his audience whom he thrilled, when he rapidly quoted as expenditures of the last year as follows:

Cheating gun	50,000,000
Candy	1,000,000,000
Soft drinks	350,000,000
Ice Cream	250,000,000
Confections	350,000,000
Cereal beverages	230,000,000
Cigars	510,000,000
Cigars and Cigarette holders	1,000,000
Tobacco and Snuff	800,000,000
Toilet Soaps, etc.	400,000,000
Jewelry, Watches, etc.	500,000,000
Admissions to places of amusement and dues	800,000,000
Pianos, Organs, Victrolas, etc.	250,000,000
Fur articles	300,000,000
Carpets, Rugs, luxurious wearing apparel, etc.	1,000,000,000
Hunting garments, liveries, firearms and shells	60,000,000
Art works	25,000,000
Yachts	1,000,000
Portable Electric Fans	8,000,000
Sporting goods	25,000,000
Luxurious services	3,000,000,000
Luxuries in hotels and restaurants	75,000,000
Luxurious articles of goods, etc.	5,000,000,000
Other luxuries, including joy riding, pleasure resorts, races, etc.	3,000,000,000
Automobiles and parts	2,000,000,000

At the end of his message, movie stars withdrew warmly from the heavy fur coats they wore, and began to wonder why he had come, and certain promoters looked in the direction of the chairman of arrangements for something of an explanation.

But the chery face of Eugene O'Brien so quickly succeeded the enthusiastic one of Orrin Lester, that the "Movie Star" program was in no way limited in interest and the government speaker had "put over" his thrift message so successfully he needs no manager or promoter and his publicity agents have been busy ever since.

When every individual of the nation realizes that in computing the savings and the extravagances of the nation, he has a part, then maybe people will begin to save for themselves and for the country, which for its final success depends on every one of its people.

Mr. Lester's message is one that every man and woman should know and act on. We cannot go on with the record we made last year for reveling in luxuries, and preserve our success as a prosperous nation—and this message should be passed on.

Atlanta Children to See Film Story of "Slidertown"

Under the auspices of the Atlanta City Federation of Women's clubs in charge of Atlanta's cleanup campaign, Atlanta school children will see the noted civic film called "Slidertown."

"Slidertown" was a local term applied to a quarter of Dayton, composed mainly of tenement houses. A factory building, an inferior wooden structure, was acquired and used by the National Cleanup campaign in its struggling infancy. The idea of the community was to constantly break down the tenement houses and build new ones out of the factory windows with rocks and otherwise annoying the manufacturers. The police protection was inadequate.

The Factory. The company built a high fence enclosing the factory. The boys would tear off the boards, go inside and continue their trespassing. The company, unable to equip a new location, adopted a very successful plan of defense. A crude shed boarded in enough to break the worst of wind and rain was constructed outside the factory enclosure, and furnished with a small stock of supplies, clay, and a teacher employed to instruct the boys in making models. That was an epoch in "Slidertown"—the factory sustained no more injury from broken window glass. The boy energy "cut through" the plastic art. Before the novelty had worn off the grown-ups in the community had become desecrated in the study of sculpture, which was absorbing their hitherto hopes and dreams.

The Company. Mr. Patterson, head of the National Cleanup Register company, taught a vision of the possibilities of child power. He then led the boys and girls into the market garden industry on the vacant lots, financing the seed and utensils and having the work supervised by experienced men. "Slidertown" was made over. Blooming and growing things inspired the painting of houses and better house-keeping. One step of betterment called for another and well devised schemes of rivalries and competition added zest to the progress.

All this time the business of the cleanup register company was growing by leaps and bounds, becoming the pride of Dayton, and could well spare gifts to the local welfare movement.

It began for self-defense; then became philanthropy. Afterward came the unforeseen result, that is, a highly profitable investment to the company through the public good-will, extending out into a nationwide reputation.

The Garden Work. The idle lot and back-yard garden development became contagious, and all Dayton got the habit and the city government yielded to the prevailing sentiment by making parks and planting trees and such other things as the landscape gardeners called for. All in all, Dayton is a model of civic beauty and thrift combined, admired throughout the nation.

The boys and girls formed co-operative marketing associations and organized a number of business concerns among themselves, and the training of some of the best men and women in Ohio is traceable to the amateur enterprises which rode out of the public spirited undertakings of "Slidertown" of years ago.

"Slidertown" is a screen story of actual children, women and men, under every day conditions found in every American town. It is a series of human documents intended to demonstrate how, under the patient and patriotic leadership of one earnest citizen, or group of citizens, the lives of individuals and the welfare of a community may be enriched. And better still, how a class of children usually neglected, may be turned from vagrancy or failure into splendid manhood and womanhood. It has no thrills, but runs deep with a lesson of life, better house-keeping. One step of

For Paris Midinettes at Notre Foyer

BY JULIA COLLIER JARRIS,

Author of "Life and Letters of Joel Chandler Harris."

In Paris, not so long ago, it was no uncommon sight in the Tuileries Garden between 11 and 1 o'clock, to see those groups of mischievous-looking "midinettes," sempstresses and dressmakers, sitting on the benches of the Tuileries, waiting for their noon-day lunch.

Like most Parisian working girls, their eyes and lips were delightfully expressive and their small hats were set at a jaunty angle, but a close glance revealed shabby shoes with worn soles and rundown heels, and if the weather were rainy (as it is usually from October to May in Paris), a sympathetic observer would regret that these little maidens were forced to spend their two hours of lunch time in the open, hugging the shelter of the park kiosks or the arcades of the Rue de Rivoli, with never a cup of hot soup or cake-aulait between them and the chill of bleak weather.

Lame and lame, chattering bravely in the face of damp, chilly vistas, they dimly dimly, spiced with liveliness, have been rewarded, and the working girls of the Madeleine and Opera quarter have their clubs, and the Tuileries Garden is lonelier and less colorful from 11 to 2.

"Notre Foyer" it is called—"Our Home," and if you are interested in youth and life and work, and all of which this combination of food, shelter, and social life is a model of, I suggest that you place yourself in imagination, midway down the narrow noisy Rue Danou, a few minutes after 11 o'clock any day in the week except Sunday, and see through my eyes what has become of our little "midinettes."

The Big Doors.

Here they come, trooping up to the big oaken doors which swing back and reveal in the courtyard the facade of a large, dignified, stately gray stone house, which conceals behind its bland exterior all sorts of rich and exciting things from the viewpoint of a Parisian working girl. It seems at first as if the kind of house were going to hold them all, but by 11:30 it begins to boil over, and out into the courtyard trickles a stream of girls, which, added to by new comers, soon flows to the very edge of the noisy life, and strikes head-on the habits of the fashionable restaurants of the neighborhood, often leaving the streets to the side of the way to avoid breaking the line of merry human sparrows who are gradually following their comrades into the cafeteria of "Notre Foyer."

It has been said that the French are not adaptable, that they frown upon new ways of doing things, and are scornful of the customs of other countries. Perhaps they are, but I can vouch for the fact that French maidens in their teens are quite as interested in "modern methods" as it is necessary for their comfort and well-being. They have seized upon the cafeteria idea with enthusiasm and are working in our national capital during the past three years has fallen more gracefully into the "cafeteria" which stretches from the steam tables out to the street than those same "midinettes," who, until the past two months, had never heard of our "wait-on-yourself" arrangement.

The Cafeteria.

The cafeteria of "Notre Foyer" can serve 1,000 meals during the lunch hours; 120 girls can stand in the line which reaches from the steam tables to the door of the dining room, and seven are supposed to pass the checker in a minute's time. Here is the menu as it reads on the day I dropped in: Hors d'oeuvres, 25 centimes; soup, 40 centimes; roast beef, 25 centimes; French boiled ham, 1 franc, 50 centimes; three of potatoes or string beans, 50 centimes; macaroni, 75 centimes; cake, fruit or preserves, 50 centimes; coffee or chocolate, 50 centimes; bread, 20 centimes. I observed that nearly every girl had chosen a substantial lunch of soup, meat, one vegetable and a dessert, in contrast to the bread-and-chocolate regime of the Tuileries, and what an increase of energy and efficiency (not to mention happiness) must result from the combination of wholesome food, shelter from the weather and a change of ideas during those two hours of noonday recess!

The Service.

For the Foyer does not drop its service at the end of the meal. Follow the majority of the girls up the broad stairs to the second floor and go with them into their gymnasium or their salon. In the first named you will see little errand girls from the big department stores of the nearby boulevards joining with tourists from business houses in whatever diversion is going on—sometimes it is basketball or other games, sometimes a choral class, again "travelling." Or if more seriously inclined, the aspiring "midinette" can have an English lesson or one in stenography, or in cutting and sewing or even in "first aid." The course in "diction" is very popular for this includes the arrangement and pronunciation of plays.

Already there are 2,000 members of the Foyer, each proudly paying her membership dues of seven francs a year. This entitles her to the use of the cafeteria, of the reading room and of the gymnasium during the noon recess and until 9 o'clock every evening. The courses in English, stenography, special gymnastics and other courses mentioned, range in price from eight to thirteen francs. The English courses are full and the gymnastic classes number nearly 2,000, though the Foyer has been in operation in Rue Danou less than a month. There is a complete equipment of showers for the gymnasium and of porcelain tubs for hot baths. Only those who have lived in Europe can fully realize what these bathing facilities mean to working girls. None of them ever saw a porcelain bath before, but they are all the readier to make use of them, and the bath rooms are always busy in the evenings, furnishing luxurious ablutions, with towels and individual soap, for the extravagant sum of one franc twenty-five.

The physical director, a handsome young American with glowing cheeks and sparkling eyes, looks like a Juno amongst her band of Parisian girls. He is a French working girl is undersized, and being entirely unused to concerted gymnastics or organized games she has considerable handicap to overcome. But if enthusiasm and intelligence are to be trusted, she is bound to catch up with her American sister in the race for health, and she is in her efforts than the American when once she takes hold of a new thing. As for the French working girls, they are much interested in their "league of health," and many of them have thorough and physical education. The Foyer is a constant source of daily physical training, semi-weekly bathing, simple daily exercises and abstinence from coffee or wine. Already two American women doctors have offered their services as physical examiners for the correction of individual defects, and physical education will be kept on all girls who enter these classes.

Permanent Success.

I believe that most of us are weary of the permanent success of this Foyer to be the hearty and sympathetic co-operation of the girls. We hear a great deal these days about the lack of harmony between the two races which were so close and dear to each other during the war. It is to be feared that the "midinettes" will naturally arise between peoples of different traditions and ideals have been in many instances magnified and exaggerated by a certain class of inaccurate and prejudiced journalists who seem to delight in inflaming public sentiment. If individuals of this type would express their feelings in a sane and reasonable manner, and if the people of France and America would look upon each other with mutual sympathy and understanding, the world would be a better place. The Foyer is founded on the spectacle of French and American organizations working together for the good of France in complete accord and with perfect success.

"Notre Foyer" is a shining example of this kind of co-operation, for its establishment and maintenance are due to a combination of the American Y. W. C. A. and the French Femmes Chrétiennes. When General Joffre visited America he investigated, among other things, the welfare work being done among women workers in large manufacturing plants, feeling that any similar work could be done in France. He was particularly interested in the work of the Y. W. C. A. and had inaugurated welfare work on a large scale amongst the women workers of France. He was particularly interested in the welfare work of the Y. W. C. A. and had inaugurated welfare work on a large scale amongst the women workers of France. He was particularly interested in the welfare work of the Y. W. C. A. and had inaugurated welfare work on a large scale amongst the women workers of France.

And now let me give you a charming little anecdote characteristic of the spirit which prevails amongst the membership of this club for working girls. It is the dream of the director of "Notre Foyer" to be the owners of the building which houses the club, and into which the combined organizations have already sunk a deal of money, as is obvious the moment one glimpses the "modern improvements" in the delightful old French building. One day one of the girls (we will call her Cecile) came to the director and told her that a change of work would take her into a distant quarter of the city and therefore she would not be able to come to the Foyer any more. Miss R. expressed her regret and begged Cecile not to forget them in her new surroundings. That would be impossible, Mademoiselle, I have been too happy with you for that," replied the young girl, and as she drew nearer Miss Richardson noticed a colored photograph of the Trocadero and as she shyly offered to her good friend with all the grace of the French temperament she expressed the wish that "Mademoiselle" would accept it as a souvenir of her gratitude and affection. Miss Richardson thanked her warmly and about to bid her good-bye when Cecile colored prettily and detaining the director with a gesture, drew a five franc note from her lean and shabby purse.

"Take this, too, Mademoiselle. I want to make a little present to the Foyer."

"What use shall the Foyer make of it, Cecile?" asked Miss Richardson, deeply touched. "Shall I hand it to the treasurer for the general fund?"

"If you don't mind, Mademoiselle, I would like it to be used to help buy the house, I heard you say one day that you hoped the Foyer would own its own home after a while."

Cecile was assured that her contribution should be set aside for this purpose, and it went on record as the first donation for the purchase of the kind old building at No. 9 Rue Danou!

American plan, to give young women an opportunity for a happy, rounded development of mind, body, character and special talents.

"Notre Foyer" comes under the general direction of Miss Mary Dingham, head of the American Y. W. C. A. work in France, but its vice president is a French woman of distinction, Mme. de Pourtales; its secretary is Mlle. M. Bruneton, and M. Courvoisier is the chairman of the finance committee. "Notre Foyer" is the only work of the kind which the French have ever undertaken on such a large scale and it was due entirely to the recommendations of their American friends that the French body was led to overcome all doubts about its feasibility. So much for Franco-American harmony!

In China newspapers are sold two and three times over. Collectors go about the city gathering up the newspapers of the previous day's issue, redistributing them among the lower class population. They are then further distributed by being sent out to the villages and country districts, where they are sold at a fraction of their original price.

Evidence that the high power incandescent lamp now so commonly used for street lighting may not be wholly innocent as a possible source of fire was observed in southern California recently, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. A bulb hanging twenty feet above the ground suddenly burst and the white-hot particles of metal it scattered instantly ignited the dry grass at its foot of the pole. Fire wardens of the district now are advocating the use of suitable guards about the lamps.

Greetings From State President

Once again the Christmas season comes to us, marching steadily down Time's avenues of days and months. Again we pause in our daily duties to pass a word of good cheer and to do our individual parts in the bringing of happiness for at least one day—to this old world.

In sending our Yuletide greeting to the Georgia Daughters I cannot help but look back upon the twelve months which have passed since Christmas of 1919, with their striking events which have made of this year a truly epochal period in the lives of all women.

For the first time in history this year has seen the enactment of national legislation which makes of woman a full citizen. Nineteen twenty is the date which future histories will carry as the year when American women for the first time exercised the franchise in the full enjoyment of their citizenship. Thoughtful women will look back upon it as the birth year of new and noble responsibilities.

What a list of responsibilities faces us as the New Year draws near!

The world war left a legacy of chaos, of hatred and of intolerance which has poisoned the minds and hearts of men of many nations. The passions and tactics of the battlefield have, seemingly, been transferred to the realms of industry and politics in a long and trying period of reconstruction shows, as yet, no signs of the end.

At Christmas time we are all accustomed to sing "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men." This year, before we sing, let us search our hearts and see whether, with clear conscience, we can lift up our voices in praise to Him who went about the earth two thousand years ago calling upon men to follow Him and serve the gospel of charity and love.

No living human being, whatever may be his or her station in life, has any right to join in the chant of good will unless they are honestly striving with all their power to restore peace and happiness, in fullest measure, to this war-torn, chaotic earth.

As voters, we women must take our full part in this duty.

As women, we face an opportunity greater than any enfranchisement can bestow.

With the maker of the home, first of all, rests the duty of restoring to us all the Spirit of Love, with her attendants, Tranquility and Concord.

From the homes must come the true spirit of peace. No presidential proclamation, no enactment of congress, can bring peace when there is no peace. Only from the hearthstones of our people can peace and happiness flow.

It lies before us women, as our sacred duty, to make the Christmas of 1920 a superlatively right Christmas. We must, everyone of us, make it so in our own homes. A right Christmas, with the aroma of love and kindness lasting on through the days which follow, will spread more brotherly kindness than any other influence.

And, after all, what the world needs today more than anything else is an unlimited growth of the spirit of kindness and tolerance.

As your president, I am proud of the achievements of our organization during the past year. May the New Year be immeasurably better than any we have yet seen, both as an organization and as individuals in living the ideals of our organization strike deeper into the roots of our people's consciousness and bring forth fruit worthy of the forebears by whose heroism we exist and to the lustre of whose memory we consecrate all our efforts.

ALEXIS W. HARROLD,
President, G. A. Division, U. D. C.
Americus, Ga.

TENNILLE CHAPTER

The November meeting of the Tennille chapter was held at the home of Mrs. W. C. Troutman with Mrs. J. W. Smith, Mrs. M. E. M. Bashinski and Miss Alice Smith hostesses; Mrs. W. H. Colgate, the president, in the chair. Much work has been accomplished since the first fall meeting. The chairman on Jefferson Davis memorial reported $10 contributed by the Tennille chapter.

The plans for a memorial to two of our beloved deceased members is under consideration and the form it will be a dedication of a book to each member, one for Mrs. Ella Boatright Franklin and one for Mrs. Lillian Ivey Davis. Two books were presented at this meeting to the chapter library, one as a memorial for Miss Lillian Ivey Davis from Mrs. H. J. Ivey and one from Mrs. Paris, Sandersville, Ga. The historian reported 118 war records sent out to soldier boys.

A committee was appointed to plant grass around the memorial fountain in city square. Mrs. L. K. Rogers and Mrs. A. E. Gilmore gave interesting accounts from the convention in Macon; delegates were also appointed to the general convention. A nice sum of $21 was realized from the candy sale on circus day.

Miss Alice Smith, chairman of membership committee, reports several applications for memberships. Plans were made for a Christmas bazaar and the different committees were read. The president invited the chapter to meet with her in December. Following are the officers for the year:

Mrs. W. C. Troutman, first vice president; Mrs. E. B. McDade, second vice president; Mrs. M. N. Jordan, recording secretary; Mrs. Dorsey Franklin, corresponding secretary; Mrs. L. H. Ledford, treasurer; Miss Louise Brown, registrar; Miss Alice T. Smith, librarian; Mrs. Louisa K. Rogers, historian; chaplain, Mrs. T. Y. Lovett, reporter.

BENSON SWORD FUND

To Chapter Presidents: At the 1920 convention of the U. D. C. held in Macon, October 12-14, the following resolution was passed without a dissenting vote:

"Whereas, the state of Georgia has reason to be proud of Georgia's contribution of men, women and work to the late war, and furnished to the cause of victory and peace Admiral William Sheppard Benson, who was born and reared in this state, and whom those in authority selected to command the embarkation and debarkation of America's troops and the transportation of supplies in America's most trying need and hour; who in the discharge of those duties and responsibilities, performed his command with such faultless merit and excellence that in sincere appreciation of his glorious and heroic services the governments of the United States, France, Great Britain, Belgium, Italy and the state of New Mexico have seen fit to honor and decorate him in behalf of the people of such respective governments; and

"Whereas, the history of the world war will record William Sheppard Benson, the admiral of America's fleet, and Georgia's most prominent contribution to the naval forces in the work aforesaid; and that Georgia has been tardy in allowing other nations and peoples to lead in honoring our own countryman—Georgia's own son—William Sheppard Benson—admiral of the United States navy.

All contributions are requested to be sent to Mrs. A. E. Barnes, chairman, 300 Hardeman avenue, Macon, Ga. 4.

The Benson sword committee follows:

Mrs. J. A. Perdue, Atlanta; Mrs. Drville Park, Macon; Mrs. J. L. Hankinson, Augusta; Mrs. R. A. Grady, Savannah; Mrs. J. D. Weaver, Dawson; Miss Ida Holt, Macon; Miss Lillie Martin, Hawkinsville; Mrs. J. M. Thomas, Griffin; Mrs. Flewellyn Hill, Macon; Mrs. L. G. Youmans, Valdosta; Mrs. Ira Y. twenty-sixth convention of the Georgia division, U. D. C., in assembly at Macon, Ga., desire and hereby resolve to present a sword to Admiral Benson's heroic work, which honors us and all patriotic Georgians. The way and method of procuring this sword to be left to a committee to be appointed by the president of the Georgia division.

Mrs. Harrold, our president, appointed a committee on this Benson memorial with request that each chapter of Georgia U. D. C. be asked to give the fullest co-operation in raising funds for the prompt and successful fulfillment of this resolution.

This gift from our Georgia U. D. C. will take the form of a jeweled sword, that can be worn by Admiral William Sheppard Benson, as a visible token of our admiration and appreciation of his service. It will cost not less than two thousand dollars.

To raise this amount, each chapter, we feel sure, will esteem it a privilege to contribute as generously as possible. The money can be raised as each chapter deems best—not forgetting that many in each community, not members of the U. D. C., might desire to contribute to this gift; feeling, as many of us do, that Georgia has been tardy in allowing other nations and peoples to lead in honoring our own countryman—Georgia's own son—William Sheppard Benson—admiral of the United States navy.

All contributions are requested to be sent to Mrs. A. E. Barnes, chairman, 300 Hardeman avenue, Macon, Ga. 4.

A MERRIE CHRISTMAS

A sweeter music seems to swell at Christmas.
There is joy in every tinkling bell
And so this message speeds away
Best wishes and greetings to convey Wish each of you in the good old way.
Merry Christmas!

Byrne—Mickles.

The marriage of Miss Helen Andrews Byrne and Mr. John Andrew Mickles, of Chicago, took place Wednesday, December 15, at nuptial mass at the Sacred Heart church, the Rev. Peter McOscar, officiating. Miss Mary Liddell Byrne was maid of honor, Mr. Robert McCleskey was best man.

The bride entered the church with her brother, Mr. John J. Byrne, who gave her in marriage. She wore a crown of blue panne velvet, touched with silver cloth, and her hat was of the same color, combined with gray satin trimmings. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and valley lilies.

The maid of honor wore a becoming gown of brown charmeuse combined with orange-colored georgette and her hat was a small French model of brown and orange draperies. After the ceremony, the wedding party enjoyed a delightful breakfast at the home of the bride's mother on Forrest avenue. Holiday decorations were artistically arranged throughout the apartments and the favors were small red baskets containing mints of red and green.

The bride is an attractive and beautiful young woman of the brunette type, and she has a host of friends who will regret her departure from Atlanta, as the couple will reside in Streator, Ill.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Mickles, of Chicago. Besides being an alderman of his ward, he is prominently connected in the contracting business in Streator.

After a honeymoon trip to Florida, the couple will be at home to their friends after January 2, at 1301 East First street, Streator, Ill.

Scholarship Offered At Woodberry Hall.

The scholarship committee of the Atlanta chapter, D. A. B., offers a full scholarship in literary tuition at Woodberry Hall to begin January 1. Any Atlanta girl who has completed the grammar school work is eligible. Please apply promptly to Mrs. C. L. Dean, chairman, 323 West Peachtree street.

At Last—It's Here! A Real Price Deduction On Pianos—Player-pianos

The Long Deferred Hope of Many Homes is About to be Realized; the Hope that Some Day Piano Prices Would be Back to Something Like Old-Time Prices. Fortunately, indeed, are the Pianoless Homes of this City and Vicinity that this House, for a Brief Time at Least, Is in a Position to Offer the Long-Desired Opportunity, and Especially at This Season of the Year.

Tomorrow Morning We Start
A Clean-Sweep Sale During December of Every New Instrument, at Startling Reduction on Present Prices and on Easy Terms

25% REDUCTION!

During December Only

No Matter the Style or Make. There Will Be a Horizontal Discount of 25% From the Regular Selling Prices. Select Any Instrument to Your Liking: Look at the Plainly Marked Price: Figure in Your Mind What It Will Be After Taking Off ONE-FOURTH of Its Price and You Will Readily See What a Real Opportunity This Is.

Read the Story

Considering the advance during the past two years in the prices of every commodity that enters into the home life, the advance in the prices of pianos and phonographs has been small in comparison. Yet they have necessarily advanced, and while there is no immediate prospect of any material reduction, this store proposes to now be, as always heretofore, the leader in passing along to our patrons any and every saving that could be had.

Our year has been a good one, yet we find ourselves overstocked with new goods, and we have determined to take drastic steps to reduce the stock to the minimum by January first.

We have, therefore, gone through our stock and marked down every instrument, no matter what its make or condition, making a drastic reduction on each; reductions that will please and surprise you, that mean a pretty saving to you, enabling you to have that piano or player-piano in your house for Christmas, besides a considerable sum of money saved or to use for other Holiday purchases.

Our sole idea and desire in inaugurating this sale at this time is to clean house for the new year, to reduce our stock down to the lowest notch possible. We are overstocked. We admit it. And we are willing to sacrifice profit in order to unload.

The piano buyers of this city will be the gainers. Every instrument will go at a remarkable saving. The stock, while complete and varied, is limited, and our advice to you, dear reader, is to make an early visit to the sale in order to secure choice selections.

And This Is the Time to Buy Your Christmas Piano

We Will Deliver It at Once or Christmas Eve, as You Prefer. Surely Now Is the Time for You to Get Your Christmas Piano, Now While There Is a Real Saving to You. A Deposit Will Hold Your Selection. Delivery Any Day Right Up to Christmas Eve.

Caruso All Right, He Wires Col. Peel

When Colonel and Mrs. William Lawson Peel read of the injury which had befallen Enrico Caruso last week, when a small blood vessel broke at the base of the tongue, they wired expressing their interest and anxiety.

Almost immediately they received a reply assuring them that nothing serious had happened to the great singer's voice or throat, and subsequently the papers gave the news that Caruso had sung his next engagement, receiving an affectionate and enthusiastic ovation.

Colonel Peel is president of the Atlanta Musical Festival association, and he and Mrs. Peel have frequently entertained Caruso in their hospitable home.

The message to Colonel and Mrs. Peel was as follows:

"My Dear Friends: Thank you very, very much for your kind telegram and sweet thought very much appreciated. Indeed, there is nothing to be alarmed about, thank God. I am glad to tell you that tonight I will resume my duties at the opera house, singing as usual and that I am feeling well again."

"With every best wish and with my love for you both, from Mrs. Caruso, also, I am cordially yours. (Signed) "ENRICO CARUSO."

Forrest Avenue School.

An illustrated talk on China by Margie Steadman, of the seventh grade, featured the program of the meeting of the Forrest Avenue Parochial school association Thursday. The interesting souvenirs and the originality of the child's talk elicited much praise from those present. A short talk by Mrs. Andrew Hanson on the subject of women voting and a splendid program of songs and recitations by the children of the different grades was given. The president, Mrs. J. V. Hawthorn, in a few well chosen words presented to Miss Kate King, the principal, a beautiful electrolier as a Christmas gift from the association in recognition of her splendid work and co-operation, and a dodecade was given to the children of the Home for the Friendless. After the business session delightful refreshments were served in the school library and the mothers were shown through the different rooms which had already been beautifully decorated for the Christmas season. The library was very attractive with its Christmas wreaths made by the children of the school. A beautifully appointed table with

Leap Year Dance.

Free School of Health.

At the regular meeting of the Psychological Free School of Health to be held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the assembly hall of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, the subject for discussion will be "Breathing for Health," with Rev. A. T. Osborn as the speaker. There will be community singing from 3 until 3:30 o'clock, led by Mr. McRee. After the lecture rehearsal for the Christmas musical program will be held. Robert Bryant Harrison, director of the school, will preside and extend a cordial invitation to the public to attend.

Christmas at Hospitals Planned by Clubwomen.

The soldier boys at the United States public health service sanitarium and the patients at Battle Hill sanitarium are the adopted children of the hospital committee of the Atlanta Women's club, and will be given a fitting Christmas by this committee and capable women. They are working unceasingly to make this a grand and glorious Yuletide for their patients. At a committee meeting last Monday morning at the clubhouse final plans were made for all details of the Christmas activities, and at 11 o'clock on Tuesday a goodly sum was realized. Mac contributions have been made by members of the committee and others interested in this splendid work, and wonderful assistance has been given by the American Red Cross and the American Legion. A moving picture machine has been purchased by the Red Cross and installed at the United States public health service sanitarium, and through the generosity of Mr. William Oldknow film service will be furnished free of charge. Through the united efforts of Julian Boehm and the American Legion, cigarettes have been donated by the Liggett & Myers Tobacco company through Mr. Murray, representative, Barnes Music store, Cable Piano company, Mrs. William Oldknow and many others have made wonderful donations, and there will be music, laughter, good things to eat, gifts and good cheer. Any contribution or donation of victrola records, magazines, books or flowers will be gratefully received by this committee and may be sent to the chairman, Mrs. J. B. Rowe, 809 North Boulevard, phone Hemlock 3192-J.

Ramsey-Whitcomb.

A pretty wedding of Wednesday, December 15, was that of Miss Earl Ramsey and Mr. Lew James Whitcomb, of Atlanta, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. O. K. Ramsey, in Decatur, Dr. James E. Dickey and Rev. Samuel A. Cowan officiating. The impressive ring ceremony was performed in the long living room before an altar of palms and ferns. Narcissus and orchids roses were artistically arranged through the lower floor of the attractive home. Before the entrance of the bride, Miss Irene Landin sang and Mrs. Nellie Dean Mann played the wedding march. The bride was lovely in a tailored suit of midnight blue tricot with accessories to match. Her corsage was of orchids, bride's roses and valley lilies. Mrs. A. K. Ramsey, mother of the bride, wore a costume of black charmuse embroidered in silver; her corsage was white rosebuds. Miss Lucile Ramsey was charming in dark blue velvet, with corsage of Parma violets.

Mrs. George L. Harris, of Knoxville, Tenn., sister of the bride, was attractive in a suit of blue duvetyn and a French spring model hat. Mrs. Knox Ramsey was becomingly gowned in black velvet and Georgette with corsage of narcissus and pink roses. Mrs. Whitcomb, who is the daughter of Mrs. A. K. Ramsey and the late Hon. A. K. Ramsey, is greatly admired by a large circle of friends, possessing a charming personality and refinement of manner which is characteristic of an old southern family. Mr. Whitcomb, formerly of Grand Rapids, Mich., is a graduate of the University of Michigan and is well identified in social and business circles of Atlanta, and is in charge of the southern territory of the Wolverine Brass company. Mr. and Mrs. Whitcomb left for Grand Rapids to be the guest of relatives during the holidays, and will go from there to Florida. After February 1 they will be at the Winnet hotel.

Kirkwood Parent-Teachers' Association.

Under the inspiration of Mrs. Camp's presidency, the Kirkwood Parent-Teacher association in making wonderful progress, not only in the matter of membership, but in the work accomplished. Recently a splendid bookcase has been purchased, and is rapidly being filled with excellent reference works for all the grades. Benches for the little folks have been ordered, and a set of fine, up-to-date maps is under consideration. A play, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Travis, is slated for some time in January, and the moving picture shows of last Friday were a decided success.

Highland Parent-Teachers' Association.

The first three grades of the Highland school entertained members of the Highland Parent-Teachers' association Wednesday afternoon with a series of playlets in which the young thespians displayed exceptional ability. The occasion was the regular monthly meeting of the Highland Parent-Teacher association. After a brief business meeting the playlets were presented. Plays were presented by each of the three first grades. Miss Parker's room offered "The Spirit of Christmas in the Toy Shop." Mrs. Barnett's room gave a pantomime of "O Little Town of Bethlehem," and Miss Lawrence's room offered "Mother Goose's Christmas Tree." In the second grades Miss Hodges' class sang "Jolly, Jolly Santa Claus," and Miss Wells' class gave Dickens' "Christmas Carol." In the third grade Mrs. Blackshear's class gave a dramatization of "Christmas Chimes," and Miss Comley's class sang Christmas carols.

New Year's Eve Dinner-Dance at Hotel Ansley

Numerous prominent people, not only from Atlanta but from neighboring cities have made reservations for parties at the New Year's Eve dinner-dance at the Hotel Ansley. Among the distinguished guests will be a large party of Floridians, including Mr. F. N. Conrad, president of the Merchants' bank at Daytona, and Mrs. Conrad; also Judge Burt Fish, Jurist of Daytona. This year the Ansley's New Year's Eve roof garden dinner-dance will be more elaborate than ever before. There will be handsome souvenirs, special cabaret attractions and special music under the direction of Mr. Jack Mathieson, Manager Charles A. Creighton, of the Ansley, has announced that only a limited number of reservations will be accepted. Among the many who already have made reservations are: Mr. St. Elmo Massengale, a party of twelve; Dr. Walpole Brewer, a party of six; Hon. F. N. Conrad, of Daytona, Fla., a party of twelve; Judge Burt Fish, of Daytona, Fla., a party of four; Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Creighton, a party of ten; Mr. L. G. Dinkler, a party of eight; Mrs. Edward Van Winkle, a party of six; Mr. F. D. Upchurch, a party of two; Mr. J. W. Madden, a party of four; Mrs. J. J. Hill Street School.

Hill Street Parent-Teacher association held its monthly meeting recently with the usual large attendance of mothers and teachers present. Mrs. Jack Evans presiding. Mrs. S. R. Bull, Atlanta's culinary expert, was present and gave a highly interesting and instructive discourse on "Lunches for School Children." Mrs. Bull gave a number of splendid recipes for appetizing and wholesome food suitable for children's lunches. The Hill street association recently purchased a stereopticon and 800 slides for the use of the school in class work, and a demonstration was given at the meeting. This was much enjoyed. Various committees made reports at this time, including the garden and other special committees. It was unanimously voted to contribute to the quota apportioned by the national parent-teacher board. Forty-eight dollars and forty-five cents was cleared from the candy-pulling given in November, as per report of Mrs. J. B. Morgan, chairman of this committee. Seventy-nine cups and saucers were contributed in the "cup and saucer shower" for the benefit of the kitchen equipment of the school.

CONDUCTED BY L. E. WINCHELL

Two Million Writers-for the Screen

The day's mail always brings something like this to Thomas Geraghty, production editor. All scenarios are read, but few are accepted.

Delta Weisman—author of 'The Aquittal' and many short stories.

ARACE of epic authors, such as no civilization has produced may result in America from the efforts of the thousands of free lance writers who are attempting to produce scenarios for the screen. Only those who spend their days in the scenario department of a great motion picture studio can never begin to appreciate the difficulties of the lay scenarist, or know in what numbers this species exists.

Thomas Geraghty, production editor in the eastern studios of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, believes fully two million Americans are trying to sell scenarios they have written. And while not one in many hundreds ever succeed in presenting an acceptable idea, the result of these labors will be something like a fresh breed of writers, Mr. Geraghty believes.

Many Manuscripts Read.

Hundreds of so-called original scripts are read weekly by Mr. Geraghty and the assistants in his department and he offers little encouragement to the amateur scenarist.

"No one," he says, "who is without the practice, contact and association obtained in a studio and with producers of motion pictures ever will be able to produce a finished scenario. You can no more learn to write a scenario by mail than you could learn aviation or music through that method."

"It simply can't be done. It is the old story of technique. The scenario is essentially a technical thing; the competent scenarist is a technician."

"To write a scenario that will be of use to the producer one must be familiar with the studio and its workings. He must know something of photography and the limitations of the camera; he must know a little of stagecraft—what scenes are possible and he must know architecture, furnishings, costuming and many other things, including lighting effects, which latter might be placed under the head of photography."

Requisites Unknown.

"The plumber, the merchant, the doctor or other laymen are not familiar with these technical requisites. But an ignorance of one or all of these necessary features is not frequently the cause of our rejection of the thousands of manuscripts which are mailed to us. The motion picture enthusiast can not be expected to learn stagecraft in all its varying essentials; he can not become an architect or an efficient photographer. And still perhaps he can furnish the idea for a picture, an idea that will be extraordinarily successful to the producer and very valuable to him."

"The idea is the thing—almost everything. No matter how crudely the story is written, regardless of its faults of construction, if the idea is there that is enough for the technicians.

"The lay producer of ideas may become very successful without ever becoming a technician. And you can't hope to learn much from text books, except perhaps, to steer away from the commonest faults."

"If I may do so I would like to suggest something to the amateur scenarist writers:

Plots Played Out.

"What the producer wants is not plots but stories built about themes. There are only a few plots, there are thousands literally thousands of themes; almost as many as there are nouns."

"Every kind of a plot that can ever be done has been done. There are only a few elements in a story, no matter how it is treated. But themes are different. Take the theme fear, for instance; or shame or greed or obstinacy, or any of the human traits."

"Get your theme well in mind. Then sew it through your plot, weave it through every tissue of your fabric. Build the plot about the superstructure of your theme, if you would rather say it that way."

"The plot must be one of the things that has been done since our first ancestor told his son the story of the day's hunt. But dress it up in a theme and you may have something worth while."

"A new school in literature is being created through the medium of motion pictures. Show me a man or woman who at some period in his or her life has not felt the urge to tell or write a story. We actually feel in stories, associating in our senses a combination of events; and we are coming to feel in pictures—eye flashes of these incidents or events."

The Story Tellers.

"Not a day passes hardly, in the life of the average human that he does not relate some happening to a fellow being. We all do it. The whole world tells stories."

"At some time in its development a great part of the world has tried to write its story. How many men in varied walks of life, I wonder, have the first act of a play or the first chapter of a novel hidden away? The construction of a novel is at best a tedious thing. The writing of a short story or play is not only tedious but technical. The interest flags, the budding author or playwright has not the patience, which you know, is synonymous with genius, and his work is unfinished. Perhaps many great writers—or call them story-tellers—have been lost through laziness or lack of intellectual equipment to put their story or play through."

Synopsis in Hour.

"Now a motion picture plot, the bare synopsis, innocent or stylized technique, may be written in an hour or so after it is clear in the author's brain. If the idea is what the producer wants and the author finds encouragement he probably will develop; branching out until he becomes a full-fledged and successful writer."

"The medium of the screen affords the lazy man encouragement; there is the money he is paid. The patient literary workman toils months, perhaps years on his novel and when completed it may be rejected, or it may not be received well and the author's royalty is a paltry remuneration for his labors."

"No such money as is paid by motion picture producers for ideas ever was paid by publishers. The producer will give thousands for a single good idea, no matter how crudely given him."

Short and Snappy.

"A few days ago a man came into the executive offices here and presented his idea in a three-minute conversation."

"I will give you $10,000 for that, just as it stands," the executive who heard him offered."

"You hear charges of piracy and theft of ideas from the layman. A man writes his scenario and sends it to us and it is rejected. Some time later the same man sees the general idea he had attempted to convey, presented on the screen and immediately sets up the cry of plagiarism."

"There is plagiarism in scenario writing, but it is not that of the producer; it is plagiarism of the lay writer."

"Stolen story after stolen story comes offered as original. On several occasions I have received scripts whose stories had been taken from scenarios I wrote myself, and in some cases the trouble had not been taken to change even the names of the characters."

Things That the Movie Camera Refuses to Do

NO one ever thinks of the man who makes the motion pictures. Yet the cameraman knows more about them than any one else concerned in the technical end of the work and he is a tyrant in his own way. Constant observation has taught him things about stars that they are unconscious of themselves. Here are some of the things the cameraman at the studios of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has learned:

BY ROY P. OVERBAUGH Billie Burke's Cameraman.

WHY doesn't beauty always make good on the screen?

There are several things that constitute beauty, such as coloring, expression, animation, proportion, contour and so forth. One of the most important of these is coloring, which, of course, is not reproduced by the motion picture camera. On the other hand, contour, beautiful lines and features are faithfully recorded. We often hear the expression, "The camera does not lie," but when it comes to photographing color it certainly does. It does not even record the relative value of colors as seen by the eye.

A person with only fair features but beautiful complexion, clear blue eyes and auburn hair might be considered to possess beauty, but on being photographed the resulting picture would show a rather muddy complexion, black hair, and very pale, washed-out appearing eyes. Make-up, of course, is the usual method to make the skin appear smooth on the screen, but this smoothness does not compare to the beauty of a pink and white complexion as seen by the eye. Auburn hair can be made to appear blond by keeping an abnormal amount of light on it, but there are times in an interior set for motion picture work that this would be bad technique, as apparently there is no logical source for such extreme overhead illumination.

The Subject of Light.

The still portrait photographer can work wonders by retouching, but in cinematography make-up of the artist's face has to accomplish the same purpose. For every person there is always some particular lighting which portrays him or her to the best advantage. It occasionally happens that owing to the design and construction of sets and improper lighting facilities, it is impossible to photograph them properly and do them entire justice. Poor lighting by the cameraman or bad laboratory work will make even the most beautiful appear positively ugly on the screen.

Finally, in determining whether persons will screen well, analyze their beauty. If it consists of beauty of contour and feature, and the eyes are not too light in color, they are from a photographic standpoint at least screen possibilities.

Note—I have in mind a girl of good features, who has jet-black hair, which she wears brushed straight back of her forehead. She has black eyes, insists on using a very light makeup and seems partial to white waists. This presents such a contrast that it is almost impossible to do justice to her photographically. Yet she is considered beautiful. The camera does not record extreme contrasts well.

What Camera Won't Do.

Here are some things a camera will not do:

Photograph objects by a light in which they are clearly visible to the eye, such as exteriors at night, interiors of homes and public buildings with natural illumination. I am, of course, referring to a motion picture camera—photographing scenes in which there is action.

Render extreme contrasts faithfully, such as dark buildings and sky with light clouds.

Render scenes so they will appear truly stereoscopic; that is, so that people or objects in the foreground stand out boldly in relief from the background.

Photograph colors.

Photograph color contrasts as the eye sees them.

Photograph objects near the camera and far away absolutely sharp at the same time.

Here are some tricks with the crank:

Making fast-moving objects appear slow, and vice versa.

Making one person appear in several places at once in the same scene.

Making one scene blend into another. Making people appear to float in the air or on beams of light.

Making a normal-sized person appear either a midget or a giant by comparison.

Photographing a person so that he will appear as a ghost or spirit.

Making a vision of a person or another scene appear in the scene being photographed.

Reverse action by which smoke appears to be going into a chimney instead of going out, or a man appears actors. Sometimes, I believe this plagiarism is unconscious; a person merely writes something which he has seen or read and which he honestly may believe is original.

"More than once we have received stories stolen bodily from old books, the persons offering the scenarios believing we might not detect the theft. Every time a great success is achieved in pictures we are flooded with several hundred treatments of the same story, the theft very thinly veiled."

Producers Willing to Pay.

"There was a time in the old days of motion picture production when companies did steal stories. But that day is gone. Ideas are so scarce and difficult to obtain we are all happy when we receive a new one. Producers are eager, even anxious to establish their reputations for paying large prices for good ideas."

The Screen Writers Guild, an offshoot of the Authors' League of America, recently was organized for the sole purpose of protecting writers for the screen. They have established means of copywriting scenarios for 50 cents. Any one with an idea he wants protected may mail a copy of his scenario to the Screen Writers' Guild in New York at the same time he sends his copy to the producer, and he will be assured of protection from plagiarism."

Originality Note.

Why doesn't some director have a Russian wolfhound in his picture? Some very effective "shots" could be taken with said wolfhound and the star. Of course, they wouldn't mean anything, but still they'd be very effective.

Famous Remarks Via Ouija Board.

The Producer—Don't put my name on the screen. It doesn't mean anything.

The Author—Don't give me any credit either. All my stories have been awful and I'm trying to live them down.

In the movies the only way a candidate for an office can be defeated is for the villain to get the candidate's wife in a compromising position, while in real life it is usually the dove of peace or a cake of soap that does the trick.

"The Old Homestead" Is Attraction at The Atlanta

Denman Thompson's American Rural Classic Begins Three-Day Engagement Here December 23—Special Christmas Matinee Saturday.

Plays may go and plays may come, but the great American classic, Denman Thompson's "The Old Homestead," goes on forever. This rural classic has been running for thirty-four years and has played to more people than any other modern play, with the possible exception of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

The many thousands who have become fond of the delightful old play and its people, it may be interesting to know that Mr. Thompson took most of the characters from real life. Uncle Joshua is a composite reproduction of two persons who lived in West Swansy, one known as Captain Whitcomb and the other as Joshua Holbrook. The captain furnished the comedy, and Joshua suggested the more serious moments of the play. The original of Aunt Matilda was a sister of

Joshua Holbrook and known to all the people of Swansy as Aunt Rhody, a tender, honest, faithful, respectable old woman. Cy Prime was a fellow townsman who had the reputation of being the biggest liar in Cheshire county and Seth Perkins was a composite of several characters. Henry Hopkins was a real boy playmate of Denman Thompson who went to New York, "made good" and acquired wealth. The good wholesome philosophy of "The Old Homestead" was a living philosophy of a real Uncle Josh, and its people were people from real life.

William Lawrence will be seen here in the lovable old character of "Uncle Josh," which part he has played over three thousand times. Augustus Pitou, Inc., the producers, are bringing this wonderful old play to the Atlanta theater for an engagement of three days, starting December 23 with a special Christmas day matinee Saturday.

All the famous features of former years are still maintained, the double quartet, Grace Church choir, the Swansy band and the producers are bringing this wonderful old play to the Atlanta theater for an engagement of three days, starting December 23 with a special Christmas day matinee Saturday.

"LIGHTNIN'" TO STRIKE ATLANTA JANUARY 3

Easily the most important dramatic theatrical event of the season will be the presentation of "Lightnin'" at the Atlanta theater the week of January 3. This is the famous comedy a success which has been running at the Gaiety theater, New York, for nearly three years and with 1,000 consecutive performances to its credit, holds the world's record for length of run on the great white way. The record up to this time has been held by "A Trip to Chinatown" with 687 performances.

John Golden, producer of "Lightnin'," endeavored himself to American audiences with his earlier offerings, "Turn to the Right" and "Three Wise Fools," and to the players who enjoyed these mixtures of laughs and heart throbs assurance is given that "Lightnin'" belongs in the same classification. Milton Nobles heads the cast that will introduce "Lightnin'" here. Mr. Nobles recently emerged from retirement to appear in the title role at the Gaiety theater, New York, for an extended engagement. The metropolitan reviewers praised his work enthusiastically.

"Alas, Poor Yorick"

A grinning, yellow skull adorns the tobacco case in the smoke shop at University City, Cal., patronized by Harry Carey, Frank Mayo, Hoot Gibson and other film favorites. On one or two occasions the death's head has prompted Frank Mayo to repeat a certain well known line from "Hamlet." The skull also greatly interested one of Carey's cowboys.

"Whose bean is that?" finally inquired the rough rider of the man who conducts the shop.

"It belongs to a guy called Yorick," was the reply. "Mr. Mayo says he knew him well."

LOEW'S GRAND HAS ALL-STAR PROGRAM

Cowboy Williams and Daisy, in Western Pastimes, on the Bill.

A pair of especially selected holiday programs of splendid vaudeville and photoplays have been booked for Christmas week by Loew's Grand.

Among the prominent offerings on the all-star program which opens the week are Cowboy Williams and Daisy, demonstrators of strenuous western pastimes and frolics; Bob White, "the whistling Doughboy," a remarkable mimic, and Pearl F. Abbott and company, in the noted comedy, "Silver Threads."

An important portion of the entertainment at the Loew house during Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday will be the double film bill, which presents a spectacular new Loew-Metro superfeature, "The Fatal Hour," along with Buster Keaton's latest comedy hit, "One Week."

Headlining the list of artists engaged for the week-end bill are the Five Musical Queens, one of the finest musical acts on the Loew circuit, and Frank Ward, widely known under the unique title of "The Hallucinationist."

"The Palace of Darkened Windows," a powerful melodrama with a big cast of players, is the screen headliner for Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

In accordance with established custom, four shows will be the order of the day Saturday, Christmas day. The vaudeville performances begin, respectively, at 2, 4, 7 and 9 o'clock.

In addition to the triple of acts previously mentioned as featuring the bill for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, two other stellar turns are programmed. One of them is the nonsensical skit staged by Carlton and Belmont, two eccentric laugh-makers. The other is called "Timely Impressions of the Season's Successes," and is introduced by the Thornbury Duke company.

Vaudeville Features Ethel Clayton Film Monday and Tuesday

Beautiful Ethel Clayton in "Crooked Streets" will be the feature picture at the Vaudeville Monday and Tuesday in addition to three acts of high class vaudeville.

"Crooked Streets" is a mystery story with many baffling angles, scenes and situations with a clever twist at the end. The answer to the call of adventure lead to the crooked, narrow, grimy streets of Shanghai; to the opium den; to the love with the winner taking all and a series of adventures that keep the audience guessing.

Wednesday and Thursday the Vaudeville will show the seventh episode of "Bride 13," with a Hank Mann comedy, "Hot Dogs," as an added attraction, and the vaudeville bill will change Thursday.

T. Roy Barnes may appear in a play version of "The Naughty Wife," under the Christie banner, before accepting the honors and emoluments of screen stardom.

New York Winter Garden "Passing Show" Coming

From left, Peggy Brown, Dolores Suarez and Bobby Boles in the New York Winter Garden "Passing Show," coming to the Atlanta theater week of December 27.

One of the most important announcements the local management will be able to make to theatergoers during the season is the fact that it has been definitely arranged for the Messrs. Shubert to present at the Atlanta theater for six nights and two matinees, beginning Monday, December 27, the big New York Winter Garden spectacle, "The Passing Show." This colorful musical extravaganza is in two acts and fifteen colossal scenes. It is the most ambitious effort yet made by the New York Winter Garden, which is well worth noting—taking into consideration that twenty-five of these gigantic shows have already been produced by the management of this world famous temple of amusement. In "The Passing Show" every locale—from Child's Fifty-ninth street restaurant, in New York city, where Broadway assembles after 1 o'clock each evening, to a mythical palace in ancient Babylon, is graphically produced; even a moving picture studio is included. There is such a bewildering succession of novelties and scenic splendors, mixed up with an endless chain of comic reveries, that it is difficult to find words to describe it all. The purpose of the "Passing Show" is to produce laughter—to entertain, to surprise, to amuse—and in this object it is eminently successful. In this show everything is new but the runway, a feature of the Winter Garden shows. Despite the massiveness of entertainment, which requires

PARISIAN CREATIONS IN BIG ACT AT LYRIC

"Fashions de Vogue" Is the Feature for First Half of Week.

Exquisite Parisian creations—the latest fashions from the ateliers of famous modistes—will be draped on stunning living models by no less fashion authority than M. Alphonse Berg himself in "Fashions de Vogue," headliner extraordinary at Keith's Lyric theater the first half of this week. This big act is one of five starring features, while the last half of the week brings another special Christmas bill and an extra matinee at 4 o'clock on Saturday, Christmas day.

The cost of the gowns in "Fashions de Vogue" represents the price of two or three of the latest high-priced automobiles. There are songs and dashing comedy, but, mostly, demonstrations by the expert, M. Berg, of how rapidly and skilfully a Parisian gown can actually be draped on pretty living models. The act is a big timer in every particular and is certain of an enthusiastic welcome at the Lyric. M. Berg is recognized as one of America's foremost authorities on women's wear.

Will Holmes and Iva Hollis will be a welcome feature of the bill in a lively little turn they call "A Capsule Comedy With Song," one of the most refreshing bits of work on the vaudeville stage.

"Musical Comedy de Luxe" is presented by Curtis and the pretty Dunn Sisters. Two more sisters, the Donalds, are on the bill for some fancy balancing stunts. Another splendid act is that of Monahan and company in a real roller skating novelty and act that is declared to be of the "entirely different" variety.

Augmenting the vaudeville bill will be the latest Pathe Review with its slow motion picture, Topics of the Day and the current Pathe News.

Cabaret Attractions Booked by the Lyric For Midnight Frolic

Special cabaret attractions are being booked by Manager Marty Semon, of Keith's Lyric theater, to augment the regular vaudeville show on the occasion of the Mid-night Frolic to be given at the Lyric on New Year's eve.

The Mid-night Frolic at a theater is an innovation in Atlanta, although in New York the mid-night shows have long been the rage. Already advance inquiries, however, have given assurance that the innovation will prove a success here. In addition to the vaudeville and cabaret attractions there will be dancing in the palm garden of the Lyric. Reserved seats for this special performance will go on sale tomorrow (Monday).

FILM WILL SHOW HOW TO CARE FOR BABES

May Bliss Dickinson, national founder of the Mothercraft movement, representing the Child Welfare department of the General Federation of Women's Clubs of America, has closed negotiations with the Lyric Theater for the presentation of a film, "The Mothercraft," a cinema to express, in story form, the purpose of this national movement, which deals with the training of girls in the upper grammar school grades in the science of caring for babies.

The film will be distributed through women's clubs, parent teachers' associations, branches of the Red Cross, Girl Scouts, Campfire Girls and similar organizations. The principal roles will be played by Catherine Vidor, Laura La Plante, and Charles Ray's leading woman; Roscoe Karnes, formerly with the Moscor stock company, and Myrtle Hazzard.

William H. Crane, one of the foremost actors of the American stage, will play a part opposite May Bliss Dickinson.

Catherine Vidor, who is King Vidor's sister, is a girl of rare exotic type of beauty. She has appeared in the past several seasons with the Marion Morgan dancers.

The scenario for "Mothercraft" was written by May Bliss Dickinson.

King Borggott has the distinction of being the first motion picture star to make a personal appearance in this country. The place was the Grand opera house, St. Louis, and the time, October, 1910. The picture was "The Awakening of Rosa."

over three hours to present it. It is said to be the swiftest in action of any of its predecessors. The former stage has been ransacked for novelties; new surprises have been invented and talent has been gathered from far and near. Much has been taken by Messrs. Shubert in fitting this production for the road. The male and ladies of the chorus have been supplied without the least regard for the multiplicity of new faces. Phrased in a few words—it is "the biggest and most costly attraction on tour."

Producer Cecil B. DeMille Discusses All-Star Pictures

BY CECIL B. DEMILLE.
Fewer and better pictures has long been the slogan of this organization. To a large extent we have lived up to this motto during the past year. But it will remain for the coming year to see this idea carried into complete operation by means of the new all-star production policy which we have established. Lasky corporation will shortly put into effect.

Several years ago I tried the experiment of producing a non-star picture. Experts of that day said such a picture could not hope to succeed. On the contrary, the picture succeeded as no other picture has.

The present plan of this organization is an enlargement of that early idea. It will mean that pictures made under this new policy will be stars of real magnitude appearing together in one production which will excite and draw anything previously attempted on the screen.

This quality will begin with the scenario which will be the work of the greatest specialists in this highly specialized field of screen work. The department of the directorial labor which will be entrusted to men of proven ability and the highest artistic capabilities. Stage settings for these special productions will be the work of master artists. Combing all these elements of the world's fashion dictators with a truly star cast cannot but result in pictures that will establish a new mark in the photo-dramatic world.

So much for better pictures. But this policy will result in fewer pictures, thus making "fewer and better pictures" a living reality. This will be brought about by the prolonged runs which pictures of this type will make.

At the present time there is a large class of theaters throughout the country that change pictures weekly. These theaters therefore consume fifty-two pictures each year.

If these same theaters receive and use the forthcoming all-star pictures, it is safe to assume that many of these special pictures will play extended engagements. When a few years ago we were delighted when a picture ran for a week or two, today we are proud of pictures that play engagements of weeks without causing unusual comment. If this is true of pictures, it is equally true of the future will draw capacity houses.

Every long run picture will cut down the number of pictures which the individual exhibitor will purchase in the course of a year. The weaker, motteless picture will be forced out and "fewer and better pictures" will survive.

According to my present plans, I shall produce not more than four pictures a year, but each picture will be no less than two pictures each year. This fact in itself is worthy of comment when it is remembered that barely six years ago I produced fourteen pictures in one year. Those pictures seemed good at that time, but now they are no less strenuously today, I find that I can only produce three pictures per year.

At the present time it is not altogether improbable that the future may see pictures which will require a year or more to make. This time would be well spent if the finished photograph were to enjoy a run of several months in the principal show houses of the country.

A half dozen years ago we made four times as many pictures as we make today to play brief engagements in the best theaters. Today we are making fewer pictures which play longer engagements. As time goes on we shall see the number of productions shrink as the quality improves and the engagements lengthen.

The "Why" of Doralinda.

A certain ambitious young American girl reached Madrid bent on seeing a famous dancing instructor there. The custodian of her trunk produced a piece of paper and indicated that she was to write her name.

"Dora L. Dina," wrote the girl. Some hours later the trunk arrived at her hotel with a great red sticker ornamenting one end of each piece of baggage.

The dancing student showed the card to her instructor as an evidence of the errors that hamper the European traveler, he smiled, then uttered an exclamation of triumph.

"Just the thing for you!" he said. "With that as your professional name you cannot but succeed. The name alone will attract the public."

Salute for Carl Laemmle.
When Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film company, arrived at the studio in Universal City, Cal., after an absence of eight months, he was accorded a presidential salute of twenty-one guns while an aeroplane buzzed and discharged daylight fireworks.

Marshall Neilan Advises Against Picture Schools

Marshall Neilan, producer of "The River's End," and other big cinema successes, who is rapidly becoming recognized as one of the foremost of motion picture producers, when asked for his opinion on the practicability of motion picture schools, strongly advised against their patronage.

"In the first place," said Mr. Neilan, "the so-called schools are usually run by people who have had little experience themselves in the motion picture business. They do not know the thorough workings of a studio and are, therefore, incapable of imparting the necessary knowledge they claim to possess to others."

"The screen stars of today possess a natural talent which has been developed through long, hard work, and most of them began at the bottom rung of the ladder. No director would engage the services of an inexperienced person for a role of any importance simply because that person could show a diploma of graduation from one of the so-called schools. Any one applying at a studio for employment, if he has had no experience, must begin by playing extra parts, and if they have screen personality it will eventually stand out in their work and they will be rewarded with promotion. This applies to graduates of motion picture schools as well as to any one else, and it therefore can be easily seen that a course of training in such a school is a waste of time and money."

From time to time I receive various letters from people asking for my advice as to whether a course of training in acting would be of any help to one contemplating a motion picture career. In every case I have personally strong advice against it, and the less patronage these schools receive the sooner they will have to go out of business."

When Gladys Walton announced that she would require a double in the filming of "The Millionaire Kid" more than seven hundred of the prettiest girls in Los Angeles applied for the job. A miss who will be known on the screen as Billy McCarthy was selected. Gladys, and is now appearing with the star in scenes. The history of Gladys' career was used for the opening scenes of the picture.

King Vidor, the director of "The Sky Pilot," is at Banff, Northwest Canada, shooting scenes for his picture. Players with him are Colleen Moore, David Butler and John Bowers.

Special Holiday Program At Criterion This Week Wesley Barry in "Dinty"

Beginning Monday and continuing through the week the Criterion theater will present a special holiday program which promises entertainment of the very highest plain and embraces many fine features. Heading the program is the Marshall Neilan production, "Dinty," which the management promises will be one of the best productions that has been shown here this year. Wesley (Freckles) Barry has a leading role, and no kid, or grown-up either, for that matter, has risen to the heights of popularity with more speed in the last two years than this freckle-faced boy. He first attracted notice and favorable comment in Mary Pickford's success, "Daddy Long Legs," and more recently was splendid in "Go and Get It." In "Dinty" he is said to have a wonderful opportunity which he does not fail to take advantage of. Following the showing of "Dinty" in importance is the presentation of another of the popular Booth Tarkington screen comedies, being the adventures of that irrepressible boy Edgar. The title of this latest comedy is "Edgar and His Little Saw." It is said to be fully up to the others of the same series previously shown here. Another special feature this week will be the contribution by Dave Love and the Criterion orchestra, "The Toy Symphony" with a prologue, "The Night Before Christmas," and with little Aileen Stevens as the musical doll. For the children Manager Patterson has secured 1,000 little booklets telling the life story of Wesley Barry, which are to be given away beginning with the first performance Monday morning and continuing as long as they last. Every child attending will be given away beginning with the first performance Monday morning and continuing as long as they last. Every child attending will be given away beginning with the first performance Monday morning and continuing as long as they last.

Neither dies, "Dinty" has to fight down the feeling that life isn't such a much, after all, and he battles to get back into the game and makes himself the success his mother always longed to see him. As king of the Newsboys' Trust, "Dinty's" two lieutenants are a little Chinese half-breed and a polly little coon, both selling members of the trust, and for them "Dinty" puts up many a fight. One night he picks up a wallet belonging to Jack North, the third assistant district attorney, and returns it to him. This is the beginning of a very real friendship between the two, and "Dinty" just naturally begins to fight for the third A. D. A. Later when North's fiancée, Ruth Whitely, is kidnapped by "King" Dork, Malay half-breed and leader of a gang of outthroats, "Dinty" puts up the one great fight of his life for her.

The activities of an up-to-date band of opium smugglers have for some time been puzzling the district attorney's office. This picturesque group of highlanders operates via airplane and cutter route between Mexico, the Orient and San Francisco, with secret wireless stations and strong political influence to aid them. "Dinty" and his gang are perfectly familiar with Chinatown, both on the surface and underground, and this familiarity enables "Dinty" to do a little detective work in just the right way and at just the right time. Then comes the big fight. There is a beautiful love interest in the story, and in this, of course, "Dinty" has a hand, while running a little romance of his own on the side. For leading roles Marshall Neilan selected Colleen Moore, J. Barney Sherry, Marjorie Daw, Pat O'Malley, Noah Beery and Tom Gallery. Walter Chung, a young Chinaman, and Aaron Mitchell, a colored lad, are newsboy associates of Wesley Barry in the picture.

Magda Lane will be a member of the company which will accompany Eddie Polo to Cuba, where scenes for his next Universal serial, "The Seal of Satan," will be filmed.

Hoot Gibson's next two-reel Western will be titled "Part of the Act." He has just completed "A Cowboy's Conquest."

John Fleming Wilson, author, has joined Metro's colony of authors and playwrights at Hollywood, Cal.

Short Cuts on the Screen Road

By WANDA HAWLEY.

IL-BE NATURAL.

Don't think you have to be a different person when you enter a motion picture studio. I have seen so many girls whose chances for success have been ruined by affectation, by a feeling that they must strain for some extraordinary effect in order to "make a hit" with both public and director. There is no fallacy more untrue. If you are valuable to a director it is either because you are a "type" or an "ideal." If your value lies in the fact that you fit a certain sort of character—it is imperative that you be natural, for it is your personality that the director wants, needs to fill out his cast. Sam Wood, who has directed me in recent pictures, tells a story that is illustrative of this point. An old man with long-flowing whiskers was vitally needed in a certain production. Many applicants were interviewed, but none had quite the required hairy growth and general appearance.

Then one day an old G. A. R. veteran was found, just the type. He was called for rehearsal two days later. I imagine the surprise, then, to find that the veteran, excited by his debut in "pitchers," had shaved off every bit of the treasured minute moustache. Not a whisker remained in sight.

Of course, that is an extreme case. Every day, however, some newcomer on the lot makes the mistake of affecting mannerisms a "type" or an "ideal." If your value lies in the fact that you fit a certain sort of character—it is imperative that you be natural, for it is your personality that the director wants, needs to fill out his cast.

Sam Wood, who has directed me in recent pictures, tells a story that is illustrative of this point. An old man with long-flowing whiskers was vitally needed in a certain production. Many applicants were interviewed, but none had quite the required hairy growth and general appearance.

"The House of Toys," Seena Owen Picture, Opens Alamo 2 Week

"The House of Toys," a brilliant new film drama starring magnetic Seena Owen, is announced as the feature of the program at the Alamo two for the first half of Christmas week. Beginning Thursday, and continuing through Christmas day, the Alamo will present Herbert Rawlinson, the stalwart young star who visited Atlanta not long ago in his latest special production, "Man and His Woman," filmed under the direction of J. Stuart Blackton, author of "The Battle Cry of Peace."

The Alamo's usual varied and interesting array of short subjects is also presented during Christmas week. In "The House of Toys," based on the widely read novel by Henry Russell Miller, Seena Owen carries the role of the typical romantic impulsive girl who thought it would be "fun to marry and be poor together," forgetting that there is nothing poetical or inspiring about last year's millinery or a small flat on a side street.

"Return of Tarzan" Monday Attraction At Savoy Theater

The Savoy theater this week returns to its feature a day policy, and some excellent attractions have been booked for the entertainment of lovers of motion pictures. On Monday Edgar Rice Burroughs' greatest Tarzan picture, "The Return of Tarzan," will be given another showing. Here is a photoplay that people never seem to tire of. No matter how many times it is brought back crowded houses are the rule. It is an extravaganza of the jungle, robed in romance and threaded with thrills. Tuesday brings Bessie Barriscale in "Life's Twist," a strange mixture of New York slum life and the smart set of Long Island. And an extra attraction for the day there will be presented the great race horse picture, "The Race of the Ages," showing the celebrated race horse, "Man-o-War," defeating Sir Barton in their recent contest for superiority.

Mary Miles Minter is the star for Wednesday, appearing in the leading role in "Peggy Reels," a comedy drama telling a delightful love story of the sea. Constance Talmadge and Billy Parsons will also be on the Wednesday bill in the comedy, "The Quaker Girl." For the balance of the week: Sessue Hayakawa comes Thursday in "An Arabian Knight," Pauline Frederick Friday in "Woman in Room 13," and Constance Talmadge, Saturday, in "In Search of a Sinner."

Martha Mansfield, of the Ziegfeld show, will succeed the late Olive Thomas as a Seisnick star.

Russell With Metro.

Metro has acquired all future film efforts of John Russell, author, globe trotter and former representative of the United States abroad. Mr. Russell has just completed a tour of the world that included the Samoan Islands, the Philippines, South Africa and many of the seldom seen out-of-the-way places of Europe and Asia.

Thomas H. Ince has purchased "Finding Home," an original story by Gertrude Andrews, and will place it in picture production at an early date.

Universal Players to Cuba.

Magda Lane and Inez MacDonnell have been selected to play opposite Eddie Polo in the pictureization of his next serial, "The Seal of Satan." They, with other Universal players, are on the way to Cuba, where they will devote fourteen weeks to production, and where Polo will enact his feats of strength against the historic backgrounds of Moro castle and San Juan Hill.

P. Dempster Tabler is the name of the player who has the role of Tarzan of the Apes in the recent completed serial, "Son of Tarzan."

Eva Novak is being starred by Universal in "Plain Folks," a dramatic story that carries the interest from a humble New Jersey farm to the inner social whirl of New York.

Truman Van Dyke has the leading role in Carmel Myers' current Universal picture, "Cinderella Jane."

Gladys Walton's next Universal picture will be "The Millionaire Kid," a modern version of "The Prince and the Pauper."

Dagmar Godowsky, Universal leading lady, has recovered from her recent appendicitis attack.

Souvenir Booklets Of "Freckles" Barry Gifts at Criterion

A special souvenir in the form of a book concerning the life of Wesley Barry will be given away to the children attending the Criterion theater this week. Manager Willard Patterson has procured one thousand of the pretty books and, beginning Monday morning with the first show and continuing as long as they last, every child in attendance will be given one. This being holiday week and Wesley Barry being the star in the headline attraction for the week, "Dinty," his latest picture, everybody interested in this clever kid will be anxious to secure one of these booklets. Wesley (Freckles) Barry was once a newsboy and after being discovered by Director Marshall Neilan, made his appearance on the silver sheet. His wonderful success before the camera has made him one of the most talked about kids of the age. Many interesting events of his young life are recorded in this little book—things that make interesting reading and add to its value as a souvenir.

DAVID BUTLER IN NEW FILM AT TUDOR

"Smiling All the Way" Is Clean and Wholesome Motion Picture.

In addition to its qualified entertainment value, "Smiling All the Way," the new photo-drama coming to the Tudor theater this week has the basic appeal founded on a phase of life which is paramount today. That comprises the division of opinion on whether we are basically equal or whether social values really separate us in the events and affairs of life.

To take a vivid illustration is to consider the case of Hannibal Hamlin Pillsbury as impersonated by David Butler and Alice Dryden, played by Leatrice Joy. In the instance of the former he is nothing short of being a nonentity. His occupation is that of being cook for the lumberjacks of the Maine back woods. In the case of Alice Dryden, the character of a girl born and probably overted with the golden spoon of her childhood. Attaining womanhood, she is bankrupt through no fault of her own.

Both characters are then thrown together by that life force known as fate, and from a friendship is evolved a thread of love till it is cemented into marriage. But before that transpires consider the rebellious force in the woman—Alice Dryden—born socially superior to the Hannibal Pillsbury. They had formed a partnership through necessity and operated a restaurant to earn a competency. But when the moment of proposal came there was a significant doubt in the mind of Miss Dryden. The question, why? Wherefore? Can it be possible? And should I marry this man, perhaps inferior to myself socially only resolved through a timid desire, yet the right thinking woman although hesitating with true characteristics of the female only, would ultimately say yes. Thus the case of social equity or inequality disappears down to one point; and this, the true to yourself and social difference is eliminated.

In point of morale "Smiling All the Way" is never objectionable. All the way through it is clean, excluding the wholesomeness of the plot of the Maine forests where the early part of the action transpires. It is continually has none of the raciness with titles to indicate lapse of time; neither do its climaxes suggest artificiality in any form. From the beginning it breathes, smells and translates good drama and wholesome fun.

Elsie Ferguson is at work on "Sinner and Profane Love," at the Lasky studio in Hollywood, Cal. William D. Taylor is directing.

Roscoe Arbuckle, now in New York, contemplates a trip to Europe before returning to Los Angeles.

Colleen Moore has been commissioned the official head of a do your Christmas shopping early movement among Los Angeles motion picture folks.

Frank Mayo, Universal star, has started the production of "Colorado," from the famous stage play of the same title.

RIALTO ATTRACTION IS "OH, LADY, LADY"

Bebe Daniels Appears in the Principal Part—Walter Heirs in Cast.

Bebe Daniels in "Oh Lady, Lady," the great Bolton Woodhouse comedy success, will be shown at the Rialto theater all this week in addition to other attractions.

Perhaps no play in many years enjoyed a greater degree of popularity than "Oh Lady, Lady" during its long stay in New York and on the road. It is a smashing comedy, brim full and running over with fun. Bebe Daniels was not selected for the leading role in this picture. As a matter of fact the play was selected for her because of her adaptability to the role and because of the tremendous success it attained on the stage.

Walter Heirs, the funniest fat man on the screen, plays the comedy role and in addition to keeping his audience in an uproar, covers himself with new glory as a comedian.

In the old home town Finch said good-bye to May Barber, his childhood sweetheart. She was a gawky country lass and he was a rather heavy pessimistic young man, but he had an artistic longing. Both shed tears and declared the parting was heart-breaking.

Now, five years later, Will is planning to marry wealthy little Mollie Farrington, while May, now known as Rilla Rooke, a clever little actress, can't even remember what letter her old beau's name started with.

On the train coming home from a tour Rilla meets Hale Underwood, an artist, hurrying to be Will's best man, and they have lunch together. After he leaves Alex Smart, a reporter tells May of Will's wedding plans. Anxious to congratulate him, she telephones the Farrington home, leaving a message that she must see him and leaving her real name. He can see the same gawky country girl raising a scene, suing for breach of promise and everything.

The fun has started and it continues funnier and funnier until the whole complicated mess is cleared up by a clever twist at the end of the story.

Priscilla Dean's next picture, "Cinderella Man," will give an exhibition of dancing of the same brand with which she captivated New York audiences last year.

Everett Maxwell, well-known Saturday Evening Post writer, has been engaged as comedy continuity expert for the Chester Conklin productions released by Special Pictures.

Rupert Hughes, Goldwyn author, accompanied by his wife and daughter, has arrived in Los Angeles to spend the winter in the study of motion picture technique.

Antrim Short and Howard Austin will have lead roles in Universal's "The Millionaire Kid," starring Charles Bickford. Mary Pickford owned the rights to the story before Universal selected it for Miss Walton.

Well-Known Screen Stars Here This Week

From the Heart of Filmland

Los Angeles, December 18.—Gareth Hughes, who is expected to shine, beginning in January, as a Metro star, soon will be at work in the studios of the corporation in this city. Rumor has it that the youngster is obsessed by the thought that it is his mission to play "Hamlet," but he has decided to forego the delight of the effort would afford him in favor of a screen career for a year or two longer. When Hughes was signed as a star by Metro he had appeared in two pictures for that corporation. He played opposite Viola Dana in "The Chorus Girl's Romance" and was one of the featured players in "The Lure of Youth," which was retitled from Luther Reed's original story, "White Ashes." Metro then "loaned" him to Lasky and he was used by that organization in the production of J. M. Barrie's "Sentimental Tommy." Before engaging in screen work Hughes had earned a name for himself on the speaking stage. A native of Wales his American debut as an actor was made in New York in the production of "Moloch." His success in the title role was so great that the "Hamlet" idea again burdened his mind until it was dissipated by the thought of the golden returns promised him in the contract offered him by Metro.

Jack Pickford to Direct. Jack Pickford is to direct his sister Mary. The picture will be from a story written by Mary herself. In it Mary will revert somewhat to the type of picture which first made her famous. Mary really had to play some sad roles before she managed to convince people that she could act. Now she will again say a hokey role. And this is not Mary's first effort at picture-writing. She wrote "The Eagle's Mate," one of her first films, and has had a hand in the fashioning of many of her more recent pictures. She intends to make four pictures within the next four months. Then she and her husband, Douglas Fairbanks, will go to Europe, where Mary will take the exterior scenes for "Little Lord Fauntleroy," which she will complete upon her return to Los Angeles.

May Become a Screenstar. Carl Laemmle, the Universal chief, has a daughter who may become a shining light in picturedom. Her name is Rosabelle and her age is given as 19. She has a desire to become a screen actor, but until very recently her father has been strong in opposition to the plan. Now he is showing signs of weakening and admits "that when Rosabelle sets her heart on doing anything she usually accomplishes it." Rosabelle is said to possess beauty, charm and dramatic talent. This latter trait she displayed to good advantage in a comedy role which she recently played in New York city at a charity performance. Her work was so good that Mr. Laemmle says she received two offers, one for pictures and the other for the stage. He intends to bring her west next January, and then she will get an inside view of the Universal studio, which may decide her fate, firmly speaking.

Charlie Chaplin to Resume. Charlie Chaplin has broken his long motion picture silence with this announcement: "The recent rumors that have been spread broadcast regarding my retirement from my business and my intention to produce pictures, are grossly unfounded. Any such statements, written or spoken, are without authority and without authority from me." Charlie is expected to return to Los Angeles before the holidays and to resume production immediately after. He will complete his first National contract, which calls for the release of four more two-reel productions. To date he has not disposed of his so-called "million-dollar" picture, "The Kid." He has been negotiating its sale in New York for many weeks without success.

"THE FATAL HOUR" IS PICTURE AT GRAND

Buster Keaton Comedy,
"One Week."

A double-barrelled film bill for the opening of the week, and a remarkable new melodrama during the last-half engagement, are announced as special holiday offerings at Loew's Grand in conjunction with two all-star vaudeville programs.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Loew patrons will be given an extra measure of screen entertainment in the presentation of two first-run productions.

An absorbing Loew-Metro super-feature, "The Fatal Hour," based on a famous London stage success, will split honors on the opening bill with a new and riotous comedy, starring Buster Keaton, the youthful funster, who scored so heavily in his first five-reel feature at the Grand two weeks ago, "One Week," is the interesting title of Keaton's latest vehicle.

Beginning Thursday and playing through Christmas day, the headline attraction on the Grand's screen will be "The Palace of Darkened Windows," an impressive mystery tale that has caused a stir in the motion picture world. As in the case of "The Fatal Hour," a distinguished all-star cast is presented in "The Palace of Darkened Windows."

It is a red-blooded drama with an appeal that strikes home. Bosworth as J. C. MacNair, a noted engineer, has an uncanny habit of stealing away from his associates after the completion of an engineering project and burying himself in drunken stupor in some tenderloin resort. Here he meets and quarrels with a young French engineer. A reconciliation occurs, however, and the two become pals.

From there on the story takes on a great emotional appeal that is filled with human interest, conflicts in love, duty, pleasure and loyalty—such loyalty as can come only from a big, strong, deep man.

A Howell comedy, "Squirrel Time," will be an added feature at the Strand all week.

STAR AT STRAND IS HERBERT BOSWORTH

In "His Own Law," Popular Actor Has Powerful Drama.

Hobart Bosworth in "His Own Law," a smashing, realistic story of two pals who loved the same girl, is coming to the Strand theater Monday for a week's stay.

"His Own Law" is a picture that fits Bosworth's style of acting and he plays one of the strongest roles he has ever appeared in. It is a super-production of human emotions, love, friendship and fighting without a dull moment—a clash between friendship and love and of the code of honor stricter than any written law on the statute books.

Another feature to this strong play, and one that will draw Atlantians to the Strand is the fact that Bosworth's leading lady, Miss Jean Calhoun, is a Georgia girl, born in Columbus. She is a daughter of Judge T. T. Calhoun. She plays the part of the sympathetic Sylvia Harris, and brings to the screen one of the most noted names in American history. She is a kinswoman of John C. Calhoun, one of the greatest statesmen the country has ever produced. She has a strong role in "His Own Law," and her acting adds greatly to the emotional appeal and vigorous characterizations of the production.

Ruth Roland is to make a serial for Pathe in New York. She will leave Los Angeles as soon as her current serial is finished.

Kate Lester, the grand dame of the screen, is accused of having admitted that she has a touch of stage fright every time she makes a scene for a new director.

Thomas Meighan To Open The Howard's Second Week in DeMille Production

Thomas Meighan, one of the most popular of the ranking screen stars, whose powerful acting in such productions as "The Miracle Man," "Male and Female," "Civilian Clothes" and other big pictures, has won for him a most enviable place in the affections of the motion picture lovers the world over, has been selected to hold the screen at the Howard theater on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday in his latest Paramount success, "Conrad in Quest of His Youth," one of the most delightful photoplays that has been offered here in weeks. It is based on Leon Merrick's famous novel of the same name, and produced under the personal direction of William C. DeMille.

Without telling the story in detail, it may be said that the central idea of the story—that one never grows old when one loves—fills it with enthusiasm. Conrad finds it impossible to travel the road back to 17, because there is none, but when he fell in love, presto! his vanished youth returned.

The picture is an excellent one and well worth one's while to see. The settings are elaborate and the development of the story logically carried out. Mr. Meighan is supported by an unusually capable company, Margaret Loomis playing opposite him. Then there are Mabel Van Buren, Kathryn Williams, Sylvia Ashton and other artists, all of whom contribute their bit to make the picture artistically satisfying.

However, the feature, while of stellar importance, constitutes only a small part of the Howard program, first, there's the overture, "Il Guarany," by Gomez, an offering which Director Lelde describes as one of the most beautiful compositions that he will offer this season. Then there's the Howard "News and Views," an interesting news reel, compiled from many of the most popular news weeklies and scenes, showing all the most important events the world over.

The third number on the program offers Herbert Waterous, the celebrated basso, who has selected for his third solo in Atlanta "Asleep in the Deep," an old favorite that one never tires of hearing.

The next offering will be a clever new two-reel Fox Sunshine comedy, entitled "Kiss Me Quick," featuring the famous "Sunshine Bathing Beauties" and the big corps of comedians who furnish the fun that surrounds them.

Then Alma Doria, the famous soprano, will be heard in another beautiful operatic selection, equally as wonderful as the numbers she delighted her hearers with during her first week.

In all the program fully equals that of the opening week, the singers will offer new selections, there will be a feature comedy, a five-reel feature Paramount production, a wonderful News Weekly, another delightful overture with wonderful lighting effects, and those who were present during the opening week may come again with the assurance that high quality of the Howard's offerings will always be maintained.

FROM THE HEART OF FILMLAND

Los Angeles, December 10.

Maude Adams and David Warfield, according to advices from New York, have signed Robertson Cole contracts to appear in pictures. If true, it is the biggest coup yet registered by a producing company. All details concerning the contracts are lacking, but the report is credited here because it has been believed for years that the famous actress and actor finally would be unable to resist the cinema lure. It is said to be certain that Warfield will make three pictures—"The Auctioneer" and "The Music Master" among them. Maude Adams, of course, will appear in several of her most striking stage successes.

Donaldina Sears Alcott.

Donaldina, Metro star, at last has experienced the thrills and tremors of aviation. Recently, with the mayor of Los Angeles as her companion, she flew over the city from Cecil B. deMille's flying field and had a birdseye view of one of the busiest cities on the continent. The trip was a short one, only seventeen minutes being the actual flying time, but in that "zoom" Donaldina had ample opportunity to view the congested district and form an express opinion concerning them. The trip followed an expressed desire to look over the new electric system.

"The Kodak Girl." Vitaphone has "outed" that Edith Johnson is to be co-starred with William Duncan. For some time past Miss Johnson has been Mr. Russell's "lady" and her work in the latest "Duncan serial" so impressed Vitaphone officials that a contract to star in features was forthcoming. Upon her expressing

Her itinerary will include some of the Zasu Aguirre in Spotlight. Remember Zasu Aguirre? Of course you do. She was a featured player of the Brentwood film company for a season and then married Tom Gailley, son of a distinguished official of Chicago, who is now making good in politics. Zasu retired from the spotlight shortly after the wedding bells episode and in the public eye as the "at-to-be" of the Columbia Feature Film company of San Francisco, a new organization formed by a group of well-known business men. "Florida's" former metropolis, the story is, will do first in a film version of "Cinderella." Mr. Gailley, at present, is "playing a leading role in a Marshall 'Indian production, but he expects to finish in time to go to San Francisco to play opposite his wife.

Elsie Ferguson.

The Famous Players-Lasky organization here has announced that the first west coast picture to be produced with Elsie Ferguson as the star will be a version of Arnold Bennett's play, "Sacred and Profane Love," and that William Desmond Taylor will direct the famous actress. Conrad Nagle will play opposite. Miss Ferguson is now on the way to Los Angeles from New York and already a home has been arranged for her occupancy in Hollywood. While here, Miss Ferguson will make a number of pictures. Her health is said to be not what it should be and every effort will be made to make her screen work congenial and untiring. She has just returned from a health-seeking trip to the Orient and her friends hope that the balmy climate of southern California will have a restoring influence.

"Can-Can" to Be Revived.

Only that the Goldwyn studios, which produced Gertrude Atherton's first original screen play, "Noblesse Oblige," are situated close to the Mexican border, and the little town of Tia Juana, the photo-drama might have lacked a particular bit of characteristic local color, namely, the "can-can" of early California days. Dancers of the "shimmy," the Maxine, Tango, one-step, etc., there were in plenty, but not one of the numbers of girls tried out for the "Noblesse Oblige" dance hall scene were familiar with the old preference for serials the promotion to co-star made made. Several years ago Miss Johnson became internationally famous as "The Eastman Girl." Her pictures as such in magazines attracted the attention of the Selig company, then working in Chicago, and her first film work was the result. The company then moved to this city and when Mr. Duncan looked about him for a leading woman, Miss Johnson was selected. Her engagement with Vitaphone has been continuous since that time.

Blanche Sweet Returns.

Blanche Sweet has returned to Los Angeles after a resting tour which took her to most of the countries of Europe. In a very short time she will resume work before the camera as Jesse D. Hampton's star.

Billie Rhodes to Resume.

Billie Rhodes has done the expected. She is again a bride, her marital lord being William Jobert, a newspaper man. When first husband, the jovial William Parsons, died about a year ago, Billie retired from the screen and for a time was lost to her friends in the local cinema colony. Now, with the announcement of her marriage, comes the statement that soon she will resume her motion picture career as a star and at the head of her own producing company.

George Bunny, son of the late

John Bunny, famous film comedian, has completed his initial two-reel comedy, "At It Again," for Goldwyn release.

John B. Ritchie has been appointed head of the Thomas H. Ince scenario department, vice John Blackwood, now with Universal.

Reginald Barker's Goldwyn picture, "Godless Man," was recently shown to an audience composed of Los Angeles clergymen. It is said the feature points a moral that will mark a step toward the goal of better pictures.

Thomas Meighan, in "Conrad in Quest of His Youth," feature at the Howard theater Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Pre-Christmas Clearance of Fine Room-Size Rugs

Realizing that many people want their homes in new dress for the holidays, especially if company is expected, we are not waiting until January for our usual pre-inventory sale, but shall hold it now—the week before Christmas.

While the new factory prices on these rugs are lower than they have been, they are far from being low enough to justify such radical reductions on our part. When these are gone, those coming in at the new prices will be much higher.

This includes our entire stock of beautiful Velvet, Wilton and Axminster Rugs in patterns of richness and beauty. Nothing would be more appreciated by all members of the family than a pretty, warm, rich rug, so why not club in together and get one for the home?

$150 9x12 Wilton Rugs, reduced to $103.00
$135 9x12 Wilton Rugs, reduced to $ 86.35

UNITED STATES VIEWED AS SANTA CLAUS BY ALLIED POWERS

Europe Was Surprised When America Failed To Cancel War Loans

Amazing suggestion of Tittoni, Italian Representative at the Geneva Conference, That Member States Pool Their Economic Resources, Startles All—Allies Cling to Hope That the United States Will Join the League and Assume the World War Debts—Simonds Shows the Affinity and Illuminates the Whole by Reference to Quasi Promises at the Paris Convention.

BY FRANK H. SIMONDS

Washington, D. C., December 18.—By far the most interesting proposal at Geneva, from the point of view of Washington, although it attracted little attention in the country generally, was the suggestion presented by Tomasso Tittoni, on behalf of Italy and supported by other countries, notably Switzerland, that there should be a pooling of the economic resources of the nations composing the league. What the Italian delegate was aiming at was an effort to obtain for the countries less well provided with raw materials an equal position with those that were abundantly and even superabundantly blessed.

It was on this point, it will be recalled, that the Canadian representatives took the floor and made an earnest and common sense declaration that such a proposal, if seriously pressed, would mean not merely the permanent closing of all chance of the entrance of the United States into the league, but also the inevitable withdrawal of Canada and not a few other states. In a word, Canada at once rejected a proposal which amounted to the creation of a form of international communism. Following this debate Tittoni retired from the Geneva conference and was seen there no more.

President's Alleged Promise.

Nevertheless the point raised by the former Italian premier is one of very real importance, because it discloses a conception of the league which was conspicuously absent at Paris, has lain in the back of the minds of many European statesmen and particularly those representing the smaller nations from the Paris time onward, and at Paris was discussed in various forms on a number of occasions. It is moreover of very real interest to Americans at this moment, in view of disclosures which have just been made by M. Tardieu, who was not only French high commissioner in the United States during the war, but M. Clemenceau's chief lieutenant in the Paris conference itself.

What M. Tardieu says in effect, and I shall quote his exact words in a moment, is that Mr. Wilson and his American associates agreed at Paris that the president should, on his return to the United States and after he had successfully pushed the treaty of Versailles through the senate, undertake a campaign to bring about the cancellation by the United States of all the loans made to foreign countries during the war and aggregating $10,000,000,000.

Billions Ahead.

It will be recalled that precisely this proposal underlay all the argument contained in the volume of John Maynard Keynes, which was a denunciation of the actual treaty made with Germany, and a demand that this treaty should be revised downward, that is, to the advantage of the Germans. The real significance of the proposal was veiled by the description of the necessary process of wiping out the allied debts as one of mutual cancellation, France was to forgive Italy and Belgium, Britain to forgive France, Italy, Belgium and the smaller countries their debts, while at the same time the United States was to forgive everyone all the debts owed to her.

But in practice this meant that since would come out ahead by some four or five billions, Italy by an equal sum, since the borrowings of these countries were so much in excess of their loans. As to Britain, she had loaned eight billions and only borrowed four from us, but Keynes conceded that the present value of the eight billions on paper did not exceed four and the cancellation of the debt owed to us would leave Britain even. When the whole transaction was completed we should have sacrificed our loans, amounting to ten billions. Then the claims of the victorious nations against Germany were to be scaled down by ten billions, giving Germany a chance to get on her feet by the transfer from their own to American shoulders of this burden of debt.

NO INVENTION OF KEYNES.

Obviously this proposal found no favor in the United States, which read the Keynes book with delight, so far as its picturesque and destructive criticism was concerned, but skipped the pages which discussed remedies for the evils which Keynes saw in the Versailles pact. But what was not made clear to American readers was the fact that Keynes did not, in reality, invent his solution for the trouble, but only took up and elaborated a proposal which had been before the Paris conference and had been accepted in principle by President Wilson and by his financial advisers.

Now it is obvious that between the Italian proposal at Geneva to share the economic resources of the states belonging to the league of nations and the Paris proposal, repeated by Keynes, to shift the burden of a portion of the burden of the war from European to American backs, there is a very close affinity. We are, in fact, here touching upon one of the most significant circumstances of the whole Paris conference, although one which was for a variety of reasons very incomplete as presented to the American public. We are also touching upon the detail which gave Mr. Wilson, throughout the Paris conference, his most potent weapon for enforcing his views and procuring or compelling European agreement with his decisions.

ENTRANCE OF U. S. IS EXPECTED.

This would not be important now were it not for the fact that the ideas which were thus set afloat in Europe, the conception as to America's view of her mission in the world, the possibilities for the world of American participation in the league and in world reconstruction remain and are disclosed again and again in just such circumstances as the Tittoni proposal at Geneva and in the Keynes repetition of the debt cancellation scheme. Thus it is not too much to say that Europe still looks forward to American entrance into the league of nations in some fashion as an event which will in a great measure revive the Paris hopes of American generosity.

Now the best possible indication of what Europe expected of us—and still in some measure expects of us, is contained in the separate proposals which were advanced by various nations during the Paris conference and are the natural forerunners of the Tittoni proposal at Geneva. Thus one of the financial plans most urgently championed by the French, contemplated pooling all of the costs of the war and then apportioning the share of each nation on the basis of their population and resources. Thus the United States, undeniably the richest of the nations comprising the alliance against Germany, would have found the actual cost of the war and the increase imposed by war expenditures increased by not less than 30 per cent. Canada and Japan would have been called upon to bear increased burdens, but the French and the British would have had their burdens reduced by 19 per cent and 11 per cent, respectively. For obvious reasons this proposal was incessantly rejected. It would actually have added to our war burden the interest charge upon not less than $50,000,000,000.

FRENCH WOULD BENEFIT.

The same idea was then embodied in the proposal that the total of war costs should be pooled and then reddivided upon the basis of the death lists of the respective countries, those who had suffered most on the battlefield to be required to make the smallest payments in money. This proposal also came from the French. But obviously this would have been to multiply the burdens of the United States and Japan enormously and it, too, fell by the wayside.

But although the first two ventures toward international communism were unsuccessful, the principle was not surrendered by the various European states most concerned. This was due in no small degree to the tone taken by President Wilson and by the Americans in Paris, to the daily and hourly emphasis of American idealism, of American purpose to lend its mighty resources to rebuilding the world. It is not too much to say that in the eye of the European nations the United States, mainly as a consequence of the public and private utterances of Americans in Paris officially and unofficially came to assume the benevolent aspect of Santa Claus himself.

WILSON SYMPATHETIC.

Although President Wilson had rejected the first two of the European endeavors to achieve a pooling and reddivision of war costs, M. Tardieu now tells us that he was intensely sympathetic with the European situation and consented to such provisions in the treaty of Versailles as would enable the allies to dispose in the United States of those bonds issued by Germany and turned over to them as a portion of the reparation. Of course, this meant in practice, that the United States would presently receive from her European associates who were her debtors the larger portion of the German bonds and thus become the nation most interested in compelling Germany to pay up.

But provided he could prepare the United States for such a program, M. Tardieu now announces in his illustration for October 23, Mr. Wilson was ready to go further and do more. At this point I quote from M. Tardieu:

"At the beginning of May (1919), one of Mr. Wilson's financial advisers, Mr. (Thomas W.) Lamont, thus summed up the president's state of mind:

ATTITUDE OF THE PRESIDENT.

"The president perfectly appreciated the fact that the United States must help in the economic reconstruction of Europe. It is a question of self-interest and of duty alike for the United States to hasten the end of the financial crisis and to assist Europe and France and Great Britain particularly to emerge from this crisis. 'I have submitted to the president, at his request, a long memorandum on this subject. But nothing can be done so long as the subject is not explained exhaustively to the American people, who have no conception of it, and I see no one except the president who has the necessary authority to educate the country in this matter. But he can only undertake this job, when the treaty itself has been ratified. 'For the moment it is necessary to be patient. If you try to go too fast, you will only provide the opponents of the treaty with another weapon and that is all.'"

CANCELLATION OF WAR DEBTS.

After a brief comment on a side issue M. Tardieu continued: "In the following June I had many conversations with Colonel House and Mr. Lamont on the same subject. We knew that we could not go from words to deeds. But we prepared the possible solutions. It is thus that we accepted as useful and capable of realization, that plan of which Mr. Keynes, in his vast concept later discovered that he was the author, I mean the mutual cancellation of war debts. This cancellation would have been the first step in the broad road of solidarity. Others would have followed. America, unanimous at the moment in support of the policy of not demanding from us either the repayment of our debt of 15,000,000,000 francs or of the payment of the interest was capable of consenting to this, provided that it was sufficiently enlightened as to the perspectives. "This is what Mr. Wilson reckoned on undertaking. Immediately his campaign for the ratification of the treaty of Versailles was brought to a successful termination. Everyone knows what happened. The sickness of the president, immobilized for ten months, the rejection of the treaty by six votes, the success of the opposition which desires an isolated America."

AMERICANS PUZZLED.

We have in this document, it seems to me, a very valuable illumination on the reasons why Europe has held certain views with respect to the United States, which have, on the whole, puzzled Americans and even angered them. Here is an explicit statement of what American policy was to have been with respect of the $10,000,000,000 owed us by Europe. When Mr. Keynes suggested that the burden of debt be shifted from Germany to American shoulders, he was not guilty of such an impertinence as seemed at the time. He was merely repeating what he understood to have been American policy as expressed in Paris by those who were qualified to speak for the president.

A year ago I published and the Congressional Record reprinted a French transcript of President Wilson's remarks on May 31 and on the subject of American guarantees of the frontiers of Rumania and of Serbia. The subsequent dispute over the exact wording of the speech did not in the least alter the meaning of the president's declaration, which expressly stated that underlying all the transactions of the Paris conference and specifically underlying the covenant of the league, was the expectation on the part of Rumania and of Serbia that if the principles involved were challenged we would make our fleets and armies across the seas to defend those principles.

IMPOSSIBLE AND AUDACIOUS.

This incident concerned territorial questions. But now we have the representative of a great power, namely Italy, proposing at Geneva a pooling of all the economic resources of the nations belonging to the league. This means, in effect, sharing our raw materials with Italy, it means international communism, but coincident with this proposal, which strikes the American public as both audacious and impossible, comes the revelation of the fact that at Paris we proposed to shift from European to American shoulders at least $10,000,000,000 of the debt incurred by European nations in fighting the world war.

Nor is this all. M. Tardieu says frankly that other steps would have been taken, that the cancellation of debts was only the first. Mr. Keynes in his book suggests another step, namely the lending of further sums to European nations, but adds that these loans would be made with the idea that they should be repaid.

COMMITTED TO FRANCE'S DEFENSE.

As we begin a new discussion of the question of American entrance into the league of nations or continued refusal to enter it seems to me there must be some sort of review of the commitments which were made on our behalf during the negotiations which preceded the creation of the league itself and what, for reasons which were at least respectable, the European nations were led to believe would be the terms of our participation.

On the territorial side we were committed, by the Anglo-French-American treaty, to the defense of France against any new German aggression. We were bound by the covenant, as interpreted by the president in his May 21 speech, to send our fleets and armies across the seas, if the frontiers of Rumania and Serbia and by inference those of the other European members of the league, were violated.

On the financial side the president had counted upon persuading his fellow countrymen to undertake the burden of $10,000,000,000 of additional war debt as a means of aiding Europe to restore its shaken financial condition. This cancellation of debts was to be followed by other loans, but in theory these loans were to be redeemed in due course of time.

INTERNATIONAL POOLING.

There remains the question, and this question is uppermost in many Washington minds today as to what, if any, explanation existing in American suggestions or agreements at Paris, and in the suggestion of Tittoni's otherwise amazing proposal at Geneva. Was there a suggestion or even a hint of some international pooling of economic resources? Will the records of the Paris conference, if they are ever published, disclose such a reservoir of facts bearing upon this very important question?

Nor can we forget that in the matter of mandating Europe received from us an explicit assurance that we would undertake the task of establishing Armenia and that there was more than a hint that we would also take over Constantinople. I have been struck by the fact that in his memoirs, which are attracting world-wide attention, Colonel Repington narrates that long before the Paris conference he discussed with the former British prime minister the need of getting the United States to take Constantinople. This is a significant because in Paris one member of the American delegation enlarged to me on the possibilities of the United States' action in the Turkish capital, where he saw us repeating our achievements at Havana.

EUROPE CLINGS TO OLD HOPE.

It is a fact, established by the progress of events in the Near East, since the Paris conference, witnessed again by the long delays in disposing of certain regions, that Europe has been waiting upon the decisive demonstration of American purpose, before seeking a solution which would exclude the possibility of American participation in Asia Minor. The appeal from Geneva to the president to act personally in mediating between Kemal Pasha and the Armenians is a final evidence of the survival of the hope which was a belief less than two years ago.

But this is an excursion, what I was interested in emphasizing here is the fact that the Tittoni incident at Geneva is no more than a logical continuation of ideas expressed at Paris and a further insistence upon policies which were accepted in Paris as representing American ideas. Just as long as there is a question of American membership in the league, there will be a survival of the hopes which resulted from American utterances and actions at Paris. So long, for instance, there will be a belief that we shall consent to a cancellation of the war debts to us of the European nations along lines first made public by Mr. Keynes and now explained in their historical setting by M. Tardieu.

FAILED TO WIN SENATE SANCTION.

When there is an evident enthusiasm in Europe for American membership in the league on any terms, with any "reservations" that the senate in its wisdom may choose to append to the treaty of Versailles, it is because in the back of every European mind is the memory of what America seemed to promise during the Paris conference. When one reads, as one must daily of the European prayer for American participation in the task of world reconstruction, one must perceive that what is expected of us is a continuation under other leadership of the policies which Europe learned to accept as American during President Wilson's stay in Paris. Among these policies, the cancellation of debts and the pooling of economic resources are only two, but two which at the present moment have very great interest for Americans. One is struck in Washington again and again by the easy fashion in which things said and done by President Wilson in Paris are dismissed as no more than personal since they have in the end failed to win the sanction of the senate. Legally this is true beyond debate. But what is not appreciated in the American capital is the degree to which these presidential declarations were accepted in Europe and the measure in which they survive, even the decisive political events in the United States, in recent months. And in this direction lie not a few of the problems of the future, if the new administration shall decide upon American membership in the existing league, on any terms whatsoever.

Fifty-Five Years Old Today

THE ATLANTA NATIONAL BANK, organized by General Alfred Austell and his associates, received its charter under the national banking act and opened for business December 19, 1865—just fifty-five years ago today.

Opening its doors when Atlanta had scarcely begun to recover from the ruins of the war, it has developed with the city and the state, as it has worked for them, through the fifty-five years that have witnessed the building of the Atlanta and Georgia of today.

We appreciate the confidence and good will of the people of this community, that has enabled us, during these fifty-five years to grow from a small institution of $100,000.00 capital to a modern financial institution with capital, surplus and profits of $3,000,000, and resources in excess of $32,000,000.

On our fifty-fifth birthday we congratulate Atlanta and the South upon having passed safely through the worst of the period of readjustment and feel sure that the steady courage that has served the south so well at critical times in the past will assure future prosperity for all of us.

The A-B-C of Salesmanship

BY HARRY GOTHHEIMER
Sales Manager, Montag Brothers.

PART 2.

As stated in my previous article, there are five fundamental qualifications that are necessary for a salesman to have in order that he may be a success at his calling. The first, "A thorough knowledge of your line and its possibilities," the second, "Faith in your line," the third, "Confidence in yourself and in your ability to sell," were discussed last week.

In this article the two remaining qualifications will be covered.

4. Enthusiasm—the Vital Force That Arouses Desire.

Note how close one requisite is linked with the other. "Enthusiasm is confidence in action." Every big achievement in the world has been due to it—nothing great was ever done without it. It is the very life blood of successful salesmanship—because it not only feeds the prospect, but it feeds you.

Enthusiasm needs only direction to turn it into success, and with real enthusiasm one is fired with an intense desire to impart his enthusiasm to others.

It enables you to forget disappointment and failure—to start afresh with renewed determination. It is the strongest of all forces, because it grips the attention of the prospect; it impresses him with your sincerity and creates a bond of sympathy between buyer and salesman—changes apathy to interest, and is the most vital factor in personal salesmanship.

Enthusiasm is the product of several fundamentals: first, knowledge; second, confidence; third, love of your work; and fourth, imagination. Cultivate imagination—don't be afraid of being called a dreamer. The world would have no progress if it was not for the so-called dreamers; Columbus was one; Watts, the discoverer of steam, was another; Langley and his aeroplane.

Remember, imagination is not fancy; it is the image-making faculty which is used for the purpose of making a concrete picture of the thing we desire. Cultivate imagination—it is the pathway to enthusiasm.

5. The Absolute Interest of Your Customer at Heart.

Every intelligent salesman should know that his responsibility does not end with the sale.

When I say "Interest of the customer," I mean everything that the phrase implies—you must study his problems, his class of trade, his territory and the kind of merchandise best adapted to it.

The old theory of selling the customer merchandise, just any kind of merchandise, at any old price, and loading him up, is a dead letter today.

Service, personal attention and interest today are as strong as prices in determining a permanent account. You must be sincere in your interest—it is to your advantage to be so.

Don't miss an opportunity to give your customer every bit of knowledge you possess to further his business; help him in the arrangement of his inside and outside display; keep in touch with him at all times as to market conditions—he honest in your service to him—do not think he does not appreciate it, because he does.

Sell him those items in your line of proven value and that from observation are best fitted to his market—help him to get a profit on his merchandise.

Don't make your entire argument, or rather make none of it, about what you get for merchandise, but what he gets and his profits—that is the final analysis. When you are sincere in your interest, you will find that your customers will be sincere in theirs.

interest you will have welded to you accounts that price competition can't take away from you. Don't be backward about taking interest in the showing it—no man knows it all; some are wiser than others, but the wisest can be benefited by helpful advice, suggestions and co-operation of others who are earnest and interested. The day of utter independence of action is past; co-operation is essential, and any merchant who refuses to co-operate is too small to be worthy of consideration. One could write page after page on this subject, but it can be stated in one sentence: "You are looking out for your own interest when you are looking out for your customer's interest."

In closing allow me to say that, after all, people are strangely alike and we like those people best who recognize our good qualities and think highly of us. We enjoy dealing with people who know their business and who are not afraid to do so. We do not make us feel our own insignificance. Business success after all is best won by doing unto the other fellow just as we would like to be done by ourselves.

MORE OPTIMISTIC ATMOSPHERE IN BIG MILL CIRCLES

Women's Wear, the great New York daily trade paper, has this to say:

"As a general thing the manufacturers at the various textile mills in western Maine are taking an optimistic view of the trade situation."

"At South Windham, the Windham Manufacturing company, a cotton warp and woolen filler mill, is running business at night, and has been on that schedule since 1914. It employs approximately 200 workmen."

"At Westbrook the plant of the Haskell Silk company is operating on full time. It employs about 125. The Dana Warp mills, cotton, employing 500, is also operating on full time. It employs about 125. The Dana Warp mills, cotton, employing 500, is also operating on full time. It employs about 125."

"At Brunswick the mill of the Cabot Manufacturing company, which has been shut down since August 21 as the result of a strike of operatives, resumed operations November 22. Half of the 800 employees are at work and other operatives are being called in daily."

"At Ridgford and Saco the Pepperell and York cotton mills, employing normally about 6,000, are running Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays or a half-time schedule."

"At Lisbon Falls the Worumbo Manufacturing company, woollens, are running on full time, but with about one-third the regular number of employees."

"At Lewiston the Androscooggin and Hill cotton mills are operating with comparatively full crews four days out of the six."

"From Charlotte, N. C., comes the report that a much more optimistic spirit and a more firm belief that the cotton market is on the upswing will soon be materially improved has developed among cotton manufacturers. Evidence of this is found in repeated statements made by mill men. These expressions of optimism are not unduly optimistic, but reflect what appears to be a very general belief that the tide will soon turn. Manufacturers are not saying that the events of the past week have been sufficient to lead to the belief in a general revival of business is imminent, but they look upon the improved inquiry and better demand in raw cotton as straw which indicate which way the trade wind is soon to blow."

How Business Cycle Works.

"No business cycle lasts forever," says the Magazine of Wall Street. "If it did it wouldn't be a cycle, or every excessive advance in prices and corresponding expansion in production and credit, there must sooner or later be a compensating reaction."

Flameless Fire Greatest Foe to Conservation

Rust, Decay, Disintegration and Deterioration Constantly Consuming Property—Paint the Best Insurance.

BY E. A. DUNCAN,
Vice President and Sales Manager of United Roofing and Supply Company.

Paint is a vital social and commercial necessity. We use the term "social" advisedly, since who of us can doubt the preservative and protective values of paint after having, as most of us, seen its grandeur, at ten paces, for the young lady with whom we had a dinner engagement. Every surface we see constantly protected by paint is a testament to the value of paint. Wood decays; metal rusts and corrodes; concrete and other materials disintegrate. In other words, paint attains its "flameless fire" in fighting the "flameless fire" of rust and decay.

The rusting and oxidizing of metals, the loss of apparent decay of stone, the loss of a chemical standpoint, the same place where there are being slowly consumed. Yet a few of the most destructive forces in the world are going on all about us—this destruction, running into millions of dollars, because it is unheeded by any call of alarm, the warning signs of rust and decay are easily overlooked.

In this modern age of keen business acumen and foresight, most people believe in insurance, and a majority of the fire losses are covered by insurance. But the loss of what a manufacturer should know before actually laying out his overseas campaign. We are now ready to consider ways and means for breaking into the market and exporting.

Exporting can be roughly divided into two broad classes: direct exporting and indirect exporting. There is bound to be a certain amount of overlapping, especially in advertising and direct-mail methods, but for the purpose of making clear both advantages and disadvantages of each, we will consider the numerous methods of getting business abroad, this division will be found helpful.

Direct exporting concerns itself with the dealings of the American manufacturer through (1) his branch offices or factory representatives and dealers abroad, (2) his salesmen traveling abroad, (3) advertising and direct-mail solicitation. Indirect exporting has to do with his dealings through (1) the export merchant, (2) the commission house, or (3) the manufacturer's export agent.

The principal distinction between direct exporting and indirect is that, in the case of the former, the manufacturer takes an aggressive step to develop business in foreign markets and likewise assumes most of the responsibilities and connected with such a program; while in the case of the latter, with all due credit to the part they have played in the building up of our foreign commerce, he simply exports what business the agencies in question find it to their advantage to give him.

It becomes, therefore, a matter of policy whether the manufacturer considers before making the decision—in the one case, to spend money in developing business abroad, or, in the other, to risk little and possibly gain big. In other words, it resolves itself into a question of whether the manufacturer wants to be at the helm of his own export bark or take a chance on his goods being shipped in some other fellow's ship.

This article we shall confine our remarks to the functions of the indirect exporting agencies, excluding the difference between them and pointing out both advantages and disadvantages presented by each. Subsequent articles will take up in detail the direct methods of exporting.

The name itself suggests the nature and functions of an organization of this kind. It is, therefore, unnecessary to go into great detail in describing the export merchant. He is essentially a buyer and a seller of merchandise. He purchases in this country quantities of goods at the lowest prices available, and sells to the best possible advantage in foreign markets. Some export merchants confine their operations to one product or group of related products; others to one territory. Generally, however, they branch out into a wide variety of goods, agricultural machinery, some in foodstuffs, others in hardware. Then there are those specializing in the African trade, or the Oriental, or the South American, as the case may be. The division of labor in the foreign field is comparable to similar divisions of our own country into manufacturing sections. That sum now is released as an impetus to business.

And yet we are in the throes of the most colossal commodity and business readjustment experienced for twenty-five years.

As a class, the wholesalers and manufacturers have readjusted their prices; but the retailers have done so only in an imaginary way, through their advertisements. Roger W. Babson.

"Inconsistent" Is Good.

There are many factors that should bring confidence in an unexampled prosperity, but we are new in the midst of the most inconsistent condition for many years. We have a flexible banking system, and the Federal Reserve banks have held onto their Liberty bonds, making a huge buying reserve that should be a bulwark for business.

Up to the passage of prohibition we spent three billions annually on drink. That sum now is released as an impetus to business.

And yet we are in the throes of the most colossal commodity and business readjustment experienced for twenty-five years.

As a class, the wholesalers and manufacturers have readjusted their prices; but the retailers have done so only in an imaginary way, through their advertisements. Roger W. Babson.

BUILDING BUSINESS IN LATIN AMERICA

A Series of Practical Instructive
Articles on How to Export

VIII.—PLANNING THE OVERSEAS CAMPAIGN

Marketing Channels.

So far we have discussed what an established overseas business means to the southern manufacturer—with particular stress on the Latin-American market; we have listed a variety of helpful agencies in foreign trade, cautioned the exporter about the registration of his trade-marks abroad before attempting to do business, advised him to know the people he is planning to trade with and given him some practical information on their peculiarities as contrasted with our own. Also, we have taken up the subject of studying the market possibilities for various lines and cautioned him against undue haste—especially as the start trying to cover too much ground or attempting to sell his goods where there may be little or no demand and conditions against the likelihood of such demand ever being created. This, in short, covers the foundation of what a manufacturer should know before actually laying out his overseas campaign. We are now ready to consider ways and means for breaking into the market and exporting.

Exporting can be roughly divided into two broad classes: direct exporting and indirect exporting. There is bound to be a certain amount of overlapping, especially in advertising and direct-mail methods, but for the purpose of making clear both advantages and disadvantages of each, we will consider the numerous methods of getting business abroad, this division will be found helpful.

Wholesale Head Has High Creed For Business

Believes Times Can Be Helped If Right Methods Prevail Between Wholesale sellers and Retailers.

A. T. Dosser, president of the Southern Wholesale Dry Goods association and vice president of the Daniel Briscoe company, of Knoxville, Tenn., was in Atlanta Friday and Saturday visiting local members of the big dry goods association.

Mr. Dosser, who in the past week or two has covered several states, finds conditions among merchants generally in better shape than has been reported from some sources.

"Merchants have plenty of assets," he said, "but many of them are not using them. They are not getting a share of the business offered by the commission house. Some manufacturers are not making use of the commission houses special commission discounts or sales commission. The rating of such a policy is questioned."

The export commission house should by all means not be ignored in an export campaign, regardless of what other channels are available. During recent years there has been an almost phenomenal growth of this class of representative. His function is to represent the manufacturer in foreign countries, to handle the export of goods, and his field of operations is limited largely to the export of goods.

Manufacturers' export agents represent the third and remaining class of indirect agencies for selling abroad. # He Always Gets Through!

By Pierre Raville

EVEN the most disgruntled critic of the world softens a little at Christmas time. Maybe it is sometimes a matter of habit. The disgruntled critic formed the habit early in life of softening up a bit at Christmas, and even when everything else, in his opinion, is going wrong, he is likely to feel that Christmas is right. Or it may be the contagion of the Christmas spirit. No matter if the cynical one looks savage, or even goes so far as to say, "Confound Christmas!" when it comes, he can't quite resist the spell. Good cheer is catching.

Most people don't need to be conquered by Christmas. Most people, happily, seem to be willing to be caught—caught up and carried along, lifted to a realization that there is something too often forgotten for the rest of the year that must be recognized at Christmas.

The Christmas spirit is, after all, pretty much a spirit of fellowship. It may begin in the fellowship of the family, grow to a fellowship of friends. It expands at last to a fellowship of humanity.

More people are thinking about their relations to a whole world than ever thought about such a matter before. Fellowship has no geography. Christmas is its supreme festival.

Three hundred years ago, when the Pilgrims came to the chilly shores of the new world, Christmas had a profound religious significance. That significance still glows in the picture of the day. Later comers and the flight of years have added sentiments of varying color, but all shades of sentiment are touched by the mellow feeling of kindness. All creeds can accept the challenge of the day. It is a roomy festival. Its very essence is that it does not exclude. It is hospitable to the deepest of religious convictions. It is equally receptive to those who lay emphasis on other beauty. It is called childhood's greatest day. It may be called anything you choose. There is space in the magic circle of its inspiration for all manner of humanizing influences.

The Hollanders who came to the mouth of the Hudson brought with them two conspicuous ideas—the public school and Santa Claus. Both of these ideas flourished in the soil of America. Kris Kringle became a national institution. His image has become inseparable from Christmas. He appeals to the imagination.

Every sentiment needs its image. Santa Claus personifies something too subtle to be defined in any other way. Everybody knows what that fat figure means, though the translations might be multiplied. He is the trade-mark of good cheer.

He knows no class distinctions. And he has a big job. There are a lot of heroism and a lot of poetry behind his struggles. He gets into tight places. You have heard stories, right out of life, that show how often the kindly thought almost doesn't get itself acted, or how the pinch of poverty clogs the path to the place of peace. The drama of Christmas will never be altogether written except by some wizard who is able to read all human hearts. Maybe the finest stories of Christmas, those that might reveal the sublimest expressions of the human heart, never will be written.

Yes, Santa Claus's paths are not always easy. To reach some homes and hands he may have mighty obstacles to overcome. But his own spirit never flags. His own resources never seem to fail. He always gets through.

Good Form, Health and Beauty

THE CHRISTMAS FAIRY KNOWS!

By Mrs. Henry Symes

DO YOU believe in fairies? Don't be ashamed to confess it if you do. It is really quite fashionable these days to believe in fairies. We ourselves believe firmly in them ever since the time that Dorothy Ennysbody told us about the fairy she met at the house party which the Mortons gave at their country house.

Dorothy was only eighteen at the time so she was quite thrilled to receive an invitation for such a gorgeous party. The first day was a rather trying one for the little schoolgirl, however. She was by no means a raving beauty and she lacked much of that assurance and poise which belongs to the older woman of the world. She told me that she would never have known how to get thru the ordeal of the first dinner if it had not been for the little Christmas fairy, whom she most opportunely met on the stairs.

She was walking rather slowly down the wide old staircase trying to find some courage to greet all the strange people whom she knew she must meet in the living room when she heard a cheery little voice at her side.

The voice said, "Shut your eyes partly and look back of the newel post if you want to see me."

Dorothy did as she was told. Imagine her astonishment when she saw a fairy more dainty and charming than any her wildest day dreams had ever imagined. She was so surprised that the only thing she could say was, "Oh!"

This was enough for the Christmas fairy, however, and she commenced to chat with her and Miss Ennysbody were old friends.

"It certainly does seem queer," she said, "that every one is always so surprised to see me. Why, I have been coming to this house for the last fifty years! I know every nook and cranny of it as well as I know my own home and I know all the guests who have been entertained here in all these years. In fact it is I who have helped to make their stay most pleasant."

By this time Dorothy found courage enough to say, "Who are you? You see, this is my very first visit here and I know no one except my host and hostess."

"I am the Christmas fairy. I live in a rose house over in the conservatory, but I always manage to come over to the big house for the Christmas party to see if there is not some one who needs my help. Now is there anything I can do for you?"

Just then a woman exquisitely gowned and radiantly beautiful crossed the living room at the foot of the stairs. A little cry of admiration burst from the lips of Dorothy. "Oh, if you could only give me a charm to make me as beautiful as that lady, I would be grateful to you for the rest of my life."

The Christmas fairy laughed and her laughter was like the sweet tones of a silver bell. "Why, my dear child, it was only fifteen years ago that that very lady asked me the same thing. I gave her a charm to make her as beautiful as you are now. Now you would have the same thing; is it not so?"

And She Tells—Because It's Christmas!

Answers to Beauty Queries

Superfluous Hair

Q. Will you please tell me the best way to remove superfluous hair? I have a rather strong growth of hair on my arms. I cut it off several times and the hair is becoming darker and heavier.

A. The electric needle will remove the hair permanently, but this is rather expensive and should be used only by an expert. Depilatories will remove the hair for a time and they will tend to discourage the growth. I am printing the formula for a depilatory which you may have made up by a druggist or which you may compound yourself.

A Depilatory

Saltpetre of soda or calcium sulphide 100 grains
Lime 100 grains
Mix thoroughly and keep dry in well-closed bottle until wanted for use. The mixture is covered the part to be depilated and add warm water to it until it is of a creamy consistency. Spread over the hairy surface and allow to remain for five to ten minutes according to the nature of the growth and the susceptibility of the skin; then scrape off with a blunt blade a rubber bulb, for example. It should be removed, as in every case with a depilatory, when the burning sensation is painful. Two long contact with the skin should be avoided immediately after the hair has been removed the depilatory surface should be washed with water and a cold cream or a blint oil applied to prevent irritation.

Cleansing Cream

Q. Will you please print a formula for a cleansing cream which may be made at home, also the formula for something which will whiten the skin?

Helen.

A. I am printing below the formulas for which you ask.

Cleansing Cream

White wax 2 ounces
Spermaceti 2 ounces
Sweet almond oil 12 ounces
Distilled water 2 ounces
Glycerin 1 ounce
Salicylic acid 10 grains

To Whiten the Skin

A successful of the texture of benzoic acid, rosewater from a well-known distiller, which is excellent for whitening the skin.

Chapped Hands

Q. Will you please print the formula for a cream for chapped hands? My hands become very rough as soon as the cold weather appears. I dry them very carefully and do not wash them any oftener than is absolutely necessary.

A. I am printing below the formula for a cream for chapped hands.

Cream for Chapped Hands

White petrolatum 2 1/2 ounces
Paraffin wax 1 ounce
Lanolin 1 ounce
Water 1 ounce
Oil of rose 1 drop Alcohol 1 drop

Melt the paraffin wax, add the petrolatum and lanolin. Stir constantly, adding the water in during the process. Add the oil of rose and alcohol. The nearly white chapped hands should be treated by keeping the hands as dry as possible and applying some such ointment at night before retiring.

Solutions to Social Problems

Wedding Dress for Men

Q. Will you kindly tell me the proper dress for the men at the wedding party at an evening wedding which is to be held in the home?—H. S. S.

A. The groom, the best man, and the ushers should wear full evening dress at an evening wedding, whether it is held in a church or in the home. A white tie, a standing collar, white gloves, and a high silk hat should be worn.

The "At Home" Day

Q. What is the correct way for a hostess to let her friends know what day she has set aside as her day at home?—H. G. S.

A. The hostess should have the name of the day on which she will be at home to callers, engraved upon her visiting cards. If she has decided to have the day or the time elapsing between her days, she should announce her decision to her friends by means of a specially engraved card.

Congratulations at the Wedding

Q. Will you please tell me what to say to the bride and groom when I congratulate them at the wedding reception? I am not skilful at making graceful phrases and so do not know just exactly what to say.—M. A.

Makes Appointments at the Last Minute

Q. I have been going with a young man for the last two months and I am very much interested in him. He never fails to make a date with me each week, but he always waits until the last minute to call me up. As I prefer his company to that of any of my other young men friends, I have been holding dates open for him. I do not want to lose his friendship, but I don't see how to do it without being heartily upon the good fortune that is yours.

A. Why not let the young man find that you have another engagement when he calls up at the last minute and asks to come to see you? When he learns that you have other friends to whom you are going, he may call you up a day or two ahead of time in order to make sure that you will be at home.

SHE WHO LOVES IMPORTED NOVELTIES WILL LOVE THIS!

Q. The woman on your list who loves novel household furnishings would like one of those new copper dishes set upon tripods, some of them, and almost all of them filled with the most gorgeous of new artificial fruit. Of course, you might give her one without the other, for the two together make one's gift rather expensive. Once she has the dish, you know, she can add the fruit herself. Interior decorators consider these bowls of fruit as splendidly fitting opportunities for placing a bit of color upon a buffet of dark wood. Any housewife can find use for, and pleasant satisfaction in, one of the colorful new door-stops. There are polka-dots, pussy cats, baskets of flowers and dear knows what not, in the form of door-stops. The parrots and baskets of flowers are especially attractive. The girl or woman who sets much happiness out of pleasant odors will find one of the new perfume bottles not only decorative but useful as well. There are some which are delightfully slender, having a pointed top, which is gold-filled, as is also the little well attached to the stopper. The one illustrated here is not quite so slender as some but it better suits a more slender person. As for knockers, every girl can use one of those. They look equally well whether in one's own home or in one's boarding house or college. They add a touch of refinement and delicacy and they themselves are really very good to look upon. The delicately colored basket-of-flowers knockers are especially for the door of the dainty boudoir. There are small brass ones, some shaped as cats and other just plain colonial ones, which would be suitable for doors of rooms less daintily furnished. Remember how folks used to go "wild" over the bead chains one could make one's self upon a loom? The faded went out, but France has brought it back again. The bead chains which the shops have to show now are exquisite. You should see the beautifully colored and intricate designs on some of them! Some have perfectly beautiful small bead coin purses attached to the ends of them. The chain pictured here was made of gray crystal beads with the design worked out in king's blue and soft rose.

Odd strips of dainty wallpaper may be used to cover hatboxes or costume boxes. When one opens one's closet door it is very gratifying to expose hatboxes on the top of one's closet shelf which exactly match the paper of the room.

Have you bits of wool left from your various knittings? Use them to make wool flowers to trim your serge frock or your hat or even to knit collars and

Most every household has a bit of linen lying around the kitchen sink. Use up all such remnants on wash day. Throw them or their juice into the boiler. They will make the stains disappear as well as making the clothes whiter.

From an old spool you can make a floor-stop. Stain it to match the floor or carpet and hammer a nail into it thru the carpet at just the place you wish the door to stop.

ENTERTAINING HINTS FOR YULETIDE

By Mrs. Chester Adams

HIS holiday season is a favorite time for entertaining and many are the parties, both impromptu and planned, which are held during Christmas week. There is no reason why you should not have a share in the fun. You see, your party need not be an elaborate or an expensive one to be successful.

If you feel inclined to have a Christmas party, do not mourn the fact that it is too late to send out invitations. Simply call up a few friends on the telephone and invite them over. If you prefer to write the invitations, you may send them out by private messenger even two or three days before the time set for the party.

We have formulated a few simple plans for Yuletide parties which you may like to use.

INVITATIONS

(1) Send small branches of holly to those people whom you want to invite to your party. Write your invitations on rather thin paper which may be rolled up into a small scroll and tied to the branch of holly with a bit of narrow red ribbon. They should read as follows:

"The chief of the Clan of the Bright Red Berry bids you repair to 88 Ever Green Street on Saturday, December the twenty-fifth at eight o'clock. There will be a dinner of the clan and waltz music pertaining to the celebration of Christmas will be discussed."

(2) Write the following note upon small stockings cut from stiff red paper:

"We hear that you are disappointed because Santa did not fill your stocking. Your disappointment makes you eligible to be invited to a little consolation party we grown folks are having at our house on Monday, December the twenty-sixth. Come around."

(3) If you would like to play Santa to some poor children, you might invite your guests to bring with them ten cents which they are willing to give away. Let your invitations be a piece of brown cardboard cut in the form of a wooden shoe, bearing this inscription:

"The old woman who lives in a shoe finds that she is unable to provide a Christmas gift for her 'so many children.' So she plans to give you a jolly party on Wednesday, December the twenty-second, and hopes that you will bring with you ten cents or more to contribute to the collection which will be taken up for her little ones. Come to 239 Lincoln Street."

A wooden shoe should be used as a receptacle to receive the coins. This verse may be printed on the side: "There was an old woman who lived in a shoe. She had so many children she didn't know what to do. She gathered them up at ten cents a head. Give them a party and sent them to bed."

DECORATIONS

It will be an easy matter to provide decorations for your party since the ordinary Christmas greens, holly, mistletoe, bells, etc., may be used. The decorating of the table is about the only thing left to be done as regards decorations.

(1) For the up-to-date Christmas party, let your centerpiece represent the arrival of Santa by airplane. A toy airplane with a small doll dressed as Santa and sitting in the pilot's seat may be suspended over the table. Let Santa's bag containing souvenirs wrapped in attractive packages, each bearing the name of a guest, hang from the side of the airplane. The place cards may be small airplanes made of white paper and tooth picks.

(2) Make a high snowdrift of white cotton for the center of your table and show Santa dressed in the familiar red suit trimmed with fur, buried up to his shoulders in the drift. Have a small gift for each of your guests concealed in the snow bank, and after the refreshments have been eaten, invite the guests to help Santa out of his predicament. There will be a great deal of merriment when the gifts are discovered.

(3) Sprinkle the tablecloth with diamond dust to represent snow and let your centerpiece be a toy Christmas tree, overturned and being dragged along by two small brownies. One of these tiny people, holding in his hands a piece of paper representing a Christmas carol, should stand guard at each plate. The candle shades should be decorated with Christmas greens and holly.

GAMES

(1) Word Charades—One player leaves the room. The rest agree upon a certain word associated with Christmas, and each player agrees to represent a certain letter in the word. The person who is called back into the room and it is his task to guess the word which has been chosen. He goes to each player in turn with the question, "What is the word?" The player singled out has to answer with a single word which begins with the letter he or she has chosen. Thus if the word decided upon were "gift," the player taking "G" as his letter would answer with the word "Ghost" or "Gift" or any other word beginning with "G." The player choosing "I" does likewise, and so on until the "Guesser" has asked the questions of each player. Then he must arrange the different letters received in this way to form the word which the rest of the players have chosen.

When he has guessed the word, he selects another person to leave the room and become the "Guesser."

(2) For the party which is held in the afternoon, the Christmas walk is a very appropriate pastime. Perhaps there are some beauty spots or some points of interest in your neighborhood which your guests will be very much interested to see. The hostess should plan the route of the walk and send her guests out in couples, telling the young men of the party the direction which they shall take. Each couple may take a different direction and arrive at last at some central point where all are to meet. Partners may then be changed, and all start on their several ways back to the house where the hostess will be ready to receive them.

(3) Darning the Christmas Stockings—This is a very amusing contest in which the guests are asked to darn a small hole in a piece of stocking. It would appear that the girls of the party would have the advantage over the men in a contest of this sort, but such is not the case. If there are any objections to the unfairness of the contest, however, the girls may be given a handicap of a minute or two to start with. At the end of ten minutes collect the pieces of stocking and appoint a committee of three to judge the work. A small prize should be awarded to the person whose darning is the most perfect. A small stocking filled with candy, nuts, raisins, etc., will be appropriate as prize.

REFRESHMENTS

Appropriate refreshments for your Yuletide party may be chosen from this list: Turkey sandwiches cut in fancy shapes, fruit salad in holly wreaths, cakes cut in the shape of stars, candied fruits, stuffed dates, ice cream, raisins, nuts, bonbons, cocoons, and coffee.

ROYAL CUPID NEEDS MEN

Will European Royalty Have to Do Business on the "Matrimonial Curb Market" to Save Its Marriageable Blue Blooded Princes and Princesses?

By JOSEPH W. GRIGG.

IN these days of shortage of men in the Old World as a result of the terrible ravages of the greatest of all wars, it is not only the maiden tending the geese in a slowly-recovering devastated Northern France who faces a life of spinsterhood, nor the girl who pecks away at a typewriter in London. The war has left very much in doubt the matrimonial chances of a large sheaf of European princesses.

When the house of Hohenzollern came clattering down with the rest of the ruins of a militarized Germany, it also brought to the ground some of the fondest dreams of royal marriages which the diplomatists and court dopesters for years had been lying awake at night trying to arrange, regardless of the principals. Likewise, when Austria-Hungary went to smash, another lot of possibilities of a very different sort were put out of the running for many years to come.

So that if in Old England to-day, for instance, more than a million marriageable girls are faced with a life of spinsterhood, it should comfort these "surplus" or "superfluous" women to know that Cupid may also pass up a large number of royal maidens. The crop of eligible princesses is no crop at all. There are few of marriageable age at the present day.

Practically every court in Europe is at the present time setting an example of economy.

What makes it difficult for a princess to have any say-so in the bestowal of her own hand, even after a world-war, is the reluctance of some of the commoners who might be classed as "possibles" to take up semi-royal careers in the capacity of consorts of one sort or another. In the first place, a commoner's princess would certainly have an inherited right to precedence of every sort, and life for such a husband would be a tame and "canned" affair. It is difficult to see how an ambitious, spirited, independent non-royal aspirant could view a matrimonial alliance of this sort with anything but nervous misgivings, because his life thereafter would be one of the greatest formality.

From the standpoint of the marriageable prince there will be food for reflection in the two most recent examples of the independent action of the late King of Greece and Prince Carol of Rou-mania in marrying commoners—the former to find that his aristocratic countrymen objected, and the latter to find that his royal father and mother insisted on declaring it only a morganatic alliance.

The Prince of Wales to-day is the most striking royal heir-apparent in the Old World, and the time is drawing near when either he or his royal parents will be faced with the problem of his marriage—a marriage which should intrigue the staid as well as the sentimental.

The only other really striking prince is Boris of Bulgaria, successor to his ousted royal parent, the once powerful King Ferdinand, or "Foxy Ferdie," as he came to be known during the war. Boris's future is still debatable. If his people decide to have him around in his present capacity he will be one of the best matches in Europe, and his marriage will be a part of Near Eastern diplomacy.

As a romantic figure, though, Boris is not in the same class with the Prince of Wales, who has added to his prestige in his recent trip to the antipodes. The English Prince has proved himself a "mixer." He is showing a remarkable similarity to his royal grandfather, the late King Edward, when the latter was the youthful Prince of Wales; not quite so much the reckless Prince of Wales, but possessing his grandfather's winning personality. Besides, he is heir to the throne, which will make him the Crown symbol for the British Empire.

The Prince is now twenty-five years old, and many of his future subjects are interestedly conjecturing about a possible helpmate for him. From time to time there have been rumors of this or that princess, and even several commoners have figured in the list of eligibles. If the Prince is as independent about whom he shall marry as he is about a good many other things, he may give an example to the royal houses of Europe as to how self-determination can be applied by one of its scions.

Only Princess Yolanda of Italy, now in her eighteenth year, or the Roumanian Princess Elizabeth, twenty-five years old, and her sister, Maria, twenty-one, appear to be possible choices for the heir to the British throne. Yolanda's name was mentioned in this connection when the Prince was in Italy during the days of the Italian retreat. But here religious differences offer an insuperable obstacle. The two eldest Roumanian Princesses have only recently been reported as possible brides respectively for Prince Christopher, son of King Constantine of Greece, and King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia.

Princess Yolanda of Italy.

Princess Elizabeth of Roumania.

It is from Roumania, in fact, that the most frequent and persistent reports of possible royal marriages come. And this has led to gossip in court circles that the Queen of Roumania is aware of the necessity of finding suitable royal husbands for her two eldest daughters in the not distant future. To have a Roumanian Princess for the Queen of Greater Serbia, or the consort of Boris of Bulgaria, or another daughter allied to the Greek royal house, with the possibility of establishing more sympathetic relations with the lately expanded Greece, is at this juncture the only evidence of the possible effect of approachtures are still to be carved out for them are: the Prince of Wales, Prince Albert, Prince Henry, and Prince George. Others of Continental nationalities include: Prince Christian Frederick and Prince Knud, Denmark; Prince Olat, Norway; Prince Carol and Prince Nicholas, Roumania; King Alexander, Jugo-Slavia; Prince Boris and Prince Cyril, Bulgaria, and the Duke of Sparta, Greece.

It may be difficult to find princely wives for the princely members of the royal houses of the Old World, but it will be a far harder job to find royal husbands for the growing crop of princesses, now that Germans and Austrians are taboo.

Of the princesses, the first one to attract attention is Princess Mary of England, now twenty-two years old. Court gossip, or people whose favorite indoor pastime is to make hypothetical royal matches, find it extremely difficult to locate an eligible prince as her possible husband. It appears almost certain that she will marry a fellow-countryman not of royal blood. Such a marriage would be popular, just as it would in the case of the Prince of Wales or his brothers.

Princess Mary is not a princess dowered with the reputed beauty of those in the fairy books. She is, however, an attractive, comely, typically English lass, with a clear complexion and rosy cheeks; is fond of outdoor sports, especially riding; is a great reader, loves music and has recently obtained a certificate as a full-fledged nurse. Like her royal mother, she is interested in welfare work, and has identified herself with the growing Girl Guide movement.

With the exception of Princess Mary, the Roumanian Princess, and Princess Yolanda of Italy, most of the princesses of the reigning royal houses of Europe are too young to be thinking of husbands, or for their possible marriages to be matter for serious consideration.

There is Princess Marie of Belgium, now thirteen, a sturdy, good-looking young miss with an abundance of hair floating over her shoulders in juvenile fashion. Even younger is Princess Juliana of the Netherlands, now ten, who, like her royal mother, is more healthy than beautiful. Good Dutchmen quietly and somewhat sardonically admit that their Queen Wilhelmina shows to better advantage when perched on a horse than when she walks, because of her compact figure. The Queen's consort was found in Germany. Not many Dutchmen are anxious to-day to have the royal Princess go to the same source for hers.

Ingrid is the Swedish Princess, but she is only nine years old, and not bothering much about what Fate may carve out for her in the shape of a husband.

There are three sisters of Yolanda of Italy who must be included. One of them, Matilda Marie, is seventeen; another, Elizabeth, is twelve, and the third, Maria Francesca, is only five.

Ex-King "Tino" of Greece has several daughters, one or more of marriage age. Princess Helene is one of them, and she is now twenty-six years old, while her sister, Princess Irene, is sixteen.

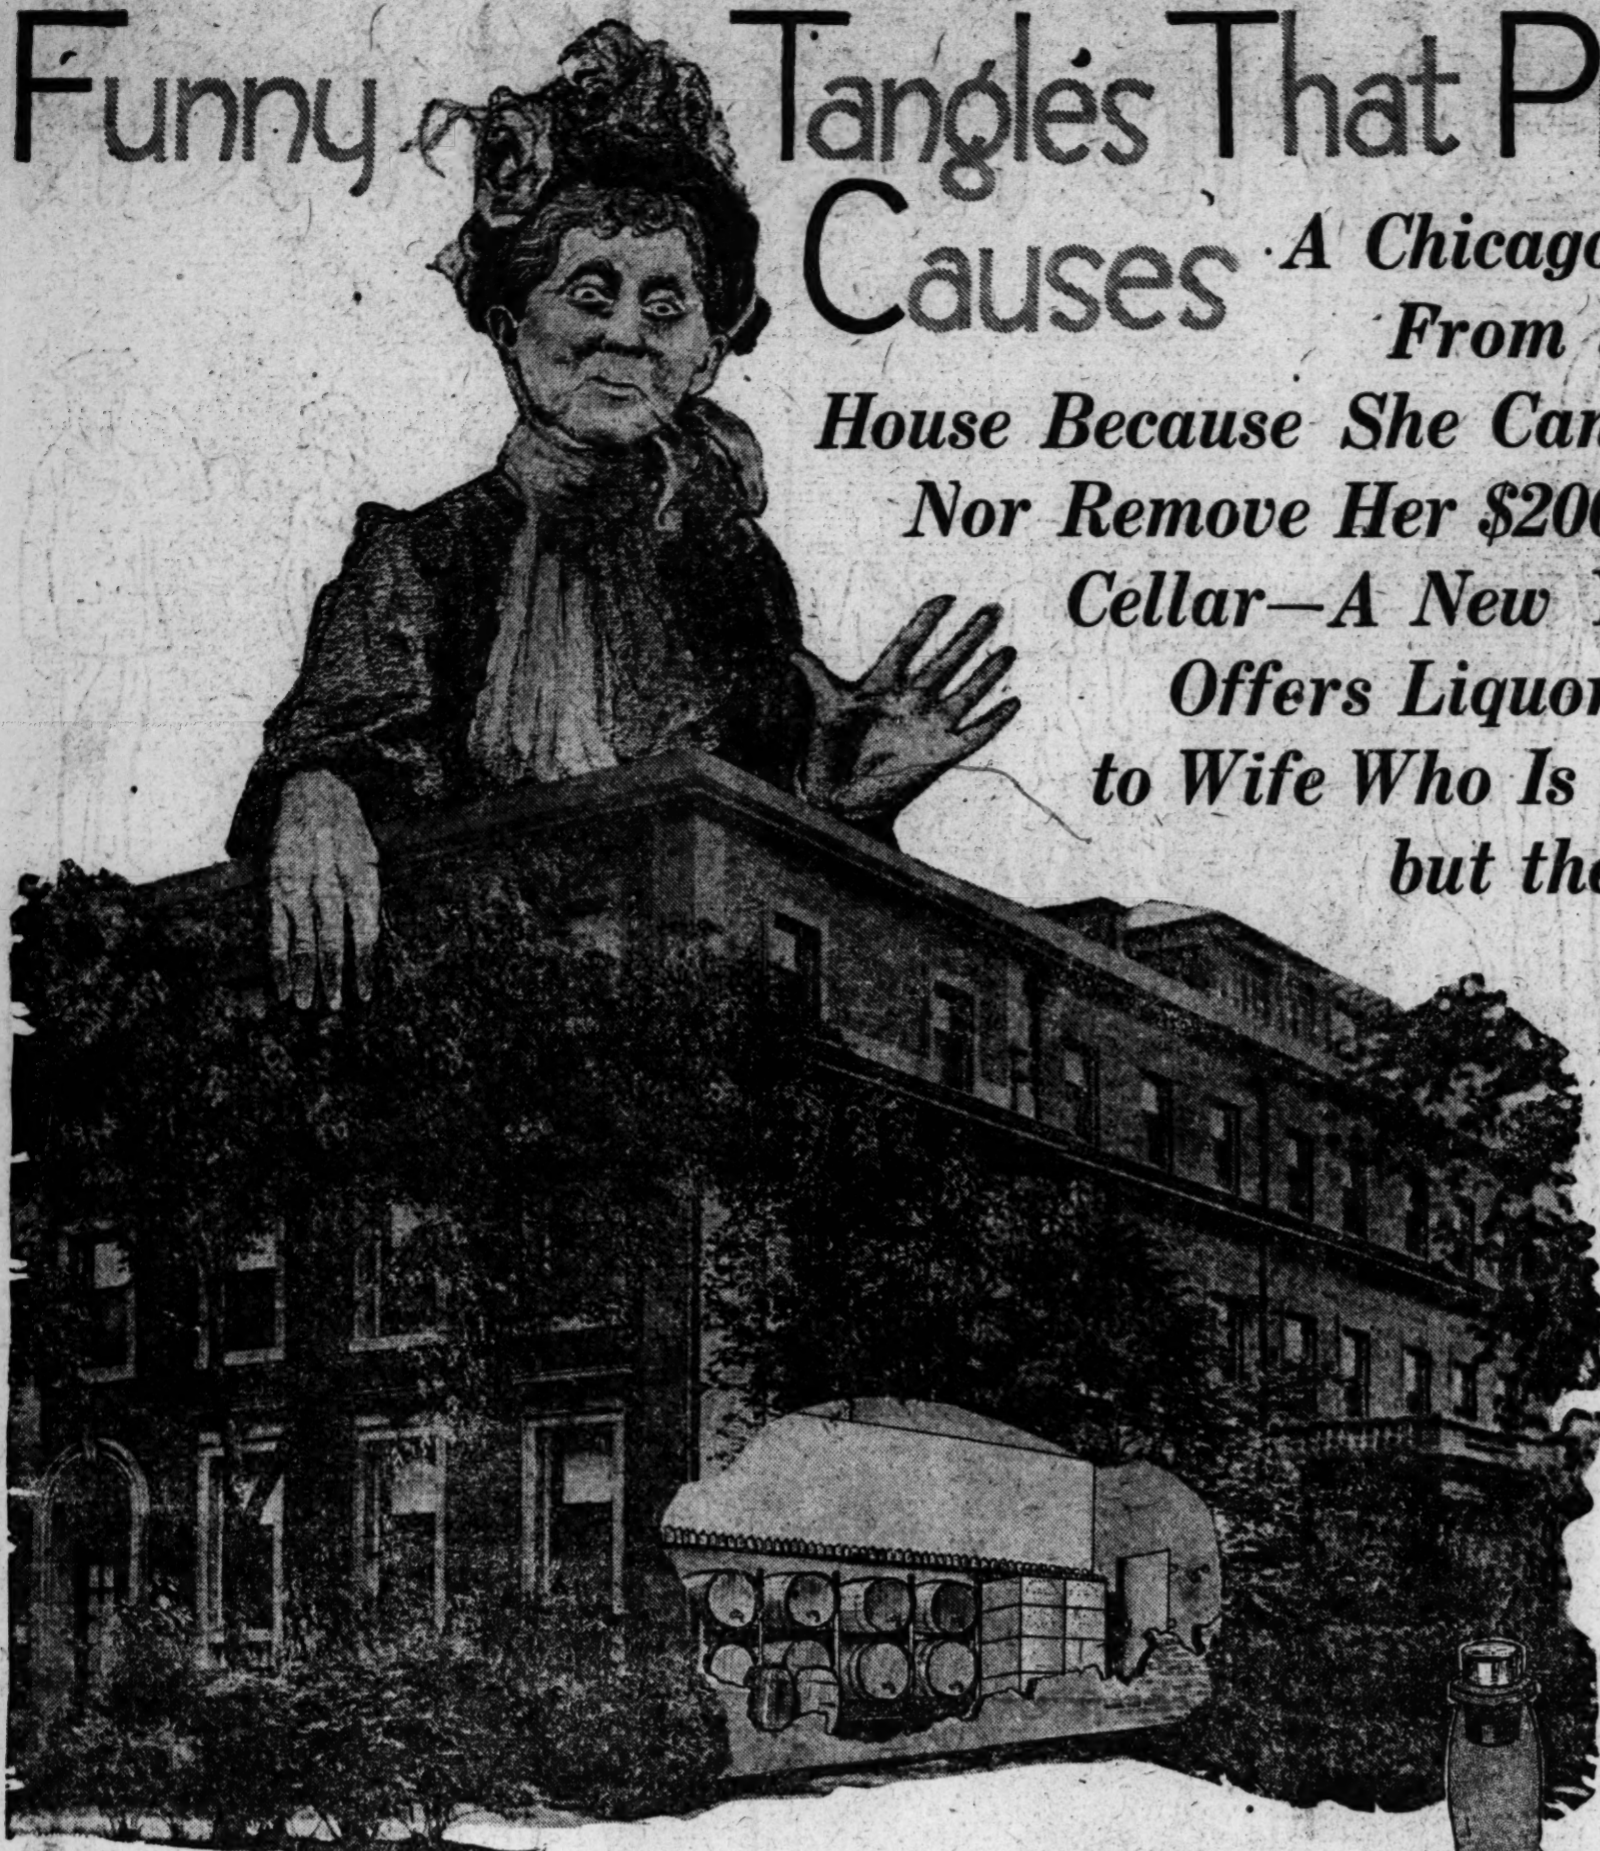

Prince Boris of Bulgaria has two marriageable sisters, whose betrothal may eventually have considerable bearing on the future of the Balkan countries: Princess Augusta, now twenty-two, and her sister, Clementine, twenty-one.

Lady Rachel Cavendish.

Funny Tangles That Prohibition Causes

A Chicago Woman Kept From Selling Her House Because She Can Neither Sell Nor Remove Her $200,000 Wine Cellar—A New York Husband Offers Liquor as Alimony to Wife Who Is Suing Him, but the Volstead Act and Prohibition Agents Forbid Such a Procedure

When Mrs. Bastedo's first husband died he willed her the large house on Astor Street. For sentimental reasons Mrs. Bastedo declared that she would not live in the house and immediately offered it for sale. The house contains a wine cellar, housing almost priceless vintage, which has proved the fly in the ointment, for the Illinois law and Dame Prohibition have intervened to prohibit the sale. The house cannot be sold and the liquor removed. The liquor cannot be sold with the house. Nor can Mrs. Bastedo act as a hostess in the cellar if the house be sold.

EVEN the disaster of war, famine or pestilence has its comedy—so has prohibition. There is much "dry humor" about. Prohibition has set the jokesmiths busy all over the land, and a million bad jokes about the arid era have caused mingled laughter and indignation. There is, for instance, the one about the fellow who was always dry. He was a wet. But when the country went dry, he dried up. It must be obvious that prohibition and the words allied to it offer unlimited possibilities for puns and various other forms of supposed wit. But if the jokes invented about prohibition are a sorry collection, the real life jokes that prohibition has brought about are alike curious, diverting and instructive. A great multitude of the most astonishing puzzles, peculiarities, paradoxes, perplexities and predicaments have befallen people and have provided laughter and discussion in all of the forty-eight states.

Of course, it should have been expected that prohibition would bring about funny situations. Human humor has always found drink and drinking a favorite subject for jest. The abolishment of drink has always stood as something of a joke in itself, and the comic situations that might come through the banishment of exhilarating beverages have figured merrily even in the exalted halls of literature.

In that gay story Gil Blas, one of the best works of the eighteenth century, we are told of a certain Dr. Sangrado who practiced the water cure. Dr. Sangrado believed that all diseases could be cured by copious potations of water. He was as strong for water as Bryan is. He hated wine profoundly, and forbade it in his house, and made his house a sanctuary of prohibition. The rascally Gil Blas came to serve as an assistant to the excellent doctor and was given instruction in the beauties of water. He was commanded to drink vast quantities of water. He, however, was no lover of water, and found it difficult to put down a glassful, to say nothing of the bucketfuls which the doctor demanded. He could get no wine in the doctor's house, which made him sad, and could not pour water into himself, which made the doctor angry. Finally, in the unhappy situation, Gil Blas grew desperate one evening and stole away from the doctor's house and went to the tavern. He drank a cask of wine and reeled home and fell into bed, unnoticed, fortunately. In the morning he was consumed with the usual morning after-thirst. He went to the tap, filled a bucket with water, put it to his mouth and poured the water down his throat. In the midst of this the doctor appeared. When he saw Gil Blas swilling the pail of water, he went into a rapture. He announced that his assistant had perceived the truth, was a man of intelligence. Happiness reigned in the house that day. And every night thereafter Gil Blas stole away to the tavern and swigged gargantuan quantities of wine so that in the morning he could swallow a gallon or two of water and delight his master.

From a precedent such as this it was to be expected that nation-wide prohibition would work many comic wonders. It has not failed to do so. There is the case of a beautiful mansion, on the Gold Coast of Chicago, which prohibition, in these days of housing shortage, has made as useless as a pair of dice in a theological seminary.

Not long ago a certain Mr. Griffin died at Miami, Fla. The next day his wife, Mrs. Helen Prindeville Griffin, married Lieutenant Commander Henry Bastedo, U. S. N. This quick succession created some comment, which was increased when it was learned what a kingly legacy the deceased husband had left his wife. The legacy was a large, fine house at 1519 Astor Street, Chicago. The house had a fine, large cellar. The cellar was crammed with an almost priceless store of drinkables. Mrs. Bastedo immediately announced that she would not live in the house, and offered it for sale. There was a grand rush of buyers, and the statistical tried to calculate what fabulous sum it would bring. The prospective buyers, however, stopped short when faced with the following perplexity:

The Federal prohibition agents ruled that Mrs. Bastedo might sell the home but she must not, under penalty of the law, sell the cellarful of beverages. Mrs. Bastedo wants to move the liquor, but here the Illinois State authorities step forward. It is the law in Illinois that one cannot move alcoholic drinkables from one place to another without the same being seized.

To add to Mrs. Bastedo's perplexities the Federal agents say she cannot give away the cellar and that she cannot use it as an inducement to sell the house. No matter how many times the house is sold or resold, Mrs. Bastedo will own the cellar.

On the other hand, should Mrs. Bastedo sell the house and retain the cellar the question arises: Could she have access to the cellar? The law says that one may drink in one's own home. Mrs. Bastedo evidently would not care to make her home in a cellar.

In any other state the matter would be simple. Mrs. Bastedo would merely move her cellar to another home. But in Illinois there is the search and seizure law.

In Chicago they have found one way to offset this statute. Fake robberies are planned and the wet goods moved at night. It is said that a gigantic "whisky ring" exists in Chicago. The machinations of this ring are mostly confined to the removal of whisky and liquors by trucks in the aerie hours when good prohibition officers are supposed to be asleep.

Mrs. Bastedo could visit that section of the city known as "the ghetto," or another section known as "the valley" or the old levee district, and find some of the members of the ring. She could arrange for them to "break into her home." The liquor could then be carted away. This is done every night. The police are thus confronted with many very mysterious robberies. But those who know Mrs. Bastedo say that, in the first place, she would not resort to such practices. She would relinquish the cellar first, they agree. In the second place, should Mrs. Bastedo be in the mood for such a procedure, the cellar has been given so much publicity that suspicion would certainly be aroused in the minds of the prohibition operatives.

So the house stands unoccupied. Many a mouth waters when thoughts are turned toward the well-stocked cellar. Mr. Griffin's will was made public several days ago. The list of liquors in the house was published for the first time. It is a melancholy list for the thirsty to read.

Thirteen five-gallon jugs of whisky sit in a sort of neglected way in one dingy corner. There are 75 quarts of Benedictine, 68 quarts of gin and 30 quarts of kummel, 1,303 quarts of Scotch, 1,394 quarts of twenty-seven-year-old Bour-

mon—
But perhaps you fancy sampling the 498 quarts of champagne, or of Italian, Rhine, Sherry, Old Madrid, Maraschino, or French wine? Observe the fifteen flasks on yonder concrete ledge? Curacao. Abutting it are 6 bottle of Jamaica rum, 7 quarts of Ojen, 185 bottles of Italian vermouth, 178 pints of Chartreuse.

Here is some coconut brandy, that delectable fluid which drips drop by drop from the full blossom of the coconut tree. The completeness of the cellar can be shown by the inventory.

The deserted house on the Chicago Gold Coast is what might be called a prohibition problem play, but we come upon another prohibition peculiarity where a stock of drinkables and the difficulty it entails constitute a particularly unhappy denouement of a drama of domestic tragedy.

The Willards had lived together hap-plied to follow the most approved ethical maxim 50-50. They had an agreement drawn up which specified that the liquid refreshments should be divided equally between them. Mr. Willard, with the gallantry of a gentleman toward a lady, agreed "to assume all liability under the Volstead act for removal." This gallant clause, however, is the cause of the trouble.

The law would permit Mr. Willard, were he moving his own domicile from one place to another, to secure a permit for the transportation of the liquors. But both houses are the property of Mrs. Willard, having been given to her by her father. And Mr. Willard has not made his home in either of them recently. His residence has been with the blonde. Thus it is his romantic adventure which has cost him not only his wife, but also, probably, the share in the family liquid supplies which is his, and which he is unable to move.

A third tale is more in accordance with the great moral forces which brought about prohibition. Prohibition is supposed to stop the breaking up of families. Here is a case where it has done so.

Trouble brewed in the Branch family. The husband and wife agreed to separate. But trouble was not the only thing that had brewed in the Branch family. There was a lake of home-brewed beer, which was stored in rows of kegs in the cellar. Mr. and Mrs. Branch had spent a year preparing the stock of beverage, which they had succeeded in making of a quality that had filled them with joy. They loved that home brew, both of them, with an affection that was greater than the affection they had for each other. After much argument they decided that when Mr. Branch moved out of the place, he should take half of the homebrew with him. He was moving his domicile, and he could readily get a permit to remove his share of the treasured kegs—that was his first thought. A second thought filled him with perplexity.

The Branch home was a cottage in Orange, N. J. Mr. Branch was a minor New York politician. One of his deviations from righteousness was that he has voted for years in his New York political district. To do this he had had to pretend a New York address. He had arranged a nominal residence at the house of a New York friend. Now, in order to get a permit to move the homebrew, he would have to vouch that the New Jersey house was his residence. He would have to go on record as a New Jersey resident, whereas he had just registered for an election as a resident of New York. There were multiple possibilities for trouble here. Suppose the New Jersey prohibition authorities learned of his New York registration? Suppose a New York political opponent should learn of the permit vouching for a New Jersey residence? Mr. Branch decided that it would not be prudent to remove his beer. Still, he would not abandon it. He compromised, and made up with his wife.

Lieutenant Commander Paul Henry Bastedo, who married Mrs. Helen Griffin the day after her husband died. He has found that being in charge of a battleship is mere child's play compared to caring for a wine cellar.

pily for many years. Then Mr. Willard met a blonde who carried the honest name of Kelly. Mr. Willard liked the blonde more than was connubially lawful. He called himself Mr. Kelly, and took up residence with her. Mrs. Willard, learning of this, instituted suit for divorce. The difficulties that developed were these: The Willard town home is at 33 Park Avenue, New York City. The Willard country home is at Locust Valley, L. I. The cellars of both houses are bounteously supplied with provisions against the drought.

In cases of marital split-ups the vital problem has always been the division of the property. In this the Willards de-

BELGIUM BEAUTIES VIE FOR HONORS

By EDOUARD PRAUS.
A FEW months ago, at the instigation of a French newspaper, a contest was organized with a view to discovering the most beautiful woman in France. It was a great success, and the winner, Mlle. Agnes Souret, chosen from among 2,000 competitors, became from one day to the next a celebrity. Her picture was flashed on the screen, of all the movies in both worlds, and soon, under the direction of an enterprising theatrical producer, the most beautiful woman in France was exhibited in flesh and blood in the principal towns of Europe.

Following the example of Paris, a Brussels newspaper La Dernière Heure, organized in its turn a Belgium beauty contest which gave unexpected results. Millions of requests for participation came from all corners of Belgium, and the task of the jury, composed of artists, sculptors and photographers, was not easy.

Of the first 800 pictures kept 200 were eliminated after the first examination. The portraits of the other competitors appeared at this time in the paper and the final selection will be made, as in Paris, by the universal suffrage of the movies.

If Belgium has not, like France, twenty or more different races whose type can be fixed by a contest of ethnic centres, she nevertheless has three well-defined types: the Flemish, the Wallonaise and the mixed type called Brussels. But while in France a movement toward decentralization is beginning to be perceptible, in Belgium the opposite tendency is actually in the ascendant.

As the well-known Franco-Belgian writer, M. de Waleffe—who who invited to sit on the beauty jury in Brussels in order to introduce the methods of impartial selection which were so successful at Paris—points out, the Belgians are trying to centralize their kingdom, and everything which would tend to accentuate the divorce of the two constitutive races alarms their national unity. They preferred, therefore, to choose their beauties without reference to town or village. They will be simply the twenty-one most beautiful women of Belgium.

Village beauties having flocked in great numbers to Brussels, sculptural robustness and freshness of coloring carried them into the contest of La Dernière Heure.

Anna Dmy.

"I still see," said M. de Waleffe, "a wonderful virgin of pink marble, one metre and eighty centimetres tall, who was the giant of the contest, but a thin and noble giant, proportioned like a statue of the Brechtheon. The graduate of a normal school of teachers, she aspired neither to the stage nor to the movies, but came gracefully to put her beauty at the service of her country."

"Flanders unfurled unprecedented heads of hair, furs of a pale flaxen under which the candidate disappeared, drowned like that Magdalene of Rubens which one sees in the Antwerp Cathedral. Beside that blonde, the blondes of France seemed almost black.

"When timidity—for the Flemish women are less sophisticated than the Parisiennes—adds that delicate blush which is the brusque flame of the blood, the face became pink like dawn on a Norwegian glacier.

"The types from Walloonese Belgium are more nearly related to the Picardese or Ardennese races, but are browner—I hardly dare say more southern—and especially more decided. The women of Liege, alert and bold, no more cast their eyes down before the jury than they did in August, 1914, before German insolence.

"Nevertheless, among 800 candidates I did not see a single demi-worldly one. A dozen at most declared themselves to be ballet dancers or models. Another dozen, artists or musicians. There were also shop girls, typists, employees; but all lived with their families. Some bore well-known aristocratic names and in no way desired to leave them. Having seen the Parisian beauties, it was their ambition to show that Belgium had pretty faces which were just as distinguished.

M. S. O. Bath, another member of the Belgian jury, in an article called "The Confessions of a Sceptic," published by La Dernière Heure, brings out another aspect of the contest, in which he cleverly shows that those who for one moment doubted the profoundly moral character of this beauty contest were wrong.

"I saw very proud mothers accompanying their daughters," this sceptic said; "husbands—very respectable men—presenting their wives; dramatic artists, actresses, dancers, a music hall star, shop girls and little bourgeois without any profession, who would not be in the least sorry to be the 'chosen one.' What risk do they run? If they fail, no one will know unless they themselves tell.

"During two hours I saw more than seventy competitors file past in this manner. Each one was asked one question: 'Would you like to go into the movies?' And there was not a single one who did not declare that that was her dearest wish.

"To appear on the screen! To amuse or move crowds, to become some day—who knows—the idol of the public—that is what many young girls and women dream of. They allow themselves to be carried away on the wings of illusion; they already see themselves as great stars. 'Why not?' they say; 'others who were not any better than we have succeeded!'

"One of the candidates literally bowled over the jury. She was a little bit of a woman, a girl of sixteen, a darling little blonde with curly hair and apple cheeks, who was not afraid.

"'Je ne sais pas parler Français,' she explained immediately before they had interrogated her.

Mlle. Dolly, a favorite contestant in the Flemish class.

"but I speak English and Flemish fluently!"

"She told us that she was born near Antwerp. When the war and the invasion came, her parents took refuge in Great Britain, where she remained until the armistice. All her little being was full of the rather rigid education of the other side of the channel. She had become a little Englishwoman, very smart, very correct, a little boyish, but not too much so, but nevertheless enough to be ignorant of what it is to have cold eyes.

"While she was in England her parents often took her to the movies. She was wild about them and moreover is still wild about them. She saw all the stars perform, she performed herself in front of the mirror, and as a little person already very sure of herself she thinks she would not make at all a 'bad showing' on the screen.

"But how cold it is to describe thus with mere words! One should have seen her expressive mimicry, her tone of authority, the fresh, clear laugh of that amazing kid.

"Her mother confided to us that she had not yet decided to let her follow her bent, but her uncle is convinced that she will become a great artist. And he seems to know, that uncle!

"You see, therefore, since my uncle says so and I live only for that, Mother will have to say 'yes.' Good by, sir!

"Will she get a prize, that amazing girl? Will she at least be among the twenty-one? I do not wish to know anything, but I should not be in the least surprised if, thanks to the contest of La Dernière Heure, a new star would be discovered before long by some astronomer of the film, a star whose worldly popularity might some day equal—perhaps, who knows?—that of that extraordinary Mary Pickford whom the crowd recently carried in triumph in London."

A PROCRASTINATED CHRISTMAS By Walter Prichard Eaton

Wherein Santa Clause Tackles the Problem of Getting Down a Stovepipe and Into Two Hearts.

ABEL and Benjamin Upton were more than brothers; they were the two interdependent halves of what seemed almost a single personality. Abel, who was the elder by two years, exercised none of the prerogatives of age. He never acted without consulting Ben, as Ben never acted without consulting Abel. If you were a chair to be mended in the cabinetmaker's shop behind their house, and only one of them was there, it did you no good to ask when it would be done, because Ben (or Abel) would tell you that he couldn't rightly say till he'd asked his brother. If you were a stranger, this gave you the impression that the absent brother was the head of the firm.

How could you know the other one would have said exactly the same thing? As a matter of fact, though, you would have learned nothing if both brothers were present. To be sure, each would have looked at the other, and then one of them would have told you that the chair would be done next week Wednesday; but only the most guileless ever would have believed it. The chair would be done after you had gone after it three or four times, and finally lost your temper and spoken sharply, or even employed profanity.

The Upton boys (as we all called them) were honest as the farmer's day is long; they never meant to make a false promise in their lives. But the Lord (with liberal assistance from their late lamented male parent, who had been the town cabinetmaker before them) had made them procrastinators. They had raised procrastination, indeed, almost to one of the fine arts. The only thing they didn't procrastinate about was getting up in the morning. They rose, like other farmers, with the sun, or before it; yet the day was never long enough. Always, even in summer, you could see their lantern bobbing out by the barn, and throwing vast shadows of Abel's thin legs on the wall, after their neighbors up and down the road had the cows milked, the chores all done, and were sitting in stocking feet by the stove reading the Rural New Yorker. They were generally plowing when others were planting, and their hay was never in till September, nor the oats thrashed till frost. In their crowded little shop, full of beautiful old individual planes (now, alas, no longer procurable), were chairs, and bureaus, and tables waiting to be repaired, or done over, some of which had been there for two or three years. Indeed, it was said there was furniture up in the loft which had been there so long the owners had died or forgotten it, or moved away from town. At any rate, they had not made enough fuss about getting their furniture back, so the boys had worked on the jobs of the fussy people. They hated fuss. Just outside of the shop were ten bundles of shingles, bought to mend the roof with. These shingles were now gray with the weather, and the roof was still patched with tar paper.

The boys had a sister once. Her orphan laughter now lived with them, kept their house, made butter for the market, and now and then attempted spasmodically to reform her uncles' habits in the matter of getting the evening milking done, being but 19 and of a hopeful disposition. In their rather inarticulate and bachelor fashion they were fond of Susie, not alone because she kept house for them in return for a none too gay and luxurious living, but because she was their sister's child and had come to them a helpless little girl of 12, who had cost them the wages of a housekeeper for three years, before her schooling was over and she was old enough to do the work herself. Those three years, during which they had hired a housekeeper and driven the tow headed Susie to school, and tried to answer her questions as she studied by the stove at night, were firmly fixed in their memories. For three years their monthly deposits in the savings bank had to be given up, they had to endure the high hand of a strange female in the house, but in return they had watched dumbly the flowering of a girlhood, and wondered, and enjoyed their inarticulate, tender moments.

But now, for four years, the deposit had been going into the bank again, there was no stranger in the house to bother them, and Susie made them comfortable. They couldn't ask for anything more ideal, nor did it occur to them that Susie could. Why, she even had the money from the butter she sold, as her own, and that surely must keep her in clothes and the finery girls like. It would have kept Ben and Abel in clothes for five years!

bit of luxury in hats, or shoes, or ribbon. But neither Ben, nor Abel, nor Susie reckoned on a certain force of nature which generally has to be dealt with sooner or later. In a word, Susie was young, a female, with pretty golden hair and a certain shy charm when you came to know her well—and down the road a mile lived a youth of 21. A mile isn't much on foot—and Dan had a motorcycle.

Dan had the motorcycle because he clerked in the store, and the village was three miles away. His father had a farm, heavily mortgaged, but Dan felt no inclination to be a farmer. "Not for me!" he put it. "I seen too much of it!"

Dan had the motorcycle because he clerked in the store, and the village was three miles away. His father had a farm, heavily mortgaged, but Dan felt no inclination to be a farmer. "Not for me!" he put it. "I seen too much of it!"

He longed for a mercantile career, and would have doubtless taken himself to the nearest large town had it not been that by living at home and paying generous board he was easing the load of the mortgage. Most of his wages, indeed, went into his mother's secret mortgage fund in the old teapot on the top shelf of the chimney cupboard. Dan adored his mother, and her worn frame and tired face filled him with an inarticulate hatred of farming.

Then, too, there was Susie. Every morning at 7:45 he passed the Upton house and slowed down to wave his hand, and every morning at that hour Susie was doing something that took her to the side porch or the front window. Every night, when he returned from work at 6:15, the motorcycle stopped by the gate (which had one broken hinge the boys had been "going to fix" for three years), and Dan brought in the county evening paper. The family were invariably at supper, and he entered the kitchen door with only a perfunctory knock, not waiting for an answer. Susie always rose to meet him and took the paper from him close to the door, so that her back was to her uncle, and they didn't see the greeting in her eyes. They thought Dan a good, kind, steady boy, who was thoughtful for them all. When the motorcycle came back of an evening and Dan and Susie went walking up the pasture to see the late sunset, or when he drove back with his father's buggy and took her occasionally to the village to a dance, it seemed natural enough, too. Dan and she had been playmates since they were children.

The revelation came to Ben one day in the late autumn. It happened because of Ben's fondness for kittens, a fondness he shared with Susie. He was out in the barn one Sunday afternoon and saw the face of the black and white cat peering at him from the mow. Thinking she might have a new family concealed up there, he climbed the ladder and worked his way back under the eaves. Sure enough, there were four kittens sprawling about in a warm nest of hay. Ben put out his large, toll knotted hand and gathered one of the fuzzy little bodies into it, and a smile appeared under his drooping gray mustache as he stroked its head with the forefinger of his other hand. He was about to crawl back with it to the ladder and take it in to show to Susie when he suddenly heard Susie's voice below and the heavier voice of Dan. The man in the loft stopped in his tracks, for something they were saying startled his attention. His fingers closed instinctively around the kitten, which uttered a plaintive mew, so that he as suddenly put it down penitently.

Susie's voice was soothing. "It will be different as soon as we are married, dear," she said. "When?" Dan answered, with a savage impatience. "If I only had $500—just a measly $500—I could make it. That would take care of the old man's interest on the mortgage for a whole year and buy us enough furniture and stuff to start housekeeping. But I ain't got $500, and it seems as if I never would have, not till the mortgage is paid off, anyhow. I guess you think maybe I ought to save for us, instead of helping the old man so much—"

But I ain't got $500, and it seems as if I never would have, not till the mortgage is paid off, anyhow. I guess you think maybe I ought to save for us, instead of helping the old man so much—"

"Why, Dan! Of course I don't. How can you say such things?"

"Well, a feller don't rightly know what to do to raise money so badly needed, and pa's too old to learn anything but farming now, and help's so high he's got to have a tractor to get by at all, and ma's worried all the time, and it makes me most cry to see her work so hard. And yet all the time there's you and me. Gosh, Sue, if you want me half as bad as I want you—"

He blushed in inarticulate passion, and Ben, in the loft above, knew that the silence meant he had taken Susie into his arms.

A moment later he heard Susie answer him softly, wistfully.

"O, Dan, if I only had $500, you know I'd give it to you, don't you?"

right on being their housekeeper, and you live here, or me go live at your house. I—I just couldn't do that, Dan. I got to have a little place of my own, and just you! I got to! I can't rightly remember ever having anything of my very own."

Again Ben knew she was in tears. He heard Dan murmuring comfort, and then their retreating footsteps. Very cautiously he crept to the edge of the mow and peeped over. They were walking through the paddock toward the lane to the swamp woods, Dan's arm about her. Ben forgot the kittens, and sat very still in the hay, thinking.

From days far off and forgotten, memories came back to him. "They've never been in love," Susie had said, and so her uncles could not understand why she wanted a home of her own. How long ago it was that Ben had walked, scarce two miles from this spot, with a girl through the October dusk and asked her to come to this house as his wife. That was when his father and mother were both alive, and Susie's mother but just gone away. And the girl had put his arm, from about her waist and told him she was willing to be his housekeeper, but not housekeeper for his family. When she married she wanted a home of her own. A girl of more spirit than Susie—too much spirit. He had always told himself he was lucky to be rid of her. But here was Susie saying the same thing, and Dan seemed to understand it, accept it. Ben knit his brows with the perplexity of this unaccustomed introspection. Was he so different from other men? Had he ever loved Alice as Dan loved Susie? He tried to recall those ancient sensations of passion, but they were too nebulous.

He felt suddenly old, and climbed slow-experience," was Abel's reply.

But the irony was lost on the brother, who had resumed his seat on the haircloth sofa and was staring at his slippers.

Christmas! he thought. Once Alice had given him a knit tippet for Christmas. The touch of Susie's wool had suddenly opened a door of memory, and he could feel exactly the sensation of that tippet around his neck—yes, he could remember the thrill it had given him because it was from her. He remembered now that he had kissed it. This seemed incredible, but it was so. He had loved her. He had known what love is. It wasn't true that he couldn't feel, couldn't understand. Yet here he was, almost an old man, who had never felt a woman's love again since those far off years, nor—nor— Ben hesitated at the conclusion of his thoughts. Yet, it was true, he had to confess it; nor had he loved anybody since—not really. Abel, of course, in a kind of way; he was terribly used to Abel, was how he put it to himself. But not even Susie, really. Why, if he'd loved her, wouldn't she have told him about Dan, come to him for help, advice? He was just terribly used to her, too. He was just terribly used to everything. At this conclusion Ben got up wearily to go to bed.

On his way he tapped at Susie's door. "Abel's goin' to look up," he said. "Good night, Susie."

Something in his tone brought the girl to her door. He saw she had been knitting, in her chilly, unheated room, with a wrap about her. He felt of her fingers, and they were cold.

"You go down by the stove, or go to bed," he said, still holding her hand in an awkward impulse of affection.

"I—I dunno what was the matter with me," Susie answered. "Just suddenly crying over nothing. Maybe because Christmas is coming, and I wish I could do more to help poor Dan."

"Yes, I guess that's it," said her uncle. "Well, don't you cry no more. Dan'll come out all right. Good-night, girl."

"Good-night, Uncle Ben."

He looked at her as she stood in the doorway, framed against the glow from her oil lamp within, and he suddenly realized how much she looked like his dead sister at the time she went away to be married. His eyes must have been tender, for suddenly Susie put up her hands to his face, pulled it down, and kissed him. He walked softly to his own room, filled with a strange sense of warmth.

Two days later, as he and Abel were at work in the shop, he abruptly put down his plane, and announced, "Susie and Dan want to get married."

Abel carefully stood his saw against the horse and sat down on the board he had been at work upon, while the news sank in.

"You guessin'?" he finally asked.

"No, I ain't guessin'. Some spell back I was up in the mow after them black and white kittens, and Susie and Dan come into the barn, talkin' and I couldn't rightly show myself without makin' 'em feel uncomfortable, and tha's how I know."

Abel deliberated some time on this before he demanded, "Well, when they goin' to do it?"

"That's what's trouble 'em; they don't rightly know, 'cause Dan's got to have five hundred dollars first, to carry the mortgage for a full year ahead and buy furniture and stuff for their house."

Abel sighed in evident relief. "That's all right, then," he said. "It'll be some time before Dan saves five hundred dollars, I guess."

"I ain't so sure it's all right," Ben replied. "What do you mean? He ain't got it, has he?"

"No, course he ain't. I mean it ain't all right he ain't got it. You're thinkin' of how we'll keep Susie with us a spell longer. I'm thinkin' if Susie wants to get married and have a home of her own she ought to have it. I'm thinkin' maybe we ought to help 'em."

Abel looked at his brother a long moment, as if doubting what he had heard.

"You're thinkin' we ought to help Jim Thomas pay the mortgage on his farm, and his son Dan buy furniture and stuff for a house to put Susie in, when he's takin' her away from us, and maybe makin' us hire a housekeeper again?"

"That's just what I'm thinkin', if you want to put it that way," Ben answered defiantly. "I'm thinkin' we ought to do it this coming week, Christmas, too."

"Well, we ain't a-goin' to," Abel replied, his thin lips shutting tight. "Payin' off another man's mortgage is pumb crazy nonsense. 'Sides, if Dan and she want to get married, why can't they get married? We got room enough here, an' to spare. You tell her that."

"I won't tell her no such thing," Ben retorted. "I see how she felt about it—about not havin' her own house, I mean. I—I know somethin' about how women feel that way; maybe you don't know. Least-ways, Susie's a good girl, and our own flesh and blood, and she's entitled to keep house for her man when she gets him."

"Well, then, it's up to Dan," Abel answered, picking up his saw again.

"Hold on a minute," Ben said. "I ain't done. You 'n' me 've been more than brothers for many years. We own this shop and this place together, havin' bought out sister Jane's share fair enough when her husband died, so's she could pay off his debts. We ain't never quarreled, and we ain't goin' to now—least-ways, I ain't. But I got a right to make a damn fool of myself still, so long's I don't hurt you none. Now, we got some money in the bank, to our joint account, an' you know we got an agreement, drawn up by Lawyer Evans, sayin' each can have his half share when he wants it. We didn't think neither of us would ever want it; but there's the agreement, and I guess it's good. I want my share transferred over to my own account, and I want it before Christmas."

"I ain't goin' to let you pay Jim Thomas' mortgage!" Abel retorted grimly.

"And I ain't goin' to," Ben replied. "I'm a-goin' to give Susie a weddin' gift, and what she does with it ain't my business, nor yours—it's her'n."

"S if you didn't know what she'd do with it, if it means her gettin' married! I ain't goin' to have Susie payin' Jim Thomas' debts for him. Let him save and pay his own! Look at him, now, talkin' about spendin' seven hundred and fifty dollars for a tractor!"

"You're goin' to give me my half share," Ben answered. "That's all I got to say. Only I ask you to try to remember Susie's your own sister's child, and powerful like her. Remember how Jane used to—"

"I guess I know she's my sister's child. Ain't we made a good home for her all these years?"

"Maybe we have—I dunno. Then again, maybe we haven't. She's a girl, and we're a couple of cranky old men, Abel."

"Speak for yourself," Abel retorted.

"That's just what I been a-doin', said Ben. "I guess it's about the first time I ever did."

The two brothers faced each other a long moment, while the elder, more puzzled, almost, than angry, read the determination on the younger's face. Finally he picked up his saw.

"I'll 'tend to that bank book tomorrow," he said. "We can go over to Lawyer Evans, and he'll swear us. Better get busy on this bureau. We promised it last month, and Mrs. Short's gettin' peeved."

There was complete silence in the shop, save for the noise of plane and saw.

The next day Ben had not forgotten his purpose, but Abel made no preparation to go to town.

"Be'n't you comin' over to Lawyer Evans'?" Ben asked him.

"Looks like snow," Abel said. "Tomorrow'll do. Besides, we got that bureau to give another 'lin'."

Through the crusts of years, a light broke on Ben.

"We might 'a' had twice as much money in the bank if we hadn't always been puttin' things off," he said. "You go get your good clothes on, and I'll hitch up."

"Tomorrow'll do," Abel reiterated.

"No, it won't. You agreed you'd go to-day. A promise is a promise."

"But the bureau—" Abel was almost plaintive now.

"I'll lie the bureau myself, this evenin'," snapped Ben. "You come on."

When they returned from town, Abel looked troubled and glum. Ben was smiling. He went at once to his room, and Susie, in hers, heard him poking around in the old chest in his closet. She wondered vaguely if he had been buying and was now concealing Christmas presents. Something had come over him, surely.

Dan didn't come with the paper Christmas eve, because he had to work late in the store that night. It was snowing hard, too, so that he would have to walk home. Susie took his sweater down to his mother before dark, and Ben remarked she'd better send it in to him right then—he'd need it. Uncle Ben had shown great interest in every stage of the sweater's growth, and had even been used as a model to see if it was long enough. After supper that night he sat back on the haircloth sofa, watching Susie clear the table, and puffing slowly at his pipe.

"Well," he finally said, "we goin' to hang up our stockings tonight? You still believe in Santa Claus, Abel?"

Abel grunted, contemptuously.

"O, let's!" Susie cried. "We ain't hung up our stockings for a long time, not since I was a little girl."

"How's Santa Claus goin' to get down a stovepipe?" Ben chuckled, looking at the boarded up fireplace, with a hideously ornamented oak burner stood under the mantel.

"I guess he can manage," Susie laughed. "Let's try, anyhow."

"What you expectin', Abel?" Ben asked.

Abel grunted again, and retreated into yesterday's paper.

But Susie got one of his socks from her darning bag and pinned it up with the others on the mantel behind the stove. She was sure now Uncle Ben had brought presents when he went to town, and she flushed from the strange happiness that had come into her life with this change in him.

It was Susie who insisted on looking up that night. Abel banked the kitchen fire and filled the wood box, and put off going to bed as long as he could, but Susie still sat by the lamp, and at last he went off upstairs. Ben, about to follow him, took a last look at the stockings.

"I s'pose Dan ain't been by yet?" he hazarded innocently.

"I—I ain't heard him whistle," Susie answered, her face averted.

"Hard footin' tonight," said Ben, peering out into the white darkness. "Well, 'night, Susie. Don't scare Santa away."

"Good-night, Uncle Ben," she answered.

Ben went up to his room, unlocked his wooden chest, and took out of it a necktie for Abel, a gray red one, wrapped in fancy tissue paper. He gave a silent chuckle, and then extracted an old leather wallet con-

Ben, in the left above, knew that the silence meant he had taken Susie into his arms.

Fashion or Health? Women Facing Hard Problem

By JANE DIXON.

The question of clothes is really becoming a serious matter. Or perhaps it is better to say the matter of NO clothes is really becoming serious.

Whichever way you put it—the issue remains the same—is it better to pay the merchant a couple of hundreds for a few extra yards of material and keep in health, or to pay the physician a couple of hundreds for a few extra treatments and keep in fashion?

"One must make one's choice," as they would say in dear old Mayfair. There are any number of women who are frank to confess they "would rather be dead than out of fashion."

Well, it looks now as if they are going to be dead anyhow.

The woman is not extant whose physique can withstand the rigors of the North American climate with nothing between her and a snow-storm but a wisp of material and a dab or two of trimming.

Other Serious Problems.

There are other phases than climate to the furor which now seems to be sweeping the country in the wake of the Eve revival.

There is a question, for instance, of decency or indecency, modesty or immodesty, underdressing or no underdressing. Both sides, it seems, have their adherents.

Says Pope Benedict in a manifesto issued from the Vatican:

"The Catholic woman, besides feeling it her duty to be virtuous, must feel it her duty to appear such in the fashion of her clothes, repudiating those exaggerations of fashion which show the corruption of those who designed them and bringing an evil contribution to the general corruption of manner—fashions contrary to that modesty which should be the fairest ornament of Catholic women."

I was walking through the corridor in one of our smart hotels where tea is the favorite afternoon diversion of the flitting, frittering crowds. It was rather late, and I was wondering whether I would get my copy to the desk on time when—

Directly in my path there loomed the latest Paris edition of the fashion exhibit. At first glance it struck me I was facing an animated cartoon. Then the truth dawned. Here was a living exemplar of those parlor promises which have been eased our way by cagey Parisian designers who will do something different regardless of the deadly "flu" germ or the high cost of medicine.

Swathed in Satin.

The lady from the Rue de la Paix was swathed in black satin.

There was not very much to the satin. In fact, there was nothing to it below the knees—nothing except a row of fringe that flopped dully along silk-sheathed limbs like the water-soaked grass wardrobe of a native Hawaiian hula dancer.

Also the lady wore satin sleeves. There was a tissue trifle that began at the armpits and stopped abruptly half way to the elbow as if ashamed of even this small concession to the conventions.

Here ended the chapter, so far as the frock is concerned.

A word more of silk-sheathed limbs. The sheathing was of an extraordinary web known in the parlance of the trade as "fishnet." This term is self-explanatory. At a distance of 10 feet it would take a trained observer to distinguish anything but the holes in the net.

With this "striking outfit," which might more truthfully be called a "comedy makeup," went a pair of those funny little snub-nosed slippers we once introduced in Paris and of which the Parisienne has never been able to cure herself. You know the kind I mean—with the ends describing a half circle, the vamp biting the tops of the toes and the six-inch heels giving the wearer the continued appearance of a toe-dancer who had outlived her art.

The Queerest Part of It.

Here is the peculiar twist to the tale of the knee-length skirt.

FROM THE PARISIAN FASHION FROLIC

There were women, sensible enough citizens, who looked as if they might have kind, loving husbands and good, clean homes, actually gazing with envy upon the cartoon-like creature, who might have borne a respectable name herself, but whom the man with me immediately christened Minnie Fewclothes.

It did not take us the length of the corridor to discover the fringed freak had been adapted for and by the American trade.

We strolled up behind one short-skirted gazelle, who, from the length of her gown, should have been graduating from grammar school. As we brushed by she turned her head our way. The dear girl was not a day over forty.

"You sure must have a front view before you pick them these days," murmured the man, shaking his head negatively and sneaking a glance back over his shoulder at the caricature of youth.

I saw Miss Lillian Lorraine, well-known actress and eager exponent of startling styles, what she thought of the Eve revival.

"Nature Is Beautiful," "Well," declared the daring Lillian, wriggling herself into the minus-quantity gown she is wearing with so much sartorial success. "Well, why not? When will people stop being so squeamish about the human body? It's beautiful, isn't it? Is it something to be ashamed of, to blush over, this beauty of nature and the body?"

"Personally, I believe in wearing just as few clothes as are consistent with health. Why hamper our movements? I suppose there are still a few antediluvians who think they have to sleep with the windows closed and their heads under the blankets to keep from catching cold.

"If you own a beautiful painting you do not hang it up on the wall and then cover it with canvas so no one can see it, do you? If you possess a beautiful back I see no reason for concealing it beneath a layer of red flannel, or of blue serge, or even of pale pink chiffon. I thought we had gone beyond the place where men and women muddled up their minds with sex to the exclusion of art—of the natural and the beautiful.

"But why bother with these evil-minded fossils? They'd find something wrong with the 'Madonna' if you'd let them rave long enough. Certainly I'll wear short skirts if I find them becoming, and I don't think it is any one's business whether I can draw both of my stockings through my plunkie ring at once or not."

Miss Lorraine can afford to be defiant. She has the sort of a back that would convert the most solemn visaged of carpers. She has even lengthened her waist line this season to conform to the downward trend in decollete fashions.

Which recalls an incident related to me by Charles Kurzman, one of our most distinguished metropolitan authorities on fashions, upon the occasion of his recent return from the style marts of Europe.

"The evening gowns at Deauville," confided Mr. Kurzman, "were really shocking. In all my experience as an observer of style, I have never seen such utter disregard of conventions. One evening, during the supper dance at a hotel where were gathered the smartest dressed women in Europe, a man I knew came to where I was sitting and dropped into a chair. He was beet-red. Drops of perspiration stood out on his forehead.

"I've just had a most awkward experience," he confided. "I danced with Madam X (naming a woman famous for the originality and daring of her gowns), and I could not find a place to put my hand that was not bare-back. I had to use my 'kerchief.'"

"My friend seemed to think my explosion of laughter over his predicament very ill-chosen.

Court Plaster on Hip.

"I believe one favorite of the French music halls, a chanteuse idolized by the butterfly swarms of Paris, gained considerable renown, not to mention applause, by wearing a court plaster on her left hip in full view of elite audiences. Her gown was cut in a V, which slanted across the breast and back and ended somewhat below the waistline on the left side.

"I remarked at the time the hip crescent might get by in Paris, but it would never do in New York, at least not for general usage. Neither do I believe extremely short skirts at Paris knows them, nor anything ultra in the way of abbreviated clothing, will find favor with our American women. A few may fall—but not the right few."

In a certain conservative gathering where the prevailing cotease shortage was up for discussion the opinion was voiced that "this sort of thing is all right for the tired business man and the first row aisle seats, and there's an end of it."

Yet only the day before I had been talking with the manager of the Broadway theatre about the far-famed "Sitting Girls," who disported themselves in unadorned loveliness on the stage of the theatre between films.

The Broadway, please note, is a moving picture playhouse.

A "Family" Affair.

Movies, we have been taught to believe, are a strictly family affair, they are the medium whereby mother and father and the children while away a dull domestic evening after a heavy home dinner.

"We broke all records during the engagement of the 'Sitting Girls,'" declared the manager. "Our box office proved the public likes a touch of real contour and color with its pictures. That is why we have organized the 'Parisian Fashion Frolic,' low current. Gowns, and the girls who can wear them, such is the idea of the Frolic. There isn't a scene in all filmdom more interesting than a beautiful gown worn by a beautiful girl."

"A man might like a plate of savory bean soup, but a dash of cayenne pepper would not ruin his taste for it. Rather it would improve the flavor."

"By the same token the Broadway believes a dash of the Frolic adds to an audience's enjoyment of the films."

Et tu—cinema.

Then, how about the opera? For, deny it as we will, the stage, whether of the spoken, sung or pantomime art, reflects the tenor of the times in every phase of contemporaneous life.

SOME TRICKS OF ENTERTAINING

By ARTHUR MURRAY

The problem of entertaining your guests is not unlike that of the stage manager who must see that the audience out front is amused. The stage manager has his setting, his actors, his plot and his bag of tricks. The hostess has as her setting her home, as her actors her guests and as her plot the scheme of the party, whether a birthday celebration, a bridge party, a Halloween masquerade or a New Year's dance.

The fact that her guests may be actors as well as audience makes it all the more complicated and interesting. But what of her bag of tricks? There lies the success of her party as well as the chief pleasure of the entertainer. For guests expect to be amused and a clever hostess likes to play stage director. It's really a great game, ringing up the curtain and catching little ripples of delight as your opening scene scores a hit. But what a lot of careful planning has gone into that simple first scene, to say nothing of the entertainment that follows!

Crowd Your Guests.

Did you ever attend a dance when there was but a handful of guests in a very spacious ballroom? If so, you probably said: "Let's go home, there's nobody here."

But how about the dance where you had to push your way in with a shoe-horn? Did you stay? The chances are that you not only remained, but danced every dance. Although you were knocked about on the crowded ballroom and your pet corns were trodden upon, you went home saying: "There was an awful mob, but I had a good time."

At the theater the show seems poor if the house is empty. It is indeed difficult to enjoy even the best of plays when the theater is bare and there are many vacant seats. On the other hand, a set of ham actors do not seem half bad if the house is full to overflowing. There is a small theater in New York that has never housed a failure. The seats are very compactly arranged, and it always seems crowded.

It is a psychological fact that people in crowds will not think for themselves, but will do as the crowd does. The strong-willed person, the one who always thinks for himself, may have control over his mind when he is alone, but the moment he joins a crowd he loses his identity and the leader of the crowd thinks for him.

The host or hostess has more influence over the guests if they are in one great mass than if they are scattered over a large territory. There are many interesting reasons why an entertainment is a greater success if there are many people present, whereas it is apt to be a failure if the crowd is conspicuous for its absence. But to explain these reasons would require a long discourse on the psychology of crowds and their effect on the human mind.

Suffice it to say, crowd your guests to the point where they almost jostle one another and they will declare that you are a wonderful host or hostess. Many an otherwise good party has been a rank failure for the reason that the room or setting was too large for the number of guests. People may complain of being crowded, but unconsciously they enjoy it. You often hear someone say: "It was a good dance, but it was awfully crowded." Nevertheless, the fact remains that it was a good dance.

When the guests arrive have them congregate in a small room or lobby, where they will be in close contact with one another. And be sure that your crowd fills the ballroom.

The Plot, Sir, the Plot.

As the spirit of sociability demands a crowd, so the alert and interested company likes something doing, the sense of action, every minute. It is the old business of the stage director. You must not let the plot drag. And the hostess must keep her actors going without ever having rehearsed their parts. They must forget themselves in the apparently impromptu fun. And the stage manager can never call anybody down for having failed in his part. Tactfully, graciously, without showing her hand, the successful hostess manipulates her guests. But she is able to do this because of careful forethought.

Arrange a number of devices to use in stimulating fun. Some of them may not be required. Watch your crowd and notice when a new trick is needed. And don't be afraid of innocent nonsense, especially when you have worked up the play spirit successfully. Everybody likes to play the clown on occasion. Balloons, confetti, serpentine, rubber balls with rubber strings attached and similar simple stage properties help. Fancy or novelty whistles are good, but should not be too loud.

Everybody doing the same thing! Everybody dancing or singing or playing pranks. This is the very spirit of the carnival, the wholesome, light-hearted reaction, the diversion which everyone needs from sterner, sadder things.

With the aid of music you may control the gaiety of your guests.

Always begin the dance with a lively one-step and have very short intermissions in the beginning to work up to a high pitch of animation. Upon the music depends the dancing. If the musicians are too hilarious the dancing is apt to be unrefined. Avoid this by careful supervision of the music.

A Paul Jones is a good device for overcoming timidity. It also mixes the crowd. One should always have assistants to look after young or timid guests. True hospitality demands that no one be slighted, and the popular host or hostess is proud of the ability to mix even the most alien personalities.

Have a Colorful Setting.

The general character of your party will, of course, guide you in your scheme of decoration. But remember the psychological effect of colors. Bright shades, especially reds and yellows, create buoyancy and good fellowship. Silver and green or soft bright blues and purples reflect an atmosphere of cool, illusive charm.

The skillful dramatic producer looks carefully after such important details as lighting and colors. In giving a party you may play the magician in like fashion and watch your audience respond to the subtle suggestion of your color scheme.

Decoration should not be too obtrusive. Its effect will be felt most surely if it seems merely a harmonious background for the occasion. But the possibilities of colorful settings fairly bewilder the imagination. They may be simple or elaborate as desired, but they should emphasize the character of the entertainment or the season.

Halloween spookiness, Christmas cheer or the quaint romance of Saint Valentine's Eve may be cleverly suggested by your setting. Or you may evolve a veritable glimpse of fairyland for the debut of some dainty debutante. Flowers, draperies, tinsel and all the colors of the rainbow are "props" for your mimic stage. Some of the most pleasing effects are the least expensive. An imitation pool, for instance, can be made of moss-colored canvas, trailing vines and plants and layers of shimmering tulle. With proper lighting the illusion is most perfect. And who wouldn't enjoy a sparkling, moonlit pool in the corner of a palm-shaded conservatory?

Such a device was used in the middle of a great ballroom by a New York hostess who was giving a brief fairy pageant. It even had a gay young mulberry tree growing beside it. The tree was made of dyed scrim and paper flowers, and the whole moonlight scene was easily removed after the play to make room for the dancing.

Serve refreshments which carry out the color scheme or suit the mood you have created with music and setting. Moods in refreshments? Certainly. Aren't there times when you enjoy ice-cream cones and other times when you prefer sandwiches and tea under a gay Japanese parasol? Don't Christmas simply cry out for bonbons and Valentine dances demand heart-shaped ices? In less obvious ways whatever is served may intensify the keynote of the entertainment.

Never allow your party to peter out. Be sure to plan for the climax and end the party before the guests are tired. Last impressions linger, and you cannot afford to let your guests go home after a tedious interval when the interest lagged. A contest of some sort may bring the evening to an effective close. Or a surprise feature may be held in reserve for the final appeal. But whatever your scheme, it should include this ultimate trick of the falling curtain just when the audience feels that the play is over.

A PROCRASTINATED CHRISTMAS

By Walter Prichard Eaton

taining ten $50 bills. Vaguely Ben felt he ought to have some paper and a ribbon to wrap the money up in. He could get the paper all right, but where was there a ribbon, except in Susie's room? Ben, however, was nothing if not inventive. He took from his bureau drawer a necktie—not an old one, but his second best, no less—stretched it on the floor, and with his knife carefully slit out a strip of silk half an inch wide. Then he started downstairs for paper. But even as he opened his door he heard a whistle outside, and the sound of Susie's steps below. Tiptoeing to the head of the stairs, he felt a breath of cold air from the open door, and heard whispers. The door was closed, but the whispers continued inside.

"O, Dan! You are all over snow! Ain't it froze?"

"Not now!"

"But you mustn't stay—uncles are abed. No—no—please!"

"Just one—I got to. Sue. It's Christmas eve."

Silence, and then a whispered good-night, the gust of air once more, and the sound of the bolt shot. Ben tiptoed back into his room, and waited. He heard Susie come upstairs immediately, and then go down again. At length she came up and shut her door for the night. Ben took his lamp and stole down to find a piece of paper. Returning with it, he wrapped the bills and tied them with the piece of silk. At least, the bundle was gay! Then he wrote with a pencil, "For Susie. Merry Christmas from Uncle Ben," and took his two parcels down.

Both his sock and Abel's were already bulging, and he felt of the bulges cautiously, like a boy. Then he stuffed his two packages in their proper places and stole upstairs to bed.

Ben was the first awake. He went down, and started up the fire in the range and in the sitting room stove. Outside the blown snow was banked against the windows, and the rooms, without the morning sun yet risen, were filled with a curious white dimness. Ben threw in wood prodigally, and the stoves were roaring when Susie appeared.

"Merry Christmas!" he shouted. "I said it first!"

Then he gestured toward the stuffed stockings. "Santa's scrooged through all right," he said.

"So he did!" laughed the girl. "Soon's Uncle Abel comes we'll see what he brought!" The bacon was crisping, and there was the smell of coffee before Abel appeared.

"Now we can see what Santa's brought us," cried Ben. "Merry Christmas, Abel."

Abel grunted. He knew too well what Santa had brought. "Ain't no need till we've had some food," he said.

"O, no, you look right off, first thing," said

Ben. "That's a-lays the way."

Susie, however, turned to the stove to hide her disappointment. "No—let's have our breakfast first," she said.

"O, all right. Maybe Abel will feel more chipper then."

They sat down and ate in a constrained silence, each busy with private thoughts, and the face of Abel glum and brooding. Susie, with a sudden stubbornness of her own, now insisted on doing the dishes before the stockings were taken down. The sun was up, and the snow beginning to drop away from the window panes, letting in the warm golden light, before she and Ben went to the mantel and took the stockings down. Each retired to a corner, and drew out the contents.

"He'll!" cried Ben, holding up a warm knit waistcoat. "Guess Santa's brought me something pretty nice!"

Abel was looking at his carefully knitted sock and socks and at the necktie from Ben.

"Humph!" he said. "Think you're going to make a dude of me, eh?"

And then both men were aware of the sob from the corner where Susie sat, and turned toward her. There was no use—she couldn't choke back the tears.

"Now—Susie—" Ben began, but before he could say more she was beside him against him, her face buried in his breast—and his arms about her. Abel stood looking on, dumb, shuffling his feet a little.

Neither did Ben say anything, but only patted her shoulder clumsily till she raised her tear-stained face, on which a smile was breaking, and half whispered, "Did you know?"

Poor Ben was so close to tears himself at the sight of the radiance of her smile that he could only nod his head.

The girl sank her head against his shoulder again.

"I'm so ashamed," she said, "that you had to find it out without me telling you. I ought to have told you. But I—I—"

"You didn't want to make no fuss till you was sure—I know," Ben nodded sagely.

"Sort of," she said. "I didn't want you—both—to have any of my troubles on your mind. And now—you found out! How did you find out?"

"Little bird," said Ben.

"No? How?" Still in his arms, she was pulling like a petted child at a button on his coat, her face upturned.

"Remember one Sunday you came into the barn?"

Susie straightened up. "You heard? Me and Dan—that day? You know everything—about the mortgage, and all?" she cried.

Ben nodded.

"And you're just as good as giving this to Dan, so we can get married?"

"I'm giving it to you. If that's the same thing."

"O, you dear, darling old Santa Claus!" she cried, throwing her arms around his neck and kissing him.

Then suddenly she remembered Abel. "O, dear Uncle Abel!" she exclaimed penitently, "here I'm just thanking Uncle Ben, 'cause his name was on the package, and it's your present, too, 'cause the money, I know, belonged to both of you."

More slowly she moved toward Abel, as if to kiss him.

He stood rigid and motioned her away. "No, it ain't, it's Ben's money," he said, very slowly. "I ain't claimin' no thanks I don't deserve. We divided up last week. I—I'm much obliged for them nice socks."

Then he sat down heavily in a chair.

Susie stood between the two men, in wonder and perplexity. "I—I don't understand—" she began, when the door suddenly opened with a bang, and then burst open, letting in a rush of snow, and Dan.

"Merry Christmas!" he shouted, stamping his feet. "Gee, Sue, that's a swell sweater. And here, Santa Claus has sent some stuff by me." He handed each of them a package—tobacco for the men, a cheap fur neck-piece for Susie, who opened it with trembling fingers and held it up with a little cry of pleasure, and then put it as a frame below her happy face, which, Ben saw, had never looked so pretty before.

"Thank you, Dan," she said, coming close to him.

"Abel," said Ben, "it's time you've got them cows milked and the paths shoveled."

Abel rose slowly from his chair. He spoke with obvious effort, almost as if the words were wrenched from him.

"Just a minute," he said. "Strikes me I ain't givin' nothin'. I kinder put off gettin' anybody presents too long, I guess. I—I got a present I want to give to Dan."

There was a pause, and everybody regarded him with astonishment in the silence.

"I ain't got it handy, by me," he went on, even more slowly. "But I guess my word's good. I want to give Dan—five hundred dollars."

Susie uttered a smothered cry. Dan was startled to silence. Ben sat down so abruptly on the sofa that a tack flew out of the webbing under the springs. "Well, I'm dazed!" he said.

The girl was the first to recover, and rushed to her uncle, to kiss him. Then Dan grasped him by the hand. He put an arm clumsily around Susie, and mumbled, "There, there, that's all right." And then he wheeled on Ben, with a "Well, how about them cows?"

The two men went from the room, as Dan and Susie, their eyes full of joy and wonder, slipped into each other's arms.

In silence the two figures bent to the drifts, and cleared a way to the barn. Once inside, Ben shook down the food for the cattle and the horse, and came over where Abel was already seated, milking Jersey Bess.

"Do you mind tellin' me what made you act like a darn fool, too?" he demanded.

The ring of the milk in the pail ceased. "I seen her kissin' you," Abel answered slowly, thoughtfully. "Yes, that was it; I seen her kissin' you."

"Well, she's kissed you now, too. I suppose some day we can go over to Lawyer Evans and have them accounts merged again. I don't feel quite easy with so much all my own, I might get reckless."

"No hurry," said Abel. "We got to get them three chairs mended for old Mrs. Shook."

"That's right," said Ben, as the alternate streams began to sing on his pall bottom, too. "Well, some day we'll fix it up."
